Rising Revolt On Peace Bid Shakes Laval, Baldwin Rule

Indignation at London Over Terms Threatens Government.

Minister to Submit His Policy to House

French Premier to Face Enemies in Chamber Tomorrow.

Copyright, 1935, by the United Press.

London, Dec. 16.—Mounting revolt against the Franco-British scheme to pacify Italy with half of Ethiopia shook two governments tonight.

Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin of Britain struggled to bridge a widening gap in his cabinet as the government faced the most critical threat to European peace since the World War. Although the Baldwin cabinet has a majority of 250 in the House of Commons, the protest against a peace which allegedly compromises the League of Nations cuts across all party lines.

Premier Pierre Laval prepared to defend his Italo-Ethiopian policy in the French Chamber of Deputies tomorrow. Bitter opposition from the left threatens to spread to the Radical Socialists, without whose collaboration the Laval coalition government must fall.

Diplomats believed there was only one answer Baldwin and Laval could make to the demand: "Why do you sponsor such a dangerous peace plan?" That is: "Unless the Italo-Ethiopian war is settled quickly on the best terms possible, desperate Italy will plunge us all into war."

League to Delay.

No one knows whether Baldwin or Laval feels this to be true or dares make the assertion. But the question must be settled this week. Laval faces his political enemies tomorrow morning. Baldwin submits his policy to a House of Commons trial Thursday.

The League Council, meanwhile, wants to await developments in London and Paris. The Council probably will meet Wednesday as scheduled, but will take up minor questions until Britain's future course is assured.

Crowded into the background is the important question of whether Premier Benito Musolini of Italy would accept or reject the proposals for Italo-Ethiopian peace which Premier Laval and British Foreign Secretary Sir Samuel Hoare launched in a week-end conference eight days ago. Il Duce's reply is expected Thursday, after Wednesday's meeting of the Fascist grand council.

Mussolini may "accept" the plan as excuse to begin bargaining, but with reservations against every vital feature. Emperor Haile Selassie of Ethiopia said at Dessye today that he would betray his people if he accepted the Hoare-Laval scheme.

Dalton Leads Attack.

Emphasis, therefore, has shifted from whether the belligerent nations will accept the terms as basis for negotiation to whether the sponsor nations will be able to stick by their representatives' brain child.

Diplomatic rumors included one that Baldwin will resign. This seems highly improbable, however, and it is believed he will plod ahead against the surging wave of opposition. It is reported on much better authority that Capt. R. Anthony Eden would quit the cabinet in disgust at "betrayal" of the League. Others reportedly would follow him.

In the absence of his chief, Sir Samuel Hoare, Eden bore the brunt of a sharp attack in the House of Commons today led by Dr. James Dalton, sardonic Laborite.

"Does the government still accept responsibility for these shameless proposals?" shouted Dalton to Eden.

Auto Fumes Kill Thelma Todd; Body Found in Car After Party

THELMA TODD. Associated Press Photo.

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, Dec. 6.—Comely Thelma Todd, blonde film actress who was found dead today in her automobile, died of monoxide fumes "that she breathed accidentally," a county autopsy surgeon announced tonight.

The 30-year-old comedienne, slumped behind the steering wheel of her open touring car, was discovered in her garage this morning by a maid, May Whitehead. She had been missing since she attended a Saturday night party.

Miss Whitehead told police one of the sliding doors of the garage was partially open.

Blood on Miss Todd's face probably resulted from wounds incurred when she crumpled in the car, her head striking the wheel, Dr. A. F. Wagner, county autopsy surgeon, said he believed.

"The autopsy showed monoxide poison to the extent of 70 per cent of total saturation in her blood," the surgeon reported. "There may have been other contributing causes, but that definitely was the major factor.

"The fumes were breathed accidentally. Either she went to sleep with the motor running or was overcome before she could help herself."

Miss Todd was guest of honor at a dinner party Saturday night given by Stanley Lupino, well-known English comedian. More than 20 persons attended.

Ida Lupino, the comedian's daughter, recalled that Miss Todd

Milne Kidnap Contact Made, Paper Asserts

Rich Grandfather Gets $50,000 Demand, Says Story.

Bloodstained Clipping Is Attached to Note; U. S. in Hunt.

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, Dec. 16.—The Record tonight said it had learned from a "reliable source" that relatives of the missing Caleb Milne 4th "have contacted his kidnapers."

The paper said the young man's grandfather, Caleb Milne, jr., wealthy retired Philadelphia textile manufacturer, received a written demand for ransom at his home today.

"The amount asked was reported to be $50,000," the paper stated.

"As proof that the writers of the ransom note were holding Milne, they inclosed his watch in a small package which contained the ransom note," the Record said.

"The package also contained a bloodstained clipping from the Knickerbocker Press, Albany, although what meaning this had was not immediatley apparent."

Secrecy Maintained.

"The contact with the kidnapers was made soon after the letter was received. Where and how it was made was shrouded in secrecy by the G men who are investigating the case."

The paper said the grandfather received the demand for ransom in a package which was postmarked Grand Central Station, New York City, at 12:30 p. m. Saturday, a few hours after Milne disappeared. The letter, like the first note sent by the supposed kidnapers, was composed of words clipped from a newspaper and pasted to another sheet of paper.

The Record quoted the text of the second letter as follows:

"One more false move and your name will be finish. Do as letter says. If you fail you will find him dead.

"Send (the amount was not disclosed) in denominations of $10, $20 and $50. Take them to New York. Grandson waiting for orders."

Note Unsigned.

The Record said the letter bore no signature. The watch bore Caleb's name engraved in its case and was identified by a maid in the grandfather's home. The package had a return address giving the initials "H. L." an illegible house number and "Fifth Avenue, New York." It was addressed with a rubber stamp.

Federal agents declined to discuss the case and would neither affirm nor deny the newspaper's story. Milne's 74-year-old grandfather remained secluded at his home and friends of the family refused to discuss the developments.

R. George Harvey, of the Philadelphia office of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, commented openly that six of his agents are working on the case here.

Vanished Saturday.

New York, Dec. 16 (AP).—Caleb Jones Milne 4th, actor-scion of a wealthy Philadelphia family, was cast in the leading role tonight of what Department of Justice agents called a kidnap drama.

While New York City police listed the youth merely as a "missing person," Federal agents and the "Scotland Yard" division of the State police sought the author of a Christmas greeting ransom demand.

Young Milne disappeared at 10 a. m. Saturday from the modest Murray Hill apartment he shared with his brother, Frederic, leaving a note saying that a "Dr. Green, of Gracie Square," had telephoned to insist he accompany him to his grandfather's bedside in German-

Army to Buy 500 Combat Speed Planes

$20,000,000 Contracts Ready for Signature Within Fortnight.

New 'Fortresses' in Lot Aimed to Make Unit Fastest in World.

By Harris B. Hull.

War Department officials are ready to announce the purchase of a fleet of 500 high-speed, combat-type airplanes to bolster the flying wings of the General Headquarters Air Force.

Only the final signature of Assistant Secretary of War Woodring remains to be attached to the bunch of contracts totaling about $20,000,000.

This formality is expected to be completed within the next two weeks. Immediately thereafter, a half dozen factories will start production on the orders which will add hundreds of new flying fortress bombers, pursuit and attack airplanes to the Nation's air power.

Irked at the criticism of former Brig. Gen. William Mitchell that the "military service has not one single plane in service which is suitable to engage in war against a first-class power," and disturbed at the trend of international events abroad where airplanes are being turned out in large numbers, general staff and Air Corps officers have completed all preliminary details of the acquisition of the new fleet which one ranking officer has stated "represents the fastest fighting equipment in the world."

Reluctant to Comment.

Although officials have refused to divulge what types of planes will be bought it is known that secret flying competitions have been completed for new bombers, pursuit and attack planes. Orders for 71 training planes were let in July. Hence, it is not expected that any of these small non-combatant planes will be purchased at this time.

Army officials have been reluctant to comment on the Mitchell charges for fear of being drawn into a "useless controversy" with the former high ranking officer.

However, it was pointed out yesterday that the Army now has on hand pursuit planes with a top speed of 250 miles an hour and bombers and observation planes that can fly at a speed of 200. These performances are reported to be equal if not superior to anything developed by foreign powers," with the exception of certain racing planes which are impractical for combat."

The 500 new planes will bring the total strength of the Army's flying unit to 1,900 airplanes. At the pres-

Big Rocket Bursts At 100 Feet in Test

Aberdeen, Wash., Dec. 16 (AP).—Charles Bushnell's big experimental rocket exploded tonight after a 100-foot flight and rained back in pieces on a field near here.

The short-lived ascension of the 11-foot rocket, supposedly able to carry a human passenger, climaxed Bushnell's three-hour attempt to ignite the first of the projectile's 130 powder charges, designed to fire successively.

Bushnell had planned it for a 1,000-foot flight. He was crestfallen at the end of his $100 worth of powder and long months of work. He was undecided whether to build a new rocket.

Members of the Washington Experiment Association, which constructed the device, had said one of them might risk his life to go aloft in it if prediminary tests proved successful.

U. S. Tax Suit Tangles Hopson In New Mixup

$48,551,845 Asked of A. G. E.; Magnate Wanted Here for House Quiz.

Howard C. Hopson, who was cited for contempt of the Senate last summer but never brought to trial, was involved in official difficulties again last night.

In Federal Court in New York, the Associated Gas & Electric Co., which he is reputed to control, faced a Federal tax lien of $48,551,845.

In Washington, the House Lobby Committee was pondering what to do about his continued failure to tell the amount of his personal income from the same company.

James J. Hoey, collector of internal revenue in New York, said he would file an additional claim today of $2,000,000 against the company. He said notices of the tax claim, which covered a period from 1929 to 1933, inclusive, had been filed in the offices of the Associated in both New York and in Ithaca, N. Y.

"After checking over the company's tax report," Hoey was quoted in a New York dispatch, "the Government found the additional assessments were owed."

In Washington, Treasury officials declined to discuss the claim.

The rotund, ruddy, smiling utilities magnate, who with his associates ran a few thousand dollars up to many millilons in the holding company business, first came into prominence here as an opponent of the holding-company bill. He acquired his first experience as an employe of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Hopson's present difficulties with the House Committee are an out-

Relief Leaders, Roosevelt Talk Of Future Costs

Agency Heads and President Discuss Budget Item; Figures Listed.

By Felix Bruner.

President Roosevelt and the heads of Government relief divisions struggled in a two-hour conference yesterday with the problem of the future of Goverment relief activities. Their immediate task was consideration of the relief item in the forthcoming budget. Upon the size of this appropriation will depend how near the Administration will approach a balanced budget.

In the conference were Secretary Morgenthau, Daniel W. Bell, acting budget director; Secretary Ickes, Undersecretary Tugwell and Harry L. Hopkins, head of the Works Progress Adminstration. None of them would indicate what progress had been made or whether another conference would be held.

Treasury figures indicated that relief expenditures thus far had not been large in proportion to appropriations, indicating that a considerable sum might be carried over to the next fiscal year. Expenditures of some of the largest division of the relief setup, up to December 13, were as follows:

	Expenditures	Balance available
WPA	$135,438,559	$1,002,503,914
REA	235,000	8,741,552
Resettlemn't	17,967,000	203,648,722

Nurse Admits 'Mercy Killing;' To Be Arraigned for Murder

By the Associated Press.

Woonsocket, R. I., Dec. 16.—Deputy Chief of Police Jon E. Crowley said Miss Marie Simonne Sevigny, 26, a practical nurse, confessed tonight she killed a patient here. An investigation was launched into the deaths of three other former patients.

Crowley said the woman admitted after more than ten hours of questioning that she had administered a lethal dose of cleaning fluid to Mrs. J. Valmore Normandin, 47, wife of a State auditor, who died Wednesday.

He said the young woman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Sevigny, of Manchester, N. H., would be arraigned in District Court tomorrow on a charge of murder.

The officer said the other deaths to be investigated had occurred in families in this city and in East Douglas, Mass., where Miss Sevigny had been employed.

Miss Sevigny said she gave Mrs. Normandin the fluid to "calm her down," and when Crawley asked, "what do you mean—calm her down?" the woman replied, "take her out of her suffering," he said.

Crowley said he then asked her, "do you mean you gave her the ammonia to kille her?" He said she replied, "yes."

The nurse had been under questioning at headquarters for 24 hours in connection with the death of Mrs. Normandin, whose body was exhumed.

Radio Talk to Boost Benefit For Post's Toy and Doll Fund

Air Program Tomorrow Will Help 'Treasure Island' Showing Saturday; Theater Admission to Be a Plaything for Needy Children's Christmas.

The showing of "Treasure Island" Saturday morning at Loew's Fox Theater for the benefit of The Washington Post Toy and Doll Fund will get a big boost over the air tomorrow night at 10:30 o'clock from a "local boy who made good."

There will be a full half-hour of musical entertainment over radio station WRC by Duke Ellington and his orchestra, headlining this week's performance at the Fox. The program will tell Washingtonians about the Wallace Beery-Jackie Cooper picture.

The Fox Theater and The Post are co-operating in the showing of "Treasure Island" at 9 a. m. Saturday to swell the bag of toys to go to needy children on Christmas morning. Children's admission to the picture will be a new toy of a child's garment. Adults will be charged 25 cents, the proceeds to be used for purchase of toys.

Co-operating in making it possible to hear Duke Ellington's unusual music tomorrow night are the Duke himself and his artists, the Fox Theater, the Irving Mills Agency and the musicians' union of Washington. All believe that a boost for the fund will be a good deed.

Watch the columns of The Post for further news about this opportunity to assist Santa Claus, and tune in on WRC's "Timekeeper," Gordon Hittenmark, another helper, who is making many announcements about the show and the fund for toys and dollies.

The Post Toy Fund got within sight of $300 when the cashier's office closed yesterday, with $287.96 the total amount contributed to date. The goal is $500 for the fund by Saturday night.

This much is needed to fulfill all the commitments made by the fund managers, who know that the people of Washington will stand by its needy children in the matter of Christmas toys as usual.

It is urged that all persons planning to give to The Post Toy Fund do so now, without delay. The time is growing short for buying toys and preparing gift packages for in-

Two Governors Cheer for the Triple A

Two Governors Predict Revolt If AAA Stops

Iowa and Nebraska Chiefs Cite Improvement in Farm Incomes.

Governors of two prairie States—Iowa and Nebraska—last night predicted "revolt" in their States unless the Agriculture Adjustment Administration were continued in some form.

Gov. Clyde L. Herring, Iowa Democrat, was asked by a reporter what would happen if the Supreme Court declared the AAA program unconstitutional.

"Unless the program is continued in some form, he replied without hesitation, "there will be revolt in Iowa."

"What do you think of that, Gov. Cochran?" the reporter turned to Nebraska's Democratic chief, R. L. Cochran.

"That holds for Nebraska, too."

Seek Federal Funds.

Both governors had come to Washington, arm in arm, figuratively, to seek Federal approval of use of highway funds to build a new bridge between Council Bluffs, in Iowa, and Omaha, across the Missouri River, in Nebraska.

Both were seated at their ease in a sumptuous book-lined library. Both were smoking big brown cigars. Both looked very much alike—two well-built, medium-sized, gray-white-haired men of middle age. Both were wearing light-rimmed glasses.

Both expounded the same philosophy. Both held that increased purchasing power for agriculture constituted the essential for a national prosperity.

Provided by AAA.

Is the AAA program providing that increased purchasing power?

"It certainly is," said Gov. Cochran of Nebraska. "You go out on the streets of any big town in Nebraska and you'll find new cars wherever you go. Automobiles—that's the index you'll find outside the houses."

How about Iowa?

"It's the same with us," replied Gov. Herring. "People are buying more and things are getting better all around. Look at tax collections. Taxes in Iowa are bringing in 25 to 30 per cent more than they did a

Hoover Urges Relief Shake-up 'Clean Election'

St. Louis Speech Answers Roosevelt Atlanta Talk; Lashes New Deal.

Text of Hoover Address—Page 12.

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, Dec. 16.—Herbert Hoover answered President Roosevelt's recent speeches tonight with a sharp indictment of the New Deal and a proposal for a new Federal relief set-up which would "go far to assure a clean election."

The former President, "in the interest of good government," suggested a fourfold plan to decentralize relief control, cut Government allotments to States by more than half and "relieve human distress which suffers enough without the poison of politics in its bread."

He said "people on relief have suffered enough from having playboys take America apart to see how the wheels go round."

Addressing the John Marshall Republican Club of St. Louis, Hoover singled out for a torrent of sarcasm Roosevelt's Atlanta remark two weeks ago that "the mechanics of civilization came to a dead stop on March 3, 1933."

Charges "Error."

The Republican chieftain said the depression actually was turned back throughout the world in June and July, 1932, but that the New Deal caused this country to lag for two years while other nations progressed.

Roosevelt made a $2,500,000,000 "error," Hoover said in estimating the New Deal's public debt commitments, and took credit for $2,200,000,000 of recoverable assets loaned out by the Hoover regime. He predicted the public debt would rise to thirty-two or thirty-three billions by next July.

The former President blamed the 1933 bank panic on hysteria induced among bank depositors by the incoming administration, and called it "the most political and most unnecessary bank panic in all our history."

He called the New Deal unemployment relief organization "typical of the whole gamut of waste, folly, ineffectiveness, politics and destruction of self-government."

"The inevitable and driving pur-

Party Asks 'Jefferson' Forces to Aid Fight on New Deal.

Socialistic Regime And Waste Charged

Members of Committee Clash as Delegates Are Limited.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Selecting Cleveland for the Republican national convention to start June 9, the Republican National Committee yesterday called on "millions of constitutional Jeffersonian Democrats" to aid them drive the New Deal from Washington.

This call to Democrats dissatisfied with the Roosevelt Administration contained a veiled promise that co-operation in eliminating the New Deal would be remembered after the election.

At the same time the New Deal was indicted by the committee as "a socialistic state, honey-combed with waste and extravagance, and ruled by a dictatorship that mocks at the rights of the States and the liberty of the citizens," while the whim of one man is being substituted for the deliberations of Congress.

Fight Over Delegates.

This resolution was adopted after the committee engaged in a fight over apportionment of delegates for the June convention. The result was a crushing defeat for the old guard members of the committee, personally led by Charles D. Hilles, of New York.

Hilles, one of the oldest members of the committee, crossed swords with its most youthful member, John Hamilton, Kansas committeeman and the committee's general counsel. Hamilton appealed to the committee not to follow the pathway of expediency, but to adhere to the convention rules in the apportionment of delegates.

Not only was the young, red-haired Hamilton successful in this fight by a vote of 62 to 34, but previously he blocked motions to have the debate on this question take place secretly behind closed doors.

Three Extra Delegates.

The rule on apportionment finally adopted grants a bonus of three extra delegates at large only to the six States which were carried by the Republicans in 1932. The substitute advocated by Hilles would give the bonus to 42 States. Under the rule adopted, next year's Republican convention will have 997 delegates, compared with 1,154 in 1932.

Although he stood with Hamilton on the apportionment question, former Senator David A. Reed, of Pennsylvania, suffered a defeat when he proposed that the convention date be left open for several months to ascertain what the Democrats plan to do. He was roundly shouted down with cries that none cared what the Democrats would do—that the Republican course of uncompromising opposition to the New Deal was clear.

Although the committee fell into these controversies, it avoided a contest among its women when Mrs. Alvin T. Hert, resigned committeewoman from Kentucky, agreed to continue to serve as vice chairman after several of her colleagues publicly pleaded with her to do so.

Convention Vote Secret.

Despite frequent suggestions to the contrary, the Republican committee surrendered only once to expediency and the secret methods which sometimes have marked it in the past. The sole occasion was a secret ballot for the selection of a convention city and obviously was taken to spare the committeemen who had been free in their pledges embarrassment.

Cleveland ranked as the favorite meeting place long before representatives from it, Chicago and Kansas City appeared before the committee, each offering a contribution of $150,000 and lauding the benefits and advantages of their native cities. The result was 54 votes for Cleveland, 39 votes for Chicago and 6 votes for Kansas City.

The fact that Cleveland, where Calvin Coolidge was nominated by the party in 1924, was "neutral ter-

Lantern of Capitol 'Diogenes' Lights Way Only to Gallinger

Poor Diogenes!

He came to town yesterday in a purple robe with yellow trimmings and they arrested him because he went up to the Supreme Court with his lantern to look for an honest man.

Diogenes was well equipped. He had a black beard, a pair of sandals and a bushel vegetable basket covered with canvas on which was firmly tacked a strange design, in large red and black letters, ending: "Quo Vadis, Uncle Sam?"

The Supreme Court captain of the guards, Philip Crook, had no doubts as to Quo Vadis Diogenes. He found him on the marble steps looking into a stiff northwest wind for his honest man, swooped down on his prey before he had a chance to succeed in his quest and held him in the guard room on temporary charges of picketing a Federal building without permission.

Policeman F. L. Reinhart and W. T. Bidwell arrived, put Diogenes into his 1935 street clothes and hustled him to Gallinger Hospital for observation.

The prisoner said he was Harris Tzotis, Detroit restaurant man. His lantern went out on arrival of police and he appeared to expect arrest. His only comments were that his sandaled feet were not cold and he had done it "so living conditions of the people could be better."

Police took possession of the robe, beard, lantern and vegetable basket and carried the trophies to the Court Shortens Recess, Speeds New Deal Tests

Holiday Rest Cut 1 Week; Arguments Heard on Process Tax Case.

By Robert C. Albright.

In the midst of hearings on one New Deal law—with decisions on the fate of two others awaited and additional test cases en route—the Supreme Court yesterday clipped seven days off its scheduled three-week Chritmas recess and intensified efforts to clear its dockets.

Injunctive relief from rice processing taxes meanwhile was argued before the court, on the heels of Hoosac Mills' contentions that AAA processing taxes are invalid in toto. Expeditious ruling, that may enable Congress to take speedy action in event of invalidation, appeared in prospect.

Counsel for eight Louisiana rice millers yesterday told the nine justices that the AAA amendments erect a "stone wall" against recovery of rice processing taxes, even if the AAA is declared unconstitutional. Seeking permanent injunction against collection of the levies, they were closely questioned by justices.

Another attempt by the Carter Coal Co. to get a Supreme Court ruling on Guffey coal law constitutionality was made later in the day. A petition appealing from a final decree by the District Supreme Court was filed by the company. Government attorneys may co-operate to jump the case to the high court over the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the District.

"Diogenes" Arrested.

While John P. Bullington, attorney for the rice millers, argued processors have no remedy at law from AAA levies, court policemen took in custody a black-bearded, resplendently robed gentleman with a lantern, parading in front of the palatial building as a modern "Diogenes."

Court proceedings were not disturbed by the incident. The man gave his name as Harris Tzotis. He was sent to Gallinger Hospital.

Bullington, questioned by justices with much the same zest that preceded the collapse in court last week of Solicitor General Stanley Reed while arguing AAA validity, said his "personal opinion" was that the AAA section limiting tax-recovery suits was "valid."

He argued, however, that the burden of proof required of millers by the statute was "impossible" of fulfillment in the rice milling industry and asked permanent injunction against collection. Bullington's snappy retorts to the justices provoked frequent laughter.

Justices Hughes and Stone suggested a suit aimed at constitutionality of the law might give the millers relief, but Bullington replied that the "separability" clause in the law might still block recovery.

"We could make that contention," said Bullington, "but that doesn't mean we could get away with it."

"Does it necessarily follow that you have no adequate remedy if you can contest the validity of the law?" asked Hughes.

Bullington said in his opinion Congress could withdraw its consent to be sued.

Describes Methods.

The attorney gave a detailed description of intricate rice grading and processing methods, declaring there was no possible way of showing whether the AAA levies were absorbed or passed on to producer or consumer.

He charged Congress "has attempted to enact into law an economic theory which no one is able to prove or disprove."

"We are not maintaining that we are entitled to an injunction simply because we think the act is unconstitutional," he said. "We concede that we must show far more than that, and we contend we have shown it."

Although the Louisiana case affects directly only eight rice millers, issues in law at stake involve nearly 1,800 lawsuits involving some $150,000,000 of processing taxes. Assistant Attorney General Frank Wideman will present the Government's case today.

Yesterday's petition for Supreme Court hearing of the first Guffey coal law test case was on appeal from the District Supreme Court ruling granting an injunction against coal tax collections until the law's validity is determined.

One more New Deal case will be heard by the high court before it recesses until January 6, instead of until January 13, as first scheduled—TVA constitutionality. The court has completed hearings on the original AAA law and Bankhead cotton law validity. It may be in a position to rule on both when it returns on the 6th, three days after Congress reconvenes.

Italy Convicts Spinelli Of Pittsburgh Slayings

Salerno, Italy, Dec. 16 (AP).—Giuseppe "Big Mike" Spinelli was sentenced today to 30 years' imprisonment for "premeditated homicide" in the slaying of the three Volpe brothers in Pittsburgh, Pa., in 1932.

Spinelli returned to Italy a short time after the triple killing in Pittsburgh. His extradition was sought by the American Embassy, and the Naples court of appeals and the supreme court granted the petition, but the ministry of justice refused to accede.

The ministry ruled that "once an Italian always an Italian" unless the state decides otherwise.

Among the witnesses against Spinelli, who was arrested in his home town of Agropoli in 1932, was Ignazio Volpe, father of the three slain brothers.

Between You and Me

Jackson and the Judiciary; Hack Lawyers and Politicians; Ted Clark, Guide to the Great.

By Raymond Clapper

A SIGNIFICANT address which has received no publicity was delivered Saturday night to the Buffalo Lawyers Club by Robert H. Jackson, assistant general counsel of the Treasury Department and special counsel for SEC in the utilities suits.

In the present threatened breakdown of the judicial machinery, Mr. Jackson is the first responsible legal representative of the Government to argue in favor of simplifying our judicial procedure in order to obtain prompt decisions by the Supreme Court on the constitutionality of legislation.

The need for obtaining such decisions promptly instead of after long delays as have occurred in the pending AAA cases has been pointed out repeatedly in this place until readers no doubt are weary of the subject.

But the question is vital. Although the situation is bringing a gentle rain of fees to the legal profession, the fact is that the thousands of suits now clogging the courts and the delay in determining the constitutionality of vital legislation such as the AAA and the utilities act are threatening a breakdown of our constitutional system.

Unless the lawyers join in attempting to make the present system workable, a real movement to deprive the Supreme Court of its power to invalidate legislation is inevitable. Present judicial chaos will not be tolerated indefinitely.

Mr. Jackson is not a Frankfurter lawyer nor a member of the Brain Trust, but a corporation lawyer temporarily in the service of the Government.

At Buffalo he said (with apologies for the interpolations, which should not be held against him):

"The Supreme Court decides matters of constitutionality only in private litigation. The President of the United States, representing the welfare of 120,000,000 people, cannot ascertain what the opinions of this court may be. However desirous he may be of keeping within its decisions, he cannot learn those decisions until some private litigant gets a decision in a case.

"The Supreme Court will answer the constitutional doubts as to the constitutionality of the gold policy of the Government for the holder of $13.50 worth of coupons of a railroad, but it will not advise or inform the President of the United States."

Quoting Mr. Jackson further: "Can we adhere to a legal philosophy that denies the benefit of our judicial department's wisdom and neutral views to our policy-making departments, except as they may, after a lapse of years, be revealed piecemeal through opinion on private litigation? If the highest authority on legal philosophy is unable to reveal itself to the Congress or the Executive, can we as lawyers complain if the processes of litigation and administration must go on meanwhile?

"The mass attack on statutes, as shown by the processing tax cases and by the utility cases, changes the essential nature of the process of judicial review. Under all former practice, the laws of Congress took effect unless and until set aside by the Court. Under the new Liberty League practice, the law of Congress is treated as a complete nullity until the Supreme Court says it can take effect. The difference, subtly introduced in the past year, is fundamental. The utility industry when it made mass defiance of the laws of the United States, had one supporting decision by a Federal district judge, in the famous 'back door' case. Condemning such practice was the decision of an other district judge of equal weight. With no better judicial basis than this, the whole law is nullified, and will be for an indefinite time pending a Supreme Court decision. This is not orderly government, it is lawlessness."

Still quoting from Mr. Jackson: "There is neither present nor historical justification for scattering jurisdiction to nullify a sovereign act, among dozens of district courts, each the creature of Congress itself. The rush to choose among these courts and select among these judges (Mr. Jackson doesn't say it, but you can put it down that the utilities knew what they were doing when they threw their trick test case into the Federal court at Baltimore—when John W. Davis had to be introduced to his obscure client in court!—and that they knew they had picked one of the most conservative judges on the bench to hear their attack on the utilities act) and hurry cases in some places and delay them elsewhere can only lead to a public belief that known leanings or local influences have a substantial part in the decision.

"Conflicting opinions lead to nothing but confusion, promote controversy and all are finally merged in the pronouncement of one final court. Could we not arrange to get the final word, without so many preliminary and rather unseemly maneuvers?"

Mr. Jackson suggests it might be possible to permit acts of Congress to be reviewed only by the Supreme Court in exercise of original jurisdiction. The Government, he feels, should be a party to all cases, and should have the widest discretion to consolidate cases.

He says further: "Preliminary injunctions or summary halting of the processes of enforcement should be wholly in the discretion of the Supreme Court and not subject to local and irresponsible action. (He probably means that acts of Congress should not be set aside by any political hack or second-rate lawyer who happened to have had enough political pull to get a district judgeship.)

Finally, Mr. Jackson said: "The American bar could render a constructive and statesmanlike service to our judicial system if it would lead the way to organizing the process of testing constitutionality, and save it from being discredited by the present conflicts and confusion. This multiplicity of lawsuits, deluge of lower court opinions, defiance of the laws passed by Congress, and long delay in getting the case to the only court that can determine it, are not looked upon by anyone, except the lawyers engaged, as very becoming to a democratic institution. The substance of judicial review might be impaired by disgust with its procedure."

Mr. Jackson and all who are concerned over this breakdown in our judicial machinery are doing a service toward preserving the Supreme Court's power of judicial review. That power can't survive if it doesn't work. And it isn't working now. It is merely causing traffic jams.

At the elbow of most successful public men—and seldom noticed by the public—stands a man like Ted Clark, who his just died. Not many of them are as good as he was. He was confidential secretary and adviser to Calvin Coolidge in the White House. He had canny political judgment and, equally important, the courage to tell his President what he ought to hear, not what he might want to hear.

In turn, he was Coolidge's safety valve—a trusted friend and wise counselor, with whom the President could safely think aloud. No President has many such men around him. He is lucky if he has one. Men of Ted Clark's type have more influence upon national affairs than is generally realized.

Once Mr. Coolidge said, "Of all the men around me, Ted Clark has the best political mind and is my best and truest friend."

Clark's death is a loss to Gov. Landon, for in a strictly personal and unofficial capacity Clark had become one of his important backstage advisers.

Newport News Firm Contracts To Build First U. S. Super-Liner

By the Associated Press.

Newport News, Va., Dec. 16.—George A. Parker, secretary to the president of the Newport News Shipbuilding & Drydock Co. here, tonight announced the company's representatives had signed a contract in Washington to construct a super-liner for the United States Lines.

"We have signed a contract in Washington today to build a super-liner for the United States Lines for $11,900,000," the statement said.

It was said work would start immediately and an estimated 1,500 men would be employed through the 28 months the contract is to run.

The brief announcement came as representatives of the line and the constructing company were in conference at Washington.

J. M. Johnson, Assistant Secretary of Commerce, said last night he could not confirm the report a contract had been signed for construction of a new liner for the United States Lines, but that "it probably is true."

"The line had until midnight to sign a contract for a ship to succeed the Leviathan to escape a $1,000,000 forfeiture," Johnson said.

"If it was signed, I expect it will be on my desk in the morning. Until the contract is examined, I cannot say whether the Government loan of up to 75 per cent of the construction cost will be made."

Lumber Trade 'To Co-operate' On Tariff Pact

Letter to Hull Expresses Acceptance; Fought Canadian Treaty.

The National Lumber Manufacturers Association informed Secretary Hull yesterday it intends to accept the "additional difficult responsibility" resulting from the Canadian trade agreement "in the same spirit in which it has heretofore sought to cooperate with the constructive purposes of government.

A letter from the association and signed by Wilson Compton, its secretary-manager, was made public by Hull, who said he was pleased with the spirit of cooperation it revealed. The association had been critical of concessions granted Canada on timber produced in the United States.

Meanwhile, the Associated Press reported from Ottawa that the Canadian motor car manufacturers had moved for cancellation of the concessions made to the United States on automobile tariffs under the trade agreement.

The manufacturers asked the tariff board there that the intermediate tariff be raised from 17½ per cent to 20 per cent, the level of the general tariff, and that a 5 per cent excise tax on cars imported from the United States be restored. The agreement cut this tax to 3 per cent.

Joining in the demand were the Chrysler Corporation of Canada, General Motors of Canada, Hudson Motors of Canada, International Harvester Co. of Canada, and Studebaker Corporation of Canada.

The lumber association letter recalled that the association had recommended reductions in the tariff on species of timber scarce in the United States and maintenance of the rates on lumber plentiful in this country. It continued:

"It is important that the opportunity, under the initiative of the Government, to secure a general restoration of international commerce be not needlessly impeded or impaired. Opinions may differ as to the wisdom or reasonableness of particular conclusions. They may not differ as to the soundness of the fundamental objective.

"The lumber industry has frankly criticized the agreement with Canada. May it, with equal frankness, state that it recognizes and respects the agreement as constituting the deliberate conclusion of the President; that it intends to accept the additional difficult responsibility thus imposed in the same spirit in which it has heretofore sought to co-operate with the constructive purposes of Government. It expresses the hope that the Government will, in so far and in such ways as it can, aid the industry's effort to meet this further difficulty now added to its already difficult situation."

Berkeley Defended In Fatal Accident

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, Dec. 16.—Glenda Farrell, blonde screen comedienne, came to the defense today of Busby Berkeley at his trial for second-degree murder following a fatal automobile collision.

Miss Farrell testified the screen dance director was not intoxicated when she saw him at a beach party August 6 a short time before his automobile crashed into another car, killing three persons.

"I talked with Berkeley in the patio a few minutes before leaving and he was certainly all right then," Miss Farrell said.

The party was given by William Koenic, film director.

Bryan Foy, a producer, and Addison Randall, Miss Farrell's escort, gave similar testimony.

Army Flier Killed In Swamp Crash

By the Associated Press.

Miami, Fla., Dec. 16.—Second Lieut. Robert L. Carver, of the Fifty-fifth Pursuit Squadron, Barksdale Field, La., was killed today when an Army plane crashed into a mangrove swamp on the edge of Chapman Field, 12 miles south of Miami.

Airport officials said Carver cut loose a target he had been towing for aerial gun practice, and was circling the field for landing when he spun into the swamp.

Carver came here from Barksdale field with other Army fliers two weeks ago to participate in the south Florida maneuvers of the Army's general headquarters air force, which ended yesterday.

He was graduated from West Point in 1932, and from the Army Training School at Randolph Field, Tex., in 1933. He was unmarried.

Relief

agencies thus far this year, leaving an available balance of $6,821,000,000. Of this balance almost $4,000,000,000 still is available for purely relief activities. This eliminates AAA money and money for such agencies as FHA and HOLC, but it includes other funds than the $4,880,000,000-relief appropriation.

The comparatively small expenditure made thus far by the WPA is perhaps the most surprising element in these figures. The relief organizations have claimed that 3,500,000 persons have been working since December 1, with more than 2,500,000 on the WPA pay roll. It is possible that the expenditure figure will take a large jump after the December 15 pay roll is included.

700 to Be Eliminated.

Esitmates generally have been that the relief budget will ask for $2,000,000,000 or less. Much will depend on how much cash can be carried into the next fiscal year. Considerable attention is being paid to keeping down administrative overhead. Relief officials are attempting to hold this item below 4 per cent of the entire cost. In this connection about 700 WPA administrative employes are expected to leave the Government pay roll January 1.

President Roosevelt, in preparing his budget recommendations, will be faced again with the conflicting theories of relief. It is believed anything approaching resumption of a direct dole will be frowned upon, but there is an increasing clamor from States for more assistance as FERA funds begin to run out.

Another question is that of whether the Public Works Administration will be continued. Secretary Ickes has been urging a permanent public works program. Federal housing also must come in for consideration. Various suggestions have been made for making permanent this division, now under Ickes. Curtailment of rural resettlement activities would not cause surprise.

In spite of the fact that Hopkins has spent comparatively little of his available cash, it is expected that WPA funds may not last much beyond the end of this fiscal year and may run out before that time. It may be necessary for President Roosevelt to ask Congress for authority to transfer more funds from other divisions to the Hopkins organization. He has about exhausted the 20 per cent leeway provision of the works bill.

Hopkins Defends WPA.

Meanwhile, Hopkins issued a statement defending the WPA. He said that roads and streets, public buildings, water supply and sewer systems, and parks and playgrounds constitute 72.6 per cent of all WPA projects. Educational, professional and clerical projects comprise 5.8 per cent of the total; flood control and other water and soil conservation work, 5.9 per cent; "goods projects," mostly sewing projects for women, 6.1 per cent; transportation projects, 2.2 per cent; sanitation and health projects, 3.6 per cent, and miscellaneous, 3.4 per cent.

Another statement, covering a survey of six rural "problem areas" in the United States, including 10,771 families, blamed the "frontier philosophy" for the plight of rural families on relief.

"The frontier philosophy," said the report, "which assumed that the individual, if given complete freedom, would pursue an economic course that was to the best interests of society, led to the present dilemma of stranded communities, bankrupt farmers and widespread unemployment."

Townsend Plan For Pension Hit By 2 Senators

'Fantastic,' Says McKellar; 'Unworkable,' Declares Vandenberg.

By the Associated Press

Senator McKellar (Democrat), of Tennessee, issued a statement tonight labeling the Townsend old-age plan "the wildest, most fantastic and most devastating suggestion produced in this period of depression."

A few hours earlier Senator Vandenberg (Republican, of Michigan, called the plan to pay persons over 60 a $200 monthly pension financed by a sales tax both unworkable and unconstitutional.

Townsend forces now are concentrating on building up favorable sentiment for their cause in the coming Congressional session.

McKellar devoted half of a general statement predicting success for President Roosevelt in the South in next year's campaign to the attack on the Townsend plan.

Would "End Trade."

Explaining that the Townsendites sought to pay some 8,000,000 persons $1,600,000,000 a month, to be spent within 30 days, the Tennesseean added:

"Such a scheme is perhaps the wildest, most fantastic and most devastating suggestion produced in this period of depression. It would ruin individual effort, individual honesty and would destroy character in our people; it would do away with business; it would do away with banks and it is doubtful if we could manufacture enough presses to print the money that would be required."

Vandenberg opposed the Townsend plan, but otherwise indorsed Verner W. Main, a Townsend plan advocate who is the Republican nominee in the Third Michigan Congressional District.

The Senator pictured Main as a man opposed to what he called "trends" toward "communism" or "fascism" within the New Deal.

Main's opponent is Howard W. Cavanagh, a Democrat, who attacks the Townsend program as an "uneconomic" scheme "threatening taxation equal to half the National income." The election, a special one to fill a vacancy, will be held today.

Vandenberg, after explaining he had found it impossible to speak personally in the special election campaign, said in a statement:

"He (Main) does not represent my views on the 'Townsend plan.' I believe in effective and adequate old-age pensions; but I do not believe the 'Townsend plan' is feasible or constitutional. This issue, however, will not come to conclusive decision in the next session of Congress. The other issues are immediate. They are, therefore, of controlling importance."

Third Party Move.

Chicago, Dec. 16 (AP).—Dr. F. E. Townsend, leader of the movement to provide $200 a month pensions to persons 60 or more years old, today announced his organization would file third party petitions in all States.

He said the action was taken to insure a Nation-wide vote on the Townsend plan in 1936.

A statement signed by Dr. Townsend and National Secretary R. E. Clements also set forth:

"This does not necessarily mean that in all States it would be necessary to exercise the third party prerogative. It is our hope that the attitude of one or both of the old political parties shall change toward the Townsend plan and that their espousal of our cause will make it unnecessary to exercise the rights granted by filing as an independent or third party."

Asked whether the Townsendites would enter a Presidential candidate in the lists, the doctor said developments would determine such action, "although we will be in a position to do so."

Iowa Strike Threat Brings WPA Edict

Des Moines, Iowa, Dec. 16 (AP).—Iowa WPA officials today met strike threats with a declaration that wages of works progress employes cannot be increased and that fewer than 10 per cent of the 28,000 employed are union workmen and responsible to a union strike call.

Labor and unemployed group leaders who called the strike for January 2 started campaigns in a score of Iowa cities for a "united front" if demands for prevailing wages are not met.

A. E. Michel, director of Iowa WPA projects, said wages could not be raised because "they were increased an average of 25 per cent when the State was shifted from Region 2 rating to Region 1 of the Administration."

He said L. S. Hill, State WPA administrator, has power to increase wages 10 per cent, but stated this leeway is "to fit special communities."

Hoeppels Fight Verdict; Charge Errors at Trial

Prejudicial Remarks Laid to U. S. Prosecutor; Hearing Friday.

Representative John H. Hoeppel, of California, and his son, Charles H. Hoeppel, yesterday in the District Supreme Court launched a fight to have their conviction on a charge of conspiring to sell a West Point appointment to James W. Ives, Baltimore and Olympic athlete, set aside on the ground of errors during their trial.

Both Hoeppels are at liberty on bond of $1,000. Justice Daniel W. O'Donoghue, who presided at the week-long trial that ended before midnight last Thursday, permitted them to appear in court the morning after their convictions and post $1,000 bonds in the place of the $500 bonds they gave when they were arrested.

Alleged prejudicial remarks of Assistant United States Attorney David A. Pine were cited as one of the grounds in a motion for a new trial filed yesterday. The prosecutor, in addressing the jury termed the elder Hoeppel "a monumental liar."

Bruno Requests Lie Test; Asks 'Jafsie' to Join

Protests Innocence Anew; May Get Chance to Plead to Pardon Board.

By the Associated Press

Trenton, N. J., Dec. 16.—From his death house cell Bruno Richard Hauptmann sent a letter to Gov. Harold G. Hoffman today protesting anew his innocence of the Lindbergh kidnap-murder and offering to submit to a lie detector test to prove it.

The condemned man wrote he hoped Dr. John F. Condon, too, would submit to such a test, because the venerable "Jafsie" of the ransom negotiations, he said, "changed" his attitude on the case between the time he visted Hauptmann in the Flemington jail and the trial a few weeks later.

"When he was visiting me in my Flemington cell," Hauptmann wrote in his apologetic note, "he said all excited to the prosecutor—'I cannot testify against this man.'"

"I have a deep interest," Hauptmann told the Governor, "in what kind of force made him change his saying."

"Good Joke," Says Condon.

Hauptmann's offer to submit to lie-detector tests brought no immediate response from the Governor.

"I don't want to comment now," he said.

At Lynn, Mass., Dr. Condon termed Hauptmann's proposal a "good joke."

Meanwhile, Anthony M. Hauck, jr., Hunterdon County prosecutor, denied Hauptmann's charge that Dr. Condon refused at first to testify against him. Hauck said the ransom intermediary "certainly" made no remark like that attributed to him by Hauptmann.

Confession Report Denied.

The Governor announced the receipt of the letter from the Bronx carpenter a short time after published reports described an alleged confession in which Hauptmann was quoted as disclosing he and Isador Fisch, his business partner, now deceased, collected the $50,000 ransom, but were guiltless of the actual kidnaping. These reports were promptly denied by the Governor and other official sources as groundless and untrue.

Gov. Hoffman hinted strongly that Hauptmann probably would be permitted to plead his own case before the court of pardons when it considers his plea for a commutation of his death sentence.

The court, the Governor said, probably will convene a week or so before the week of January 13, during which Hauptmann has been condemned to die, to ponder the expected appeal for clemency.

Hoffman was asked if he was in favor of Hauptmann appearing in person before the court.

"Yes, I think I would," he answered, adding as an afterthought, "——at the prison."

Denies Offer of Bargain.

He revealed he had advanced such a suggestion to the other seven members of the court recently and reported "there was considerable interest in it."

The recurrent report that a "high official had offered Hauptmann life imprisonment in return for a confession was brought to the Governor's attention, and he quickly pointed out that "no officer of the State has power to do such a thing" under the laws.

The Court of Pardons, he said, probably could "take such a proposal into consideration."

The Governor likewise spiked the story that it had been planned to have Col. Charles A. Lindbergh confront Hauptmann as he sat in the electric chair in hopes of wringing a last-minute confession from him before the execution.

Meanwhile at Somerville Hauptmann's three attorneys, C. Lloyd Fisher, Egbert Rosecrans and Judge Frederick A. Pope, met in a conference to discuss the court of pardons appeal for clemency.

After an hour's conference, Pope announced, "the next move is to apply to the court of pardons for relief."

The attorneys refused to amplify what they meant by "relief," but it was understood their request would be for a commutation of the sentence to one of life imprisonment.

The petition, they said, would have to be filed by Hauptmann personally. This would probably be in two weeks, they said.

All the attorneys ridiculed published reports of the Hauptmann "confession."

Mother Pleads for Bruno.

Kamenz, Germany, Dec. 16 (AP).—Bruno Richard Hauptmann's mother has appealed to Gov. Hoffman of New Jersey to commute her son's death sentence for the murder of the Lindbergh baby to life imprisonment, it was disclosed today.

In a letter to the Governor dated December 14, she emphasized her long-held belief in his innocence, and tried to excuse his "minor transgressions" in Germany.

As the father of a small son, she said, Bruno could not commit a crime. She asserted he had repeatedly affirmed his innocence in letters to her.

The letter concluded:

"I wish to raise my voice to the end that justice be superceded by clemency.

"I implore you, Mr. Governor, to use the dignity of your high office to not permit that this man undergo a penalty that is irreparably based on merely circumstantial evidence."

She signed the letter "Yours respectfully, Pauline Hauptmann."

'Little' Rainy Spell Due To Delay War in Africa

They expressed belief the rains would be destructive to roads as are the longer summer rains, thus preventing Italian advances and heavy Ethiopian road transport.

3 Plead Guilty In Gaming Case; 4 to Face Trial

8th Arrested in Raid Near the Capitol in February Forfeits $2,000 Bond.

A spectacular raid on an alleged gambling house "within a stone's throw" of the Capitol almost a year ago had its aftermath in the District Supreme Court yesterday when three of the eight men arrested and charged with violating the gaming laws pleaded guilty, one failed to appear, forfeiting his bond, and the others elected to stand trial.

According to United States Attorney Leslie C. Garnett and Roger Ross, an assistant, police raided the place at 113 B street southeast, after Representative Thomas Blanton had told the House Crime Investigating Committee the place was in operation.

A raiding squad, headed by Police Lieut. George Little, crashed through heavily barricaded doors February 6. They herded 55 men into patrol wagons, took them to the station house and subjected each to a grilling. As a result of what they learned, the eight men were indicted.

Charles Turner, 45; Kenneth Tolson Pumphrey, 29, and Frank Gray Lynn pleaded guilty yesterday. John Merlin Cornell, 31, failed to appear and his $2,000 bond was decleared forfeited by Justice F. Dickinson Letts. The others, Edgar Julius Behrle, 39; Fred Albert Stillman, 42; John Edward Goetz, 36, and Wilmer M. Long pleaded not guilty and demanded a jury trial.

The only witness, D. L. Green, was subjected to a stiff cross-examination by defense attorneys. With more than 15 witnesses yet awaiting call the trial is expected to last several days.

Rush-Hour Bandits Flee With $11,000

By the Associated Press

Green Bay, Wis., Dec. 16.—At the peak of the downtown shopping rush today two men held up a department store bank messenger and escaped with approximately $11,000 in loot, about $5,800 of which was in checks.

The H. C. Prange Co. was crowded with shoppers when Al Thompson, the messenger, stepped from a side door into Pine street, which carries little traffic.

At the same moment a man emerged from a coupe standing at the curb and pointed a pistol at Thompson.

"Hand over the bag," he demanded and then snatched it. Thompson made no resistance.

Ordering Thompson into the store, the robber jumped into the car driven by a companion and both escaped.

Philippine Clipper Arrives at Manila

Manila, P. I., Dec. 16 (AP)—The Philippine Clipper landed here this afternoon, bringing the second cargo of transpacific airmail from Alameda, Calif.

Completing her 8,000-mile maiden flight, the giant flying boat arrived at 3:54 p. m. (2:54 a. m. Eastern standard time). The elapsed flying time was 60 hours 4 minutes—precisely the same as that of the China Clipper which made the first airmail crossing two weeks ago.

He was not reported missing until late yesterday by Frederic, although a request for assistance was made earlier to Federal agents in Boston.

A note demanding ransom had been mailed in Poughkeepsie, N. Y., and was accompanied by a Christmas card upon which was typewritten, "Greetings to you."

The ransom note consisted of words clipped from newspapers and pasted to thin brown paper. It said: "Your brother isn't in Philadelphia, we got him out in the country, but he will be returned living if you follow the letters we will send you. Available cash must come from New York. Keep in touch with your grandfather by phone. The letters will be signed 'Zwttler.'"

Cuban Kidnapers Slain.

Havana, Dec. 17 (Tuesday) (AP).—Cuban police announced early today three prisoners taken in connection with the kidnaping of Nicolas Castano were killed or wounded gravely in a gun battle near the suburban town of Calvario.

Heavy firing broke out there late last night as soldiers were reported rushing the accused men here from San Antonio de las Vegas, near where Castano, 66-year-old Havana millionaire, was freed yesterday without payment of the $500,000 ransom demanded.

New Guards Reach Meningitis Area

By the Associated Press.

Hobart, Okla., Dec. 16.—More National Guardsmen were sent to this southwestern Oklahoma area today to enforce a meningitis quarantine that was extended with the report of two new illnesses.

The quarantine, limited yesterday to southern Kiowa County, was ordered over a 2-mile strip of northern Tillman County. One death and 13 previous illnesses were attributed to the disease.

Gov. E. W. Marland ordered 15 Altus National Guardsmen to reinforce 25 militiamen already on duty, halting traffic on both roads and otherwise enforcing the quarantine.

Stores reopened here and in other cities in Northern Kiowa County after being closed three days and prepared for a delayed Christmas rush. Only half a dozen customers were allowed in a store at any time.

Yokohama, Dec. 16 (AP).—Joseph E. Grew, United States Ambassador to Japan, returned to his post today after a five months' furlough. He was accompanied by Mrs. Grew.

Slayer, Gravely Hurt in Suicide Effort, Gives Up

Fairfax Fratricide Yields; Shot Self in Remorse Over Killing.

Sought throughout the night for the slaying of his brother, Fred Martin, 40, of Fairfax, Va., surrendered early yesterday after hiding all night in the woods, where he had attempted suicide. Badly wounded, he was taken to Alexandria Hospital. His name was placed on the hospital's danger list.

Several hours after killing his brother with a revolver shot in an argument over a damaged automobile, Martin staggered into the home of his uncle, Raymond Washburn, weak from loss of blood during his night of wandering in the woods. He said he shot himself in remorse over the Sabbath killing, which was witnessed by the man's 76-year-old mother.

He admitted the killing, saying it climaxed a long feud between the two. He said that after the shooting he fled to the home of another brother, Elwood, telling him he had shot Isaac and was going to kill himself. Elwood tried to disarm him, and he fled to the woods.

Early yesterday he reached the home of his uncle and surrendered to Sheriff E. P. Kirby, who, with a posse, had spent the night searching for him.

A warrant for his arrest for murder will be sworn out against him today, Sheriff Kirby said.

According to relatives, the two brothers, who lived with their mother, Mrs. Sarah Martin, near Burke Station, had been on quarrelsome terms for years.

Triple Slaying Suspect Gets Trial January 20

Twin Falls, Idaho, Dec. 16 (AP).—Douglas Van Vlack, accused of slaying three persons, pleaded innocent when arraigned today on a charge of the murder of Highway Patrolman Fontaine Cooper. Trial was set for January 20.

Cooper was killed and Deputy Sheriff Henry C. Givens was wounded fatally when they attempted to stop Van Vlack's car, November 25, as he fled from Tacoma, Was., with his former wife, Mildred Hook. She was found dead from a bullet wound several days later. The woman was abducted in Tacoma. home of her parents.

Thelma Todd

"drank a cocktail before dinner and a little brandy and champagne during dinner."

Gems Untouched.

The last person known to have seen her alive was Ernest Peters, operator of a rental auto livery. He told police he brought her home early Sunday morning. He fixed the time at 4:20 a. m.

A valuable fur coat and diamonds valued at several thousand dollars were untouched when the body was found.

The actress was driven to her beach sidewalk cafe, below her home. The cafe was closed and Miss Todd, apparently without her keys, climbed to the garage and slumped to rest in one of the cars.

The maid said she had not been alarmed at Miss Todd's absence Sunday, but had searched the premises today.

Received Threat Notes.

The actress was the object of several extortion notes and threatening letters this year. Two men, one now free on bail, face charges in New York in connection with sending such letters.

One note threatened to "blow up" her sidewalk cafe, another sought to name Abe Lyman, New York orchestra leader and friend of the actress, as an involuntary intermediary for payment of the $10,000 demanded.

Edward Chifferet, 26, was arrested last month and is held for trial. The other man, Harry Schimanski, 34, is under indictment by the grand jury. He was released under $1,000 bail recently.

Miss Todd, who came to films eight years ago after being selected "Miss Massachusetts" in a State beauty contest, had ben a guest at a filmland cafe party given by Ida Lupino, actress.

Studied to Be Teacher.

The actress, daughter of John Shaw Todd, was born at Lawrence, Mass., and entered the State Normal School at Lowell, Mass., where she worked as a fashion model. She planned a career as a school teacher when the beauty contest opened the way to a film contract. She was 30 years old.

After preliminary training in the "Paramount School" in New York, she came to Hollywood, where her beauty, charm and style brought success as leading lady, star and later comedienne.

Teamed first with ZaSu Pitts and later with Patsy Kelly, she appeared in two-reel comedies alternately with feature films, one of her late roles having been with Bing Crosby in "Two for Tonight." Among her earlier successes were "Vamping Venus," her first picture, and "This Is the Night," of the talkie era.

Miss Todd was married to Pasquale di Cicco, theatrical agent, eloping with him to Prescott, Ariz., in July, 1932, but her divorce from him became final this year.

With Roland West, film director and her manager, she operated a film stars' rendezvous known as "Thelma Todd's Sidewalk Cafe," which engaged her interest when she was not active in pictures.

The cafe attracted numerous film-minded tourists. It was here that the actress was to have entertained a party of friends with whom she made a wager and lost at the Lupino party Saturday night. The friends went to the cafe last night to claim the "stakes"—a dinner party—and were mystified when their hostess did not appear.

Six Policemen Are Suspended In Death Probe

Tampa Fireman Also Is Named as Jury Studies Fatal Flogging.

By the Associated Press.

Tampa, Fla., Dec. 16.—Six policemen and a fireman were suspended tonight by Mayor R. E. L. Chancey as the Hillsborough County grand jury dug into Tampa politics and gambling in its investigation into the death from flogging of Joseph Shoemaker, unemployed labor organizer.

The men, with one previously suspended, were involved in the arrest of Shoemaker, E. F. Poulnot and S. D. Rogers, abducted by a gang as they left police headquarters after being questioned about alleged communistic activities.

Mayor Chancey said the officers were suspended "pending investigation" into their raid on a private house without a warrant to arrest Shoemaker and the others. The fireman, C. A. McCaskill, was identified by Tampa newspapers as one of six men "arrested" in the raid and booked at police headquarters as "O. R. Sauls."

The suspended officers, in addition to McCaskill are Sergt. C. A. Brown, Bob L. Cappell, Frank Wyman, F. W. Switzer, D. H. Chiles and J. P. Bridges. Earlier the mayor suspended C. W. Carlisle.

Mayor Chancey said he hoped "this action will not be taken by anyone to indicate that I have any concrete information that would justify me in believing these men, or any of them, actually had any complicity in the flogging. When the investigation is complete, those who are found without blame will be reinstated."

The grand jury began a special session today to investigate the death of Shoemaker.

RFC Favor Seen On New Bank Loan

Reconstruction Finance Corporation officials said yesterday a new loan proposal for the closed Richmond American Bank & Trust Co. would be given "all possible consideration," according to the Associated Press.

R. J. Taylor, assistant chief of the agency division, said his organization could not comment about the reported receiver's proposal to borrow $1,900,000 for a second dividend payment, because it was not yet before the corporation officially.

He added, however, that the receivers had paid back to RFC all of a previous $3,500,000 loan made and used largely in making a 15 per cent dividend payment in December, 1933, to its more than 45,000 depositors.

'Found' $20 Bill Goes To G. O. P. War Fund

By the Associated Press.

R. B. Creager, Texas Republican national committeeman, dropped a strong hint yesterday that the party war chest is open for contributions.

During the national committee meeting here he arose and waved a $20 bill which he said he found on the floor.

"I don't know who this belongs to," he said, "so I am giving it to the man who needs it most."

He handed it to George Getz, of Chicago, the party treasurer.

Bingham Will Remain In London for Holiday

London, Dec. 16 (AP).—Ambassador Robert W. Bingham, for the first time since he was accredited to the Court of St. James, will not come home for Christmas.

No explanation was given, but it was assumed the ambassador was remaining in London because of the naval conference and the delicate international situation.

Poison Slayer Of 3d Husband To Hang Today

Condemned Woman, Denied Clemency, Maintains Innocence.

By the Associated Press.

Woodstock, Ont., Dec. 16.—Middle-aged Elizabeth Tilford tonight heard she had no hope of escaping the hangman's noose tomorrow for the poison murder of her third husband, and said:

"It's better to go innocent than to stay here guilty. The cross is heavy, but the crown is sweet."

She will be hanged in Woodstock jail. The Governor-General-In Council, in Ottawa today, declined to interfere.

"Death is only a crossing over," Mrs. Tilford said in a message to her attorney, Frank Regan. "I have no fear, for I go to meet my maker, innocent.

"Tell the world I am innocent and am resigned and secure in the knowledge of my innocence.

"If at this hour, in the shadow of death, I could save my life by telling a lie I would not do it. I had nothing to gain by Tyrell's death."

WPA Worker Kills 4, Wounds 3 After Demotion to 'Water Boy'

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, Dec. 16.—An apparently demented man killed four WPA workers with rifle bullets today at a project where his job had been reduced to "water boy."

Two of the three others he wounded were in a serious condition.

The gunman, Charles N. Wayman, 45, told police: "I shot them because they had been abusing and browbeating me."

Officers expressed belief he was a "mental case." A threatening group of 400 WPA laborers surrounded Wayman and the officers as they put him in a patrol car. The crowd shouted for vengeance, but there was no violence.

The dead: Harry Sell, 56; Pete Cokil, Lloyd Holden and Lloyd Davis, 21.

The wounded were Harold Johnston, 26, shot in the head; Francis Secrest, shot in the stomach, and James Haley, wounded in the arm.

On his rounds with a water bucket, Wayman approached a group of several score workers. Suddenly he dropped the bucket, scrambled to the top of a dirt heap, seized a rifle and started firing. Most of the victims were shot down as they and companions closed in on Wayman in a frantic effort to disarm him.

He fired six shots, quickly reloaded and fired once more. He fled two blocks until police overtook him and surrounded him with shotguns.

Edith Maxwell Thanks Donors To Post Fund

Brother Off to Richmond in Effort to Support Apoplexy Theory.

By Virginia Lee Warren.
A Staff Correspondent.

Wise, Va., Dec. 16.—From her cell in the dank, ancient jail here, Edith Maxwell today sent a message expressing her "undying gratitude" to subscribers of The Washington Post who have contributed to her defense fund.

This fund, now totaling $681.83 and still growing is to be used to finance efforts to win a new trial for the young mountain school teacher, who was sentenced to 25 years in prison on a charge of murdering her father, Trigg Maxwell.

She struck her father with a slipper while defending herself against a drunken attack by him.

Miss Maxwell's message to Post subscribers, relayed through her brother, Earl Maxwell, follows:

"To my unknown friends, who have so generously helped and are helping me in the defense of my case, I wish to express my deepest appreciation.

"Made Cross Easier."

"It has made my cross easier to bear to know that these friends, the subscribers to The Washington Post, have come to my aid.

"To them I give my undying gratitude."

Earl Maxwell left here tonight for Richmond, where he plans to lay copies of the autopsy report before well-known pathologists. Earl hopes that these pathologists will find that Trigg Maxwell died not from the blow of a slipper wielded by Edith but from a stroke of apoplexy brought on by heavy drinking.

A half-dozen members of the Maxwell family have died sudden deaths in the last 15 years, two of them from apoplexy. In each of these cases the deceased had the reputation of being a heavy drinker.

If the Richmond pathologists, after reading the autopsy report, conclude that apoplexy or some other ailment brought about Trigg Maxwell's death, Mrs. Maxwell will ask that the body be exhumed for a new autopsy.

Then it would be possible to determine whether Maxwell was "roarin' drunk," as Edith testified in her trial.

In the original autopsy no attempt was made to analyze the contents of Trigg's stomach.

Before leaving here tonight for Richmond, Earl had lined up a dozen witnesses who will testify for Edith if she should be granted a new trial. These witnesses, Earl believes, will be able to shatter two points emphasized by the prosecution at Edith's trial.

These points were, first, that Edith had made threats to kill her father and, second, that the father was not durnk the night he died.

It was Conrad Bolling who testified that, two months before the tragedy, he heard Edith say that she intended to kill her father.

Finds Corroboration.

Earl has located two persons who were present on the occasion Bolling alluded to, and they are ready to go into court and deny that Edith ever uttered such a threat.

Earl also has eight witnesses who will testify that Trigg Maxwell was extremely intoxicated on the night of July 21 when he attacked Edith for staying out until midnight and was himself struck with a slipper.

In the trial, only members of the Maxwell family testified as to Trigg's inebriated state, while a few prosecution witnesses testified that he had appeared to be sober.

Defense Fund Mounts.

The defense fund for Edith Maxwell continued to mount yesterday as her attorneys made plans to seek a new trial before the Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals.

The funds of the Maxwell family are exhausted and only through outside help can the young mountain school teacher hope to meet the expense involved in asking for a new trial.

Many of the contributions received yesterday were accompanied by notes expressing the opinion that Edith Maxwell, instead of being sentenced to 25 years for killing her father, Trigg Maxwell, should have been acquitted on the ground of self-defense.

NRA Assailants Join in Attack On Labor Board

Test Slated Here This Week on Textile Elections Under New Law.

By the Associated Press.

The law firm which led the court battles against the NRA yesterday joined the fight against the Wagner labor disputes act.

Cravath, Degersdorff, Swaine & Wood, New York and Washington firm, joined counsel for Mrs. Lola Echols, an employe of the Gate City Cotton Mills, East Point, Ga., who contends that a labor board election in the plant might deprive her of constitutional liberty.

The Wagner act requires employers to enter collective bargaining negotiations with employes and sets up national and regional boards for the supervisory purposes.

F. H. Wood May Appear.

Frederick H. Wood of the firm, who argued the Schecter NRA case before the United States Supreme Court, may appear personally in the case against the Labor Board.

Justice Oscar R. Luhring, of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, stopped an election asked by the United Textile Workers with a restraining order last week, directing the Labor Board to show this week why a temporary injunction should not be issued. The hearing is set for Friday.

The board announced yesterday the Oakland textile mills at Newberry, S. C., had consented to an election among its employes. In another order, the agency directed the Fruehauf Trailer Co., of Detroit, to stop employing private detectives to ascertain union membership among its workers.

Unit of Kendall Mills.

The Oakland mill is a unit of the Kendall mills, headed by Harry Kendall, chairman of Secretary Roper's business advisory council. It employs 250 persons. The United Textile Workers asked for the election, to be held December 20.

Along with the order concerning private detective employment, the board directed the Fruehauf Co. to reinstate, with back pay, seven employes it said was discharged for union activity, and to stop alleged interference with its employes in the exercise of their right to join labor organizations and bargain collectively.

The case is expected to move into the courts. The company claimed the Wagner act was unconstitutional.

Muchison Elected.

New York, Dec. 16 (AP).—Dr. Claudius T. Murchison, president of the Cotton Textile Institute, today was elected chairman of the General Arbitration Council of the Textile Industry. He succeeds George A. Sloan.

Chafing Dish Alone Survives In New White House Kitchen

Reporters Shown Improvements by Mrs. Roosevelt; Electric Range Costs $5,000; Granted Approval by Cooks.

In the proud manner of any good housewife showing off her newest set of cake pans, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt yesterday led a group of 50 or more women through the White House's remodeled kitchens.

The touring party was made up of newspaper reporters. They had come for the First Lady's press conference but before they were through they saw everything from a collection of electric waffle irons to the napkin rings of the domestic staff.

In the midst of the modern, electrified grandeur, Mrs. Roosevelt announced the same old silver chafing dish she has used on Sunday nights ever since she was married will continue to turn out the scrambled eggs the President eats invariably for his Sunday-night supper.

"I don't think you could get my husband tired of scrambled eggs," laughed the First Lady. "I don't care much for them myself, but I think he'll always have a soft spot for them."

$5,000 Electric Range.

During the week, however, the Chief Executive and his family, will be served meals prepared on an enormous electric range which covers almost one side of the big green and white kitchen and which is rumored to have cost more than $5,000.

Mrs. Roosevelt, evidently, has the same problems that confront many an ordinary apartment dweller. She announced with obvious relief that Ida Allen and Elizabeth Moore, first and second cooks, brought here from the Governor's mansion in Albany, approve of the new "cook stove."

Their distinguished mistress admitted she has not tried out the range but said she had been told that after it got hot "you could cook on it without turning on the current again for several hours."

In addition to the elaborate kitchen and service quarters, Mrs. Roosevelt exhibited a new room for visiting tourists and told of a new electric invention installed at the request of the President.

The visitors' room was formerly the doctor's office. In it the Chief Executive has hung portraits of Washington, Lincoln and Longfellow. From time to time he will arrange exhibits which he thinks will interest the sightseers.

The invention mentioned by Mrs. Roosevelt is a set of electric coils, especially developed by the manufacturer to meet the President's request for exceptionally quick heating, a frequent White House necessity.

Once, when the First Lady opened the door of a storeroom, the touring reporters caught a glimpse of packages wrapped in Christmas paper and tied with bright ribbons. Apparently the solution to the where-to-hide-gifts problem is the same in the White House as it is in bungalows or flats.

Governors Predict Revolt

couple of years ago. That means something."

Well, then, for a report on the state of public opinion?

"Roosevelt will carry Iowa by a bigger vote than he did in 1932," Gov. Herring made the prediction with conviction.

Nebraska?

Gov. Cochran isn't such a good guesser on elections, he said. But the State is Democratic—although he noted that he like 'most everyone else, had been indorsing Republican Senator George W. Norris for a re-election.

"Nebraska will vote for Roosevelt," he said, and he smiled and noted that the American Institute of Public Opinion survey had said that a fortnight or so ago.

How about Republican sentiment? How about Republican candidates? Some are saying Gov. Alf M. Landon, of Kansas, is prety popular as a candidate.

The question turned to Gov. Cochran, of Nebraska. He was the more serious faced, the more inclined to qualify, the much more cautious of the two.

"I haven't heard anything about candidates," he said. "I haven't heard much about Landon. But, incidentally, and you might mention this—

"Do you know that Nebraska hasn't got a cent of bonded indebtedness, that we haven't imposed any new taxes, and that we've built a $10,000,000 new capitol? We never have had any indebtedness. We've built on a pay-as-you-go basis."

Both Governors stressed that the highway funds they were seeking would come out of the regular Federal highway grants and that they wanted only approval for the particular project—a $1,000,000 bridge that, Gov. Herring said, would carry 4,000 Council Bluff resident's to Omaha for work each day, that would replace a 50-year-old toll bridge, now collecting $700,000 a year in tolls.

Sound Banking Result of Laws, Adams Asserts

Senator Says U. S. Backing on Deposits Help Beat 'Panic' of 1933.

By the Associated Press.

Senator Alva B. Adams, in a radio speech on effects of recent bank legislation, last night said the "panic" of March, 1933, had been replaced by "a system of sound banks, supported by universal public confidence" as a result of the banking acts of 1933 and 1935.

The most important change in the Federal banking statutes made by these acts, Adams said, was the establishment of Federal deposit insurance.

"During the entire period of the existence of deposit insurance, both temporary and permanent, aggregating some 23 months," he said, "only 25 insured banks have closed."

Adams said "guaranty of deposits is, of course, not a guaranty of good banking."

"Past experience with some State deposit guaranty systems demonstrated that it might become an inducement to careless banking," he continued.

"The success of the Federal deposit insurance plan rests upon strict and severe supervision and regulation of banking operations in the United States."

"Must Recognize Duty."

He asserted bankers must be "forced to recognize their obligation to the public welfare and be trained to resist the pressure of friends, local sentiment and enthusiasm."

"Bankers," he said, "must run banks, not benevolent institutions to give away their money and that of their depositors. Universal local popularity is not always (if ever) evidence of a good banker."

Adams said bank deposits had increased about $8,000,000,000 since deposit insurance was started, but that loans and investments of banks had not kept pace with the increase of deposits.

He spoke of apprehension "in many quarters" that the resultant accumulation of unused money might become the basis of credit inflation, but said "these excess reserves may be regarded as an encouraging, rather than a discouraging sign."

The Senator said "a study of past depressions discloses that in nearly every, if not in every instance, recovery did not come until there had been a vast accumulation of unused funds in the hands of investors and banks, providing abundant capital at low interest rates for the revival and stimulation of business and commerce."

Meeting Today.

The continuing problem of huge excess bank reserves will be up for consideration again today at a meeting of thep residents of the Federal Reserve banks here.

The officials will gather in their capacity as members of the Reserve System's open-market committee, the function of which is to advise the Reserve banks on purchases and sales of Government securities as a means of controlling credit.

With $3,310,000,000 in excess reserves furnishing the basis for a credit boom of ten times that amount, the use of controls has been under discussion here for several weeks.

growth of the investigation last summer. The House Committee, headed by John J. O'Connor (Democrat), New York, and the Senate Lobby Committee, headed by Senator Hugo Black (Democrat), of Alabama, fought valiently for days for his services as a witness.

The contest occurred after Hopson appeared in Washington, following repeated disappearances, and after a nearly-violent scene in the new House Office Building, in which the utilities official escaped, with the aid of Washington policemen, the service of a Senate subpoena.

William C. Hill, of Boston, Hopson's attorney, who was cited with him on the contempt charge, made the reply to the committee's demand that Hopson produce his income figures by December 16. He said there must be "some misunderstanding" and that Hopson "has always been willing to co-operate with the committee."

O'Connor said that the letter was "entirely unsatisfactory" and "a quibble."

Said M. S. Had Data.

Hill said books containing the desired information have been in possession of "various Federal departments" and offered to assist the committee in examining them. He said the facts have been gone into at length with other Government departments.

O'Connor said he did not know that any other Government department had the desired information. He said Hill's letter was quite the opposite of co-operation."

The chairman turned the matter over to the other 13 members of the committee. There were reports that this body might cite him for contempt of the House. The Senate contempt charges still stand. They involve Hopson's failure to answer Senate committee questions.

Hopson contended in the House investigation last summer that the committee had no authority to inquire into the sources of his income.

Connor said Hopson and Hill agreed late to supply data within three weeks on the sources and amount of the former's income from the associated company.

FREENY'S HAVE TRIPLETS

Freeny Says—
On Connecticut Ave.

The right kind of styling, in these days when men are so extremely style conscious, is most important. And Washington men certainly know their style. We've learned a lot about taking cloth, linings, buttons, trimmings and turning them into garments that say "style," from the turn of the lapel to the hang of a trouser leg. We have not experimented with any personal whims or fancies. We have studied the trend of fashion centers, we have kept our ear to the ground right here in Washington, with the result that "styled by Freeny" means style authority. So much for styling. Let's discuss fabrics for a moment. Unless the pattern is correct, unless it wears well, unless it is in good taste, the entire effect of correct styling goes for naught. At Freeny's, the best fabrics from domestic and English looms are available. Consequently, your garment from Freeny's, while styled to the minute, does not sacrifice cloth quality. We notice in looking back over this that we are stressing "style" in this little chat. For those of our conservative dressers, we do not wish to infer that "styling" necessarily infers extremity or a bizarre model—rather it means the correct cut of clothes for each individual so that the finished effect of a suit or overcoat is one of good taste.

Going South?

If you are planning a trip to warmer climes, remember Freeny can outfit you in sport clothes, slacks, flannel trousers or any other clothing item in this category. Don't spoil a perfectly good winter vacation by making your old summer clothes do. Freshen up this department of your wardrobe by having us make some Southern clothing for you on the "double quick."

FULL DRESS . . .

Tailcoat, black or midnight blue, finished or unfinished worsted, dull silk lapels. Trousers with two medium braids set closely to match coat. Single or double breasted white washable waistcoat. For formal evenings after 6 p. m. remember: a Freeny full dress is the correct attire.

ANDREW ANDERSON

OSCAR ANDERSON

AXEL ANDERSON

Three Famous Brothers Join Staff For Your Personal Satisfaction

The Messrs. Anderson Bring Their Knowledge and Ideas in Smart Tailoring to You at Freeny's.

If Freeny's had conducted a search over the entire world they could not have found three men with more ability to make fine clothes than Andrew, Oscar and Anderson.

SENIOR

Andrew Anderson has studied and made so many styles that he has impaired his eyesight in so doing. Consequently, he knows the famous styles and makes from A to Z.

Oscar Anderson, his famous brother, has also garnered from the four corners of the world his interpretation of styles, weaves and patterns which he so conscientiously puts into effect.

Anderson, the last, but by no means least, contributes a vast source of information on men's clothing. These three men, together with Freeny's specialization in men's styling, will continue to prove their claims for greater consideration in the growing importance of smart tailored to measure clothing. The will and necessity for more detailed 1936 planning is met with new and smarter ideas in fabrics and fashions, each uniquely different and original in weave and pattern appeal.

Handles Only Finest of Cloth

In an exclusive interview with Mr. Freeny recently he put great stress on the fact that Freeny's has been direct importers of exclusive woolens for thirty-five years. They are tailored to your individual measure from the light, handsome and smart Freeny fabrics that have pleased Washington for a long period of time.

JUNIOR

The three Messrs. Anderson have had long experience in designing smartly tailored clothes and their services have been secured especially by us for you. Only when you have worn a Freeny suit can you appreciate its faultless fit and complete comfort. Yes, Freeny's handles only the best fabric materials, ready to be tailored to keep you looking smart and trim.

Prices Greatly Reduced Now

Here is your opportunity to get acquainted with Freeny's tailor-made clothes and at the same time know that they cost no more than many clothes of inferior quality. Soft construction is an ideal thing and it is one of the modern improvements in clothing; and at Freeny's you will find a real softness, yet definite smart appearance, in tailored to measure suits. By all means you should not miss seeing these new fabrics today.

Exclusive Styles In Suits Shown

Perhaps nothing illustrates this point so well as the introduction of the English drape several seasons ago. It was intended to achieve a certain definite effect, and was supposedly an interpretation of authentic English clothing. Patterning their clothes after the English, Freeny's put a definite drape in their smart tailored to measure clothes. The waistline was pulled in and the coat fitted smartly from head to hips. The greatest point of merit about these models is the fact that they inaugurated soft construction clothes in America.

Yet the soft construction is the ideal thing, and it is one of the modern improvements in clothing. It finds real favor in London. Fashions observers have spent many months in London in the places where the well-dressed Englishmen congregate. They have found the soft construction English Lounge Suit worn in London by men considered the world over to be well dressed, and they have brought this fashion to America.

Laval Disclaims Tricking Hoare In Peace Talks

Premier Angered by London Rumors of Ruse to Win Britain to Plan.

Copyright, 1935, by the United Press.

Paris, Dec. 16.—Premier Laval was angry tonight at rumors in London that he tricked British Foreign Secretary Sir Samuel Hoare into agreeing to the Franco-British proposals to make peace between Italy and Ethiopia.

The premier obtained permission to interrupt budget debate with a defense of his conduct in the international crisis. It was understood he would make a heated denial of the London reports.

The rumors across the channel said Laval won Hoare's assent by two false statements: 1. That, as spokesman for Premier Benito Mussolini of Italy, he was authorized to say that a League oil embargo would mean war with Italy. 2. That the French fleet is not ready to meet such attack and hence defense of the League in the Mediterranean must be borne by Britain.

Fantastic Rumors.

"Those fantastic rumors," the foreign office spokesman said tonight, "have nothing in common with truth."

Laval also is angry at the London Times' interpretation of the offer of a corridor to the seaport of Assab to Ethiopia. The Times said French shareholders in the Djibouti-Addis Ababa Railroad were protected by a secret plan to forbid Ethiopia to construct a railroad through the strip of ceded land. The paper referred to it as a "corridor for camels."

Authorities said that although the plan does not state specifically that Ethiopia may build a railroad to the sea, such construction is not forbidden. If necessary the French might agree to build a short line from Assab to Djibouti, connecting with the existing line, the spokesman said.

However, the railroad issue probably will not arise, for advices from Rome indicate Mussolini opposes ceding Assab to Ethiopia because the population—under the Italian flag for more than 50 years—might suffer under Ethiopia. In 1928 Italy offered Ethiopia free port facilities at Assab and it is understood this offer might be renewed. This would permit Italian customs officers to control flow of arms to the Ethiopians.

Envoy Queries Laval.

Italian Ambassador Vittorio Cerutti tonight sought clarification of several points from Laval. He was understood to have inquired particularly who would guarantee policing of the zone in southern Ethiopia to be set aside for Italian colonization and exploitation and a more exact description of the frontiers of the part of Tigre Province to be ceded to Italy.

In London Ambassador Dino Grandi sought similar information from the British foreign office, it was understood.

Ethiopian Minister Wolde Mariam received a message from his Emperor saying Ethiopia would not talk peace until the last Italian soldier had been withdrawn from his territory.

Chinese Riot Against Japanese

Protesting against formation of separate state from Central China (shaded), Chinese students rioted in Peiping yesterday. Meanwhile, Japanese-supported forces took Tangku, a vital North China seaport. Students Beaten In Peiping Riots Against Japan

Copyright, 1935, by the Associated Press.

Peiping (Tuesday), Dec. 17.—A night of fierce rioting against "Japanese aggression" in this ancient Chinese city left 60 student patriots reported wounded today and drew quick warnings from the Japanese military.

The Rengo (Japanese) News Agency reported Gen. Sung Cheh-Yuan, forced to postpone the inaugural meeting of his semi-autonomous council for Hopeh and Chahar provinces, announced he would expel Dr. Hu Shih, noted scholar and author, and President Chiang Meng-Lin of the National University of Peiping, to the south.

Both are American educated.

Thousands of demonstrators from outlying universities marooned in bitter wintry weather inside the locked city, howled anti-Japanese slogans throughout the night.

Police charged the rioters with swords, gun butts and fire hoses and the Japanese military attache, Lieut. Col. Tan Takahashe, told Mayor Chin Teh-Chun the demonstrations violated a Sino-Japanese understanding and must be halted.

As the riots raged, Kalgan, Great Wall Gateway City a little more than 100 miles northwest of Peiping, was the scene of the newest Japanese military seizure.

Japanese troops, armed with bayonets and machine guns, were thrown around the Kalgan Railway Station and a virtual state of emergency was in effect.

Natives feared that hostilities which have raged recently in southeastern Chahar Province might spread to Kalgan, on the Chahar-Hopeh border. The Japanese troops had "peacefully invaded the city late last week.

Their seizure of the important railway facilities was almost coincident with the taking over of Tangku, vital north China seaport east of Tientsin, by forces of the Japanese-supported east Hopeh Autonomous state.

Ruled by Yin Ju-Keng.

This Autonomous state, set up recently in a score of counties comprising the former north China demilitarized zone, is ruled by Gen. Yin Ju-Keng. It has remained apart from the semi-onomous council for Hopeh and Chahar provinces, set up by Chinese leaders under Gen Sung Cheh-Yuan as a compromise on autonomy demands.

Seizure of the railway station of Kalgan and the port of Tangku put the Japanese in control of both terminals of a 200-mile rail line extending through both Chahar and Hopeh Provinces, through both Peiping and Tientsin.

In addition, Chinese reports said the eastern Chahar hostilities be tween Chinese and Manchukuoan forces had broken out again.

(In Nanking, Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek, the central Chinese military overlord, formally took over premiership of the republic, relinquished by the assassin-wounded Wang Ching-Wei. He pledged the government to efforts for maintenance of peace, but said it "will not hesitate to make the last sacrifice for safeguarding the nation.")

Morgenthau Orders Double Tax Reports

By the Associated Press.

Secretary Morgenthau yesterday formally approved a regulation of the Bureau of Internal Revenue requiring duplicates of income-tax returns filed on and after January 1.

Thereafter, taxpayers will file an extra copy on a duplicate green sheet which will be available to any official, body or commission lawfully charged with the administration of local tax laws. The extra copy will be held in the office of the local collector.

Delivering opinions in nine tax cases yesterday, Justice McReynolds announced from the bench that a lower court ruling was reversed. A check showed the Supreme Court upheld the lower court decision.

Italian Planes Bomb Village, Defenders' Base

Heavy Damage Inflicted at Neghelli, Supply Source for Demtu's Army.

By the Associated Press.

With the Italian army at Dolo (by courier to Mogadiscio, Italian Somaliland) Dec. 16.—Airplanes of Italy's southern army, digging in for a momentarily-expected attack, struck today by bombing the Ethiopian town of Neghelli.

Jubilant pilots said when they returned that the damage was heavy, but they were unable to estimate the number of casualties. Neghelli is the source of supplies of the rear guard of Ras Desta Demtu's army. The Ethiopian chieftain is a son-in-law of Emperor Haile Selassie.

For days the Italian leaders have anticipated an attack by Desta Demtu and his 40,000 warriors.

Although it was hit by Ethiopian fire, an Italian plane returned safely to its base at Lugh, Italian Somaliland, a short distance from Dolo.

The Italians hoped by the air attack to prevent supplies and reinforcements from reaching the army of Ras Desta.

Pilots said the Ethiopians are adopting tactics of American Indians as they learn how ot avoid the deadly bombs from the air. They are keeping to the cover of trees and marching only at night, under the shield of darkness. During the day they hide.

Silas Strawn Denies Candidacy for Senate

Chicago, Dec. 16 (AP).—Silas Strawn today denied reports he might be a candidate for Senator with the statement "too many of my clients have two pairs of pants." The noted attorney, former president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, asserted that the circumstances raised the "deadly assumption that I associate with the wealthy."

A member of the Republican Party's committee of 16 men appointed to raise funds for the 1936 campaign, Strawn said he intended "to do everything I can for the Republican Party, but not as a candidate."

Revolt Over Peace Plan

and referred the question to the speaker, who replied that such phrasing would not be permitted. Eden appealed to the House to wait for Thursday's debate.

He assured the House, meantime, that the government adhered to its previous statements, that any settlement of the Italo-Ethiopian war must be consistent with the League Covenan. Questioners Thursday probably will want to know how the partition of Ethiopia proposed by Hoare and Laval would be consistent with the Covenant.

Eden also insured questioners that the foreign office was making inquiries regarding a news bulletin of an "allegedly tendentious character wirelessed in England from Rome for United States and Canadian listeners."

Baldwin conferred at No. 10 Downing street with South Africa's League delegate, Charles T. Te Water; First Lord of the Admiralty Lord Eyres-Monsell, War Minister Duff-Cooper, Board of Trade Chairman Walter Runciman and Chancellor of the Exchequer Neville Chamberlain.

Would Withdraw Fleet.

A cabinet meeting proposed for tonight was postponed. Eyres-Monsell was reported by a well-informed source to have advised Baldwin to withdraw a large portion of the British fleet from the Mediterranean before Christmas.

Hoare arrived at Croydon Airdrome after cutting short his vacation in the Swiss mountains. A patch covered his nose, broken in a skating accident.

The Labor Party this afternoon decided against a motion to censure the government for the Hoare-Laval proposals, merely declaring the plan contrary to the government's pledges in hope of swinging some members of government parties—who hold a majority of 250—to the attack.

The stock exchange experienced fairly heavy selling of British government issues due to uneasiness over the international situation, 2½ per cent consols losing ¾ to 86.

Loring Inquiry Turns to Nearby Eating Places

Stomach Analysis Shows Food Not Eaten at Home, Police Say.

Police last night were working on the theory that Corinna Loring, 27-year-old bride-to-be, went to a barbecue stand just before she was murdered on the night of November 4.

It was reported that an analysis of Corinna's stomach indicated she had eaten olives and celery shortly before her death. Mrs. Florence Loring, her mother, said that Corinna had not eaten such foods in her Mount Rainier home that evening.

The police concluded, therefore, that she had gone to one of the many barbecue stands in the vicinity of Mount Rainier.

Last night three officers, Police Chief Eugene Plumer of Mount Rainier, Sergt. Leo Vogelsang, of Baltimore, and Sergt. Ralph Brown, a Prince Georges County man, visited all the barbecue stands in the vicinity, asking waitresses if they recalled serving anybody resembling Corinna.

They were primarily interested, of course, in the appearance of Corinna's escort, who, they theorized, must have been her murderer.

Lieut. Joseph H. Itzel, the Baltimore detective in charge of the investigation, was engaged last night in checking up on the stenographic transcripts of testimony given by various witnesses in the case. He was looking for discrepancies.

Silver Spring Zoning Fight Threshed Out; Charges of 'Liar' Exchanged at Hearing

Commissioners Expected to Announce Decision At Session Today.

Montgomery County Bureau of The Post, 1111 Oak Ave., Silver Spring, Md. Telephone Shepherd 2363.

Charges of "liar" were hurled back and forth last night in the packed Liquor Control Building in Silver Spring at a hearing before the Montgomery County commissioners on the question of whether six lots near the Montgomery Blair High School should be rezoned from commercial to residential.

For three and a half hours the commisisoners, sitting as a district council, listened to pleas from 18 civic and school groups that the presence of stores at any kind near the school would be a moral hazard for the children.

Leader of the rezoning group, J. Bond Smith, former counsel of the Montgomery County National Park and Planning Commission, said that the value of the property was not the question but that it was a matter of morals and safety.

"This is a case of human rights versus property rights," he concluded.

Frederick Stohlman, representing the property owner, Eugene Smith, brought out testimony to show that, if the property was rezoned to residential it would drop in value from 25 cents a foot to 10 cents a foot.

"If this property is rezoned," he said, "it will establish a precedent that would make all zoning subject to the whims of persons other than the owner."

The charges of "liar" were hurled after Louis Rouleau, an architect living in Linden, charged that the petitions circulated among property owners had misrepresented the facts.

It is expected that a decision will be reached by the commisisoners and announced at their meeting today.

Nine witnesses led by Mayor William McBain and Town Councilman Other Trundle, of Gaithersburg, appeared before the Montgomery County Liquor Control Board yesterday to defend conduct of Charles Collins' place in Gaithersburg.

Collins had been cited to show cause why his license to sell beer should not be suspended or revoked for alleged sale of beer to an intoxicated person.

The defense witnesses declared Collins had refused constantly to sell beer after hours and to intoxicated persons. They claimed the person to whom Collins was alleged to have sold beer is afflicted so that he staggers habitually and that Collins had refused to sell beer to him.

Policeman M. D. Dayhoff, one of the prosecution witnesses, is in Frederick testifying at a murder trial, and a policeman, another witness, is in the hospital with pneumonia. The Liquor Board continued the hearing until the prosecution witnesses are available.

The board refused to grant a beer license to the National Guard Armory at Silver Spring. The board held a large number of the patrons of the skating rink housed by the armory are minors; that 25 per cent of the members of the Service Company, First Infantry, are under age and that in view of the many protests by church and civic groups, to grant the license would be against public policy.

A meeting of all beer distributors of the county is to be called by the board to work out a simplification of the monthly beer sales report.

Curtis L. Ward, 39, Rockville businessman, is dead at his home after an illness of less than a week with a throat infection.

Mr. Ward, one of the organizers of the Rockville Fuel & Feed Co., was secretary-treasurer of that organization for ten years. He was active in community and civic affairs, and was a charter member of the Rockville Rotary Club, past master of the Rockville Masonic Lodge, a member of the town council and the chamber of commerce.

Surviving Mr. Ward are his wife, Mrs. Melanie Ward, formerly Miss Linkenhoker, of Roanoke, Va.; his mother, Mrs. Hattie L. Ward, of Rockville; two brothers and two sisters, Miss Mildred Ward and Mrs. G. Edington Hall and Norman E. and G. Dudley Ward, all of Rockville.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow at 2 p. m. from the residence. Burial will be in Forest Oak Cemetery at Gaithersburg.

Moving of equipment today into the new press building of the Washington Missionary College, Takoma Park, Md., is the final step in the completion of the structure. The fireproof building cost $27,000.

William L. Green, treasurer, announced yesterday that it will be ready for occupancy next week. Approximately 50 students will take up their work in printing.

Pledges of more than $6,000 were received yesterday by teachers and students of the college in the chapel exercises. The fund, Mr. Green said, will be used for the new press and normal buildings, as well as for refitting and equipment in the science department.

More than 1,000 children of Takoma Park and its surrounding communities will attend the matinee benefit performance at Takoma Theater, Butternut street, Takoma Park, D. C., tomorrow afternoon, at 3:30. The event is being spansored by the Takoma Lions Club.

Organization of a Junior Izaak Walton League Chapter at the Montgomery Blair High School, Silver Spring, Md., has been effected, with 66 boys and girls as charter members. Dr. M. D'Arcy Magee, head of the District of Columbia Chapter and vice president of the national league, was the principal speaker. Members of the new chapter have planned several projects, including erection of bird shelters and feeding stations and landscaping the school grounds. Prof. Owen Knight, a member of the faculty, who is sponsoring the chapter, said he considered the institution ideally located for Junior Izaak Walton activities, being on a 13-acre tract adjacent to Sligo Park.

Mrs. Ralph S. Bubb was unanimously elected president of the Woman's Guild of Grace Church, Woodside, at the annual meeting in the parish house. Other new officers are Mrs. Hugh Buckingham, vice president; Mrs. Howard P. Bailey, treasurer; Mrs. Marshall Lehman, recording secretary; Mrs. Elmer E. Boyner, corresponding secretary, and Miss Grace Barnes, auditor.

The Home Interest Club of Forest Glen will hold its annual Christmas party tomorrow afternoon at the home of Mrs. Lavinia Engle, Forest Glen. Mrs. Norman Engel will assist as hostess.

The Junior Players of Sherwood High School, Sandy Spring, will present a Christmas entertainment, "Mrs. Clinton's Money," at 8 o'clock tonight in the school auditorium.

The school's annual candlelight service will be held Thursday night at the school.

The Christmas dance for the benefit of the club's welfare work will be held by the Wednesday Club of Sandy Spring December 30 from 9 to 12 at the Sherwood High School. Members of the committee are Miss Sue Thomas, Mrs. Richard W. Janney, Mrs. Douglas Whitlock, Miss Alice McReynolds, Mrs. Austin LaMar.

EXTRA!

A FINE CAR SAVES YOU MONEY... Chrysler IS $760* And up, List at Factory

Just a few extra dollars will buy you dozens of extra advantages in a Chrysler.

You can step into the fine-car class with a big, new Chrysler Six for as little as $760, list at factory, Detroit.

You get the good things first in a Chrysler. That means you drive a modern car . . . a car that stays modern while other cars are catching up.

Consider hydraulic brakes! Chrysler owners have enjoyed them for twelve years! And Chrysler has developed and perfected them . . . knows how to build them as no other maker possibly can.

Floating Power! It's far, far ahead in banishing the wear and tear of engine vibration. Safety Steel bodies . . . jointless, squeakless. Valve seat inserts to save money on valve grinds. Pistons that are anodic plated to guard against scuffing or scoring.

You save money on gasoline too! The big, handsome Chrysler Six actually gives gas mileage as great and often greater than many smaller cars.

Drive a 1936 Chrysler. See if you won't be money ahead by investing a few extra dollars to get all the advantages of stepping into the fine-car class!

Needy Children Are Given Party At Girls' School

Gifts, Candy Distributed at Arlington Hall Junior College.

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 509. Clarendon, Va.

Following their usual custom, students of Arlington Hall Junior College for Girls, at Ballston, brought Christmas cheer to more than two-score needy children last night.

Surrounding the huge Christmas tree in the dining hall were large baskets filled with candies, nuts and fruit, in addition to packages containing gifts from the students. They were distributed by Miss Louise Spadero, member of the senior class, acting as Santa Claus.

The children, 6 years of age and under, were brought to the college by Mrs. Mae E. Jacobs, superintendent of public welfare in the county.

The college will close for the holidays tomorrow noon.

Upholding action of last Friday opposing establishment of a liquor store in the county, members of the county board and County Manager Roy S. Braden will go to Richmond today to present their view to Gov. Peery and the State alcoholic beverage control board.

County Board Chairman B. M. Smith said that if such a store must come to Arlington County that he will vigorously protest its being located in Clarendon, heart of the county's business section. He said that of all places in the county Clarendon should not be selected, as it is in the vicinity of churches, schools, theaters and stores which hundreds of women and children visit daily.

J. A. Deuterman, of Arlington, was last night appointed full-time secretary of the Arlington County Chamber of Commerce by the board of directors. Mr. Deuterman, formerly associated with the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co., will assume his new duties immediately. He will begin an extensive membership campaign.

Arlington Post, No. 139, American Legion, announced the American Legion gold medal for civic achievement will be awarded with appropriate ceremonies each Labor Day to the member of the Arlington County police and fire departments, respectively, who has performed the outstanding act of heroism in line of duty during the preceding year.

This award, made possible by the donation of Walter E. Holmes, first vice commander of Arlington Post, will be known as the "Holmes Medal." The annual recipients will be determined by a committee composed of representatives of the police and fire departments, the press and the American Legion.

In commenting on the award, Mr. Holmes said, "The American Legion believes that the courage of the guardians of the lives and property of the citizens of our community should be given recognition. In conferring these medals the legion pays its homage to the courage of the men who daily risk their lives for the safety of Arlington County."

County Judge B. M. Hedrick sentenced Clifton Gill, of Ballston, to serve three months in the county jail in addition to a fine of $100 on charges of driving an automobile under the influence of liquor. Bond was set at $500 pending an appeal to the circuit court.

H. Burton Bates, jr., of Boy Scout Troop No. 103, Lyon Village, has been appointed junior assistant scoutmaster.

The Arlington County Bar Association will hold a luncheon meeting today at 12:30 p. m. in the Arlington Restaurant on Wilson boulevard, Clarendon.

The Arlington County Business and Professional Woman's Club will hold its monthly dinner meeting today at 6:30 p. m. at the George Mason Hotel in Alexandria.

Appointment of a committee to aid the needy of the community was announced by the Clarendon fire department. The committee, which is to be a permanent one, will comprise the active members of the department. The group will collect foodstuffs, clothing, bedding, household furniture and toys for Christmas. Cash contributions also will be sought.

Contributions should be sent to the fire house, 1006 North Hudson street. By communicating with Chief M. Saunders Assistant Chief C. B. Austin, or Capt. M. Wunder the gifts will be collected.

Father Dies in Giving Daughter Blood in Vain

Webster City, Iowa, Dec. 16 (AP).—Fred Beisner, 62, who gave his blood in a futile attempt to save his daughter's life, is dead—victim of his gift.

Beisner's daughter, Mrs. James Kennedy, bore triplet sons a month ago. Beisner submitted to a transfusion in an effort to save her life, but she died. So did two of her babies. Then Beisner developed blood poisoning and died.

Wife Tried in Slaying Of Husband's Secretary

New York, Dec. 16 (AP).—Mrs. Etta Reisman, 35, Queens housewife, went on trial today on a second-degree murder charge in the shooting of her husband's pretty 23-year-old secretary.

As prospective jurors were questioned in Queens County court, it was indicated that Mrs. Heisman's attorneys would invoke the "unwritten law."

Christ Church Is Presented Century-Old Parish Record

Alexandrian Finds Relic in Effects of Great-Uncle Who Died in 1879.

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU.
907 Prince St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Alexandria 523.

Louis A. de Cazenove last night presented the vestry of Christ Episcopal Church an old parish record of the church, covering the years 1828 to 1845, in the handwriting of two rectors of the church during this time. They were the Rev. Dr. John P. McGuire and the Rev. Dr. Charles B. Dana.

Mr. de Cazenove recently discovered the record among the books and other effects of his great uncle, William Cazenove, who died in 1877. William Cazenove was registrar of Christ Church vestry for many years and probably removed the book from the church at the beginning of the War Between the States, during which other records were either stolen or destroyed.

Among the many interesting entries in the book are those of the baptisms of several of Gen. Robert E. Lee's children.

The Rev. Harry Lee Doll, rector of the church, accepted the book for the vestry.

The annual Christmas presentation of St. Agnes school will be at 3:30 p. m. Thursday, in Emmanuel Episcopal Church, Braddock. It will be entitled "The Miracle of the White Friars," a twelfth century mystery, written and directed by Mrs. Helen Arny Macan, headmistress of the school, and Mrs. Caroline Ely, of the English faculty.

The cast will include Lilliam Page Martin, Molly Thompson, Helen Henry, Lis Lindsey, Mary Brookings, Anne Cleveland, Virginia Cortell, Mary Elizabeth Jell, Dorothy Catrow, Bertha Cochran, Emma Lipps, Mary Miller, Emily Heslop, Betty Sinclair, Mary Hewitt, Sally Gorman, Agnes Washington, Sally Walton, Nancy Washington, Elizabeth Giddings, Lucy Lenox Ashton, Alberta Thomas, Nancy Vest, Betty Roberts, Evelyn Dillard, Nancy Lee Tucker, Nancy Ely, Polly Bryan, Barbara Hulfish, Punch Ralston, Mary Vernon Bundy and Sandy Zabriskie.

The meeting of Martha Washington Chapter, Order Eastern Star, will be held at 8 o'clock this evening in the Masonic Temple, Cameron street. This meeting will be in honor of past matrons and past patrons.

A Christmas party will close the meeting, when members of the Job's Daughters and the Order of De Molay will be guests of the chapter.

C. Page Waller, of Alexandria, president of the Retail Merchants Association of Virginia, issued a statement yesterday to the effect that the organization is organizing forces throughout the State for a vigorous battle against the retail sales tax at the next General Assembly, which meets on January 8.

Mr. Waller declared that economy in government expenditures with a reallocation of funds now available would make such a tax unnecessary for an old-age pension.

The report of the annual Red Cross membership drive in November shows that $908.47 was realized. Martin E. Greene, business manager of the Alexandria Chamber of Commerce, was general chairman. The members of the Alexandria Women's Club were in charge of ward workers and bank solicitation.

The annual meeting of the George Washington Birthday Association will be held at 8 p. m. tomorrow in the rooms of the Chamber of Commerce, when officers will be chosen and plans will be discussed for a parade in 1936 to celebrate the birthday of George Washington.

Shocks for Fugitives.

Danville, Va., Dec. 16 (AP).—Aroused by the escape of three prisoners from its city farm, Danville today prepared to block future escapes by stringing an electrical wire along the top of the fence surrounding the farm. It will carry enough current to jolt a would-be fugitive without killing him.

FairfaxCitizens To Seek $1,000 For Rural Park

Recreation Hall and Other Buildings Planned for Kincheloe Tract.

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST.
P. O. Box 245, Fairfax, Va.
Phone Alexandria 43-F-31.

A drive to raise at least $1,000 to start work on the rural recreation reserve in Fairfax County will be started within the next few days, it has been announced by the county committee in charge of the project.

A 40-acre site for the reserve near Clifton Station was donated two weeks ago by Mrs. James U. Kincheloe, wife of the county commissioner of revenue. Funds are needed for the erection of a recreation hall and other buildings.

James U. Kincheloe has advised the committee that as soon as it is successful in raising $900 he will contribute the remaining $100.

WPA to Supply Labor.

County Agricultural Agent H. B. Derr has stated that labor for the project will be furnished by the Works Progress Administration, which has offered to co-operate in building the reserve.

A. Le Grand Stafford, secretary of the Fairfax County Chamber of Commerce, told the committee he will donate up to 100 loads of gravel.

A legal committee named to work with the county committee includes W. Lewis Leigh and C. Pembroke Pettit, Fairfax attorneys, and Miss Mavis Cobb. Edgar Littleton, cashier of the National Bank of Fairfax, has been named treasurer, and Mrs. Lewis Leigh, secretary.

The county committee plans to meet again January 9 in the court house when representatives from all county organizations are expected to report their contributions and pledges.

Any organization not represented on the committee is asked to name a delegate at once, and those desiring further information regarding the project may get in touch with County Agent Derr, Miss Alice Crutchfield, local home demonstration agent, or a member of the committee.

The Young Democratic Club of Fairfax County will hold its annual election of officers tonight in the courthouse. A program for the coming year also will be discussed. James C. King, chairman of the membership committee, has announced that his committee will bring up the question of dividing the club's membership into two groups—active and inactive. Under the proposed arrangement only those whose dues are paid will be entitled to such privileges as voting and representing the club at conventions. Members whose dues are in arrears will be counted on the roll but their membership privileges will be suspended during delinquency.

Jackson Day Dinner.

Plans will be discussed for holding a Jackson Day dinner in the Herndon High School on January 8 to raise funds for the national Democratic committee.

Although the club has adopted a policy of having its officers serve only one term, it is expected the name of the present president, Franklin S. Gicker, jr., will be placed in nomination, since he has served only a portion of a full term, having been elected to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Judge Paul E. Brown.

The high school at Herndon has organized a glee club with a membership of 65. The following officers were elected: Betty McGuire, president; Dee Heglar, vice president; Louise Cockerill, secretary and treasurer. The leaders of the club are Mrs. Ernest Gibson and E. J. Heglar.

A. W. Bibby Dies.

London, Dec. 16 (AP).—Arthur Wilson Bibby, 89, prominent figure in British shipping, died today. He was chairman of the Bibby Steamship Co., Ltd., and senior partner in Bibby Bros. & Co. He had also been a director of the Canada Shipping Co., and of many other enterprises.

Legion to Hold Holiday Events At Mt. Rainier

Charity Work and Annual Celebration Planned by Huntemann Post.

Preparations are being made by Charles F. Huntmann Post, American Legion, of Mount Rainier, Md., for the Christmas season. Aside from its annual community Christmas tree and celebration, the post will distribute baskets of food to the needy and give toys to the children.

Through the co-operation of Sidney B. Lust, local theater operator, a toy matinee will be held at the Cameo Theater, Thirty-fourth street and Rhode Island avenue, Saturday at 10 a. m. "Babes in Toyland" will be the feature picture. There will be short subjects and comedies. The price of admission will be a toy, clothing or food.

A call has been issued by Harry J. Miller, commander of the post, for citizens to forward names of needy persons to Eugene B. Plumer, past commander, or George Giddens, past adjutant, of the post.

Exercises and carol singing will be held at the community tree at Thirty-fourth and Perry streets and Rhode Island avenue at 6 p. m., December 24. The combined choirs of the local churches, under direction of Llewelyn B. Gordon, will sing.

The Rev. Fred L. Miller, pastor of Mount Rainier Christian Church, was given a gold watch in honor of the fourth anniversary of his pastorate by his congregation after the Sunday night service.

Presentation was made by Thomas J. Llewellyn, president of the men's department. Mrs. Miller, wife of the pastor, was given with a hostess cart by Mrs. C. E. Emory, president of the women's department.

Mrs. Edna H. Pitts has been elected president of the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Cottage City Volunteer Fire Department. Other officers named include Mrs. John S. White, vice president; Mrs. S. Z. Tayman, secretary, and Mrs. Martin DeWaters, treasurer.

How To Create Employment.

Stockholders of the Jones & Laughlin Steel Corporation have been asked to approve a $40,000,000 expansion program, to be financed by a new bond issue. The proceeds of the projected loan would be used to build a sheet and strip mill, at a cost of $25,000,000, and to cover other capital outlays, in addition to retiring a small amount of outstanding bonds.

If authorized, this offering will be the largest one made for the provision of new capital since the passage of the securities act of 1933. Most of the new corporate issues, whether large or small, that have recently come upon the market have been for refunding purposes. New capital offerings accounted for only $336,800,000 of the total volume of corporate securities, amounting to $2,100,000,000, floated during the first eleven months of this year.

Unlike refunding issues, which merely pave the way for subsequent capital expansion by lightening the burden of fixed charges resting upon industrial concerns, new capital offerings constitute a direct demand for raw materials and labor. In carrying out its plan for erecting a large mill in Pittsburgh, the Jones & Laughlin company will give employment to thousands of workers directly and indirectly, both before and after completion of the new plant.

The same spirit of optimism was reflected in the recent announcement of the United States Steel Corporation forecasting an expenditure of $140,000,000 upon the improvement of its plant and equipment in the near future. Such outlays, whether financed out of surplus funds or by sales of new issues, are a most effective means of increasing employment not only within the steel industry but in all those heavy industries that supply the machinery and materials required for carrying out an expansionist program.

The dormant state of the capital market has been one of the most serious deterrents to the major business recovery essential to reduce excessive unemployment in the heavy industries. Evidence that opportunities for profitable investment of new capital are multiplying is, therefore, a highly encouraging development, holding out promise that the unemployment problem will be greatly mitigated as soon as the confidence necessary to revival of business enterprise is established.

An Unpopular Tax.

The growing hostility to sales taxes evidenced by the recent repeal of the New Jersey measure is again manifest by the opposition of New York City residents to the local 2 per cent levy on retail sales. Mayor LaGuardia, who led the fight against a Federal sales tax when he was a member of Congress, is now the outstanding defender of the municipal sales levy. He admits that it is not easy to "swallow," in view of his record, but he is faced by conditions that have overcome his objections to the principle of the tax. The chief claim he makes on its behalf is that it can be counted upon to produce revenue. That is a major virtue in these times.

A large and growing number of States have come to rely upon sales taxes to supplement inadequate current revenues. Ultimately the Federal Government may also have to turn to such levies in order to balance the budget. The imposition of a Federal sales tax would unquestionably be brought nearer if the Supreme Court should decide that the AAA processing taxes are invalid. These latter levies are, as a matter of fact, a peculiarly burdensome kind of special sales taxes, largely shifted to buyers of processed commodities such as flour and cotton cloth. A general manufacturers' sales tax would be more equitable in its incidence, and could be counted upon to yield larger returns. Moreover, it would provide the most feasible means of exacting a contribution from individuals who now escape direct Federal taxes.

Nevertheless, the Federal Government should be extremely cautious about invading a field of taxation upon which the States have come to rely more and more. Federal sales taxes, superimposed upon similar State and possibly municipal taxes, would have to be most carefully adjusted and apportioned to prevent industry from being overwhelmed by duplicate impositions. If a Federal sales tax provides the only feasible alternative to an unbalanced budget, it is obviously the lesser of two evils. But before Congress turns to it, every effort should be made to cut the Federal deficit by reducing the volume of spending.

Investigating Relief Methods.

Republican members of the House Appropriations Committee are preparing to demand an investigation into the activities of Federal relief agencies. Such an inquiry would be extremely useful if undertaken for the purpose of reforming relief policies and improving methods of administration. On the other hand, if a Congressional investigation should be ordered primarily with a view to unearthing instances of graft, it would be of little value except as a political muckraking scheme.

Scandalous waste and dishonest misappropriation of funds can undoubtedly be found by those in search of evidence. When billions of dollars of public money are hastily disbursed under the pressure of an emergency, a certain amount of graft is unavoidable. There is no doubt, however, that Administrator Hopkins and Secretary Ickes have done their utmost to eradicate such evils. They have probably been as successful in their endeavors as any public officials could be, working under similar handicaps. The losses chargeable to dishonesty, moreover, are relatively insignificant compared to those that result from incompetent methods of administering relief.

A properly conducted Congressional investigation should be designed to bring out the defects of systems and policies that make wasteful disbursements unavoidable and put a premium upon dishonesty. The public has been given very little exact information concerning the operation of the Federal relief system, and the relation between the WPA and other governmental agencies. It would be interesting to know, for instance, whether the painstaking work of the National Resources Board has had much influence upon the selection of projects allocated.

It is likewise important to ascertain what principles or policies, if any, have guided Federal relief agencies in apportioning funds among the States and localities. All available data indicate that pure opportunism rather than any considered plan of action has determined how much should be allotted to each locality, and how much should be asked as local supplementary relief contributions.

Former President Hoover last night made a strong plea for decentralization of relief, citing figures indicating the high overhead costs and relative inadequacy of a centralized Federal system. His criticism suggests a fruitful line of inquiry which could be made to yield more reliable facts and figures than those now accessible to the public.

Any Congressional investigation, therefore, ought to be conducted with a view to unearthing essential information bearing upon the relative merits of various methods of administering relief. It would be sheer waste of time, from the public point of view, to delve into relief scandals for purely partisan purposes.

First Business.

Two stories which appeared yesterday in almost adjacent columns of The Post had more than a chance relationship. One reported that the week-end was marked by a disgraceful wave of holdups throughout the city; the other that Representative Jennings Randolph will ask the House District Committee to place the deferred proposals of its sub-committee on crime at the head of its agenda list. The incidents link together as naturally as pain and medicine.

This is not to say that the sub-committee's recommendations necessarily represent the complete solution for the urgent crime problem of the District. But certainly they point the way. Measures designed to curb gambling, to improve the parole system and to raise the standards of police court juries cannot be entirely unworthy of consideration. Careful suggestions designed to ward off bribery, to improve the efficiency of the Police Department and to provide more rigorous punishment for habitual criminals deserve something better than pigeonholing.

Representative Randolph deserves the united support of Washingtonians in his effort to have the Crime Commission recommendations receive early consideration by the forthcoming Congress. The closest public attention will be given to any further attempts to obstruct the clean-up movement.

Art From Coke.

In 1871 a young man of 22 applied at a Pittsburgh bank for a loan of $10,000 with which to buy coke fields. The bank ordered inquiry made into the character of this youthful borrower and into his business. A report came back giving good ratings to the properties and the management of them, together with the information that the applicant might be "a little too enthusiastic about pictures, but not enough to hurt."

Last week the rightness of this early estimate of Henry Clay Frick found eminent confirmation. In New York City, the Frick mansion, containing what is generally considered to be one of the finest art collections in the country, was thrown open for the first time to the public. Fulfilling a bequest made by the late steel magnate (coke led to steel), the masterpieces and the building in which they are displayed have been made forever available for "the use and benefits of all persons whomsoever." It represents a $50,000,000 gift. In truth, the enthusiasm of the young coke producer for "pictures" did not "hurt" his industrial genius; nor, presumably, vice versa.

Appreciation for this considerable addition to our cultural heritage will not be wanting. It would be foolish, of course, to indulge in the illusion that the opening of such galleries to the public automatically diffuses culture over the land. But it does enrich the experience of many who are art-conscious, as the dedication to the public welfare of the Altman, the Morgan, the Havemeyer and other collections of art treasures has proved. Washington has a number of similar collections to which will soon be added a national gallery of art, initiated by Andrew Mellon.

There are many ways in which large fortunes can be devoted to the public welfare. The idea behind Mr. Frick's bequest can best be stated in his own words:

> The American people are fond—and properly so—of going to Europe, chiefly to see the famous paintings and other works of art there. I have tried to bring some of them here, and will leave the whole collection along with my house and the additions I am building to it, for the benefit of the people.

A New President At Prague.

Thomas Garrigue Masaryk created a state. He also preserved a republic. When his political activities began, the advocates of Czechoslovakian independence had many viewpoints. But few, if any, of them have failed to admit the debt their aspirations ultimately owed to Masaryk's consolidating will and ability to achieve.

When the time came for a constitution, President Masaryk's influence produced a liberal document. For seventeen years he has steered his country within the limits of that organic law, through storms, not yet abated, of dictatorial tendencies. Resigning the presidency at the age of 85, this grand old man now asks that Edouard Benes be chosen as his successor. Czechoslovakia's presidential elections are conducted by the National Assembly. And balloting will take place tomorrow in the historic Wladislav Hall of the Castle of Prague.

There is nothing surprising in Dr. Masaryk's request. He and Dr. Benes have much in common, and have worked in harmony to make Czechoslovakia a stable and universally respected nation. But neither is there cause for surprise in the opposition which manifests itself against raising the brilliant Minister of Foreign Affairs to the presidency.

The nationalism of Masaryk most evidently expressed itself in the foundation of the country; the nationalism of Benes has drawn Czechoslovakia deep into the cauldron of European politics. France owes much to Benes for the formation of the Little Entente. He it is who has maintained the united front of this Central European grouping against any favors from Geneva to the powers defeated in the World War.

Consequently, the Slovak and Hungarian elements in his own country regard Benes as more Czech than Slovak, and as inimical to the Magyar minority. While the anti-fascists assert that his nationalism may become national-socialism, the semi-Nazi Henlein party has voiced a dread lest his Francophile tendencies should dangerously commit the first Czechoslovakian Republic still deeper to the Third Republic of France.

Nevertheless, this opposition is scarcely likely to triumph over the will of "the father of his country." Masaryk's preference would go far to insure the election of Benes, even if the latter were a commonplace figure instead of a most outstanding leader in his own right.

Sheepskin And Pigskin.

Eleven of the 13 colleges comprising the Southeastern Conference have voted to recognize athletic (i. e., football) ability in the assignment of financial assistance to students. It has been a general impression that subsidization of halfbacks was a business reserved for the more back-slapping type of alumnus. But the fact that the Southeastern Conference hails the move as the end of a practice too long conducted on a sub rosa basis suggests otherwise. In any case, nothing now may be said against the honesty of the conference members.

Nothing may be said against their honesty, but much should be said regarding their deficient sense of proportion. How this vote can fail to give added emphasis to the less desirable aspects of the Saturday sport it is difficult to conceive. Certain it is that when two applicants present themselves for financial assistance and one is a backfield star while the other shines only in the classroom, non-academic considerations will swing the balance in favor of the athlete. If this be higher education, let the Southeastern Conference make the most of it.

Vanderbilt disagreed with and Sewanee refrained from committing itself on the thesis that "athletic ability should receive consideration in determining student values." But Alabama, Auburn, Florida, Georgia Tech, Georgia, Kentucky, Louisiana State, Mississippi State, Mississippi, Tennessee and Tulane subscribed heartily to the theory that the boy who can pass and tackle well is ipso facto a valuable addition to their halls.

So be it. But it is not without significance that these latter institutions are far from being noted as scholastic leaders of the country. Not in June but in November, their flowering.

With reference to the many allotments being made by the Government through AAA, WPA and PWA, those who have to put instead of take are beginning to mutiny on the bounty.

A U. S.-Japan Alliance.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: According to The Post of December 14, the British-Japanese parley on warships is unpleasant news to the United States. Uncle Sam is due for more unpleasant news of the same kind, and worse. He will wake up one morning to find that Great Britain and Japan are once more allied. The British government does not have to canvass and cajole the nation for years before doing what it considers of vital national interest. The nation wakes up one morning and finds the thing done—and finds it well done, too.

We are boastful of an unwieldy form of government that will not allow us to attend quickly to vital emergencies, but will let us enter somebody else's senseless wars years after they have started. An alliance between Japan and the United States is vital and logical. It will free at once the entire Pacific basin from all war dangers; it will be the only means of safeguarding our baby, the Philippine Islands.

Beauty Begins At Home.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have just returned from a trip around the world, and how pleased my entire party was to land in Washington which we again voted the most beautiful and compensating city in the universe. We are all convinced that something is the matter with American systems, when other countries get so much publicity for nothing—thereby drawing our travelers and gold. Why don't our railroads make up trips from city to city, down or up rivers, lake trips, etc.? They have let European travel companies get way ahead of them, which accounts for our people's longing to see the so-called wonderful things abroad.

Nothing is as wonderful as the U. S. and its natural beauties, yet how few among us have seen Yosemite Valley, Pike's Peak, Yellowstone Park, Grand Canyon, etc., to mention but a few. Each State has its scenic features and unusual sights, yet Americans spend their good money to see what is not half as good abroad.

But what I wanted to speak of was the Panama Canal, through which we passed. We were schooled to believe the canal only a feat of engineering, but we found one beauty after another in the lakes rivers, woods, islands, waterfalls. Our entire day on deck disclosed one lovely thing after another. Every way we turned there lay a picture. We saw nothing as beautiful—if one may compare beautiful things,—as the canal in our Far East travels. Yet Americans say or know almost nothing about it! HENRY HUNTER.

Comparative Utility Prices.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Referring to the letter of Mr. Arthur W. Dew on the utility company subject which recently appeared in The Post, Mr. Dew might be interested in a recent analysis of the Federal Power Commission survey by the Edison Electric Institute. After referring to the inequitable and unfortunate condition that all private utility companies pay taxes, usually most substantial, while municipal electric plants do not, the following facts, according to the Wall Street Journal, were presented:

As far as the small consumer of 25 kilowatt hours per month is concerned the average municipal plant for the United States as a whole undersells the typical private company by 4 per cent. For all other quantities of use the company offers lower rates. For the medium-sized consumer of 40 kilowatt hours per month the municipal town is 0.4 per cent higher than the company. Above this the advantage is increasingly on the side of customers of the private company. At 100 kilowatt hours per month, where lights, small appliances and a refrigerator are used, the customer of the average municipal plant pays 5 per cent more than he would to a company. Where cooking is added, the average municipal plant charges 17 per cent more, and for those who heat water in addition, 39 per cent more than the private utility. At 500 kilowatt hours per month the "fully electrified home" in the average town supplied by a municipal plant has to pay $234 per year, or $66 more than where a company supplies the service.

Mr. Dew might bear in mind that the foregoing analysis is computed from a survey by U. S. Government officials.

FREDERICK L. WILLEY.

In What Black?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In October, 1932, President Roosevelt gravely warned the American people of the dangers of the mounting deficit. He said, "Let us have the courage to stop borrowing to meet continued deficits. * * * The truth is our banks are financing these stupendous deficits and the burden is absorbing their resources. It arises from one cause only and that is the unbalanced budget and the continued failure of this (the Republican) Administration to take effective steps to balance it."

It seems altogether incredible that three years later, the President makes light of a $30,000,000,000 deficit (which is immeasureably greater than when he took office) and smilingly informs us that "we are now in the black" and "will stay that way."

Such a "switch about face" by the Chief Magistrate of the land is hardly calculated to inspire confidence. Indeed, those of us that can count are not impressed at all. Have words the magic power of converting "red" into "black"? If so, we have a new arithmetic. Since when has a $30,000,000,000 debt represented "solvency"? Such extraordinary inconsistency on the part of the President demands an explanation.

We Jeffersonian Democrats believe the time has come to smile less, face the fiscal facts, which are not pleasant, and undertake the gigantic task of actually balancing a budget now well out of bounds. Otherwise, the "fool's paradise" in which we appear to be residing may change to the opposite condition. King Louis smiled at the "calamity howlers" and later lost his head.

Talk Of "Personal Government."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mr. Frank R. Kent never said a truer thing than when, in a recent comment on the 1936 campaign, he wrote: "The necessity for putting some intellectual muscles into the Republican Party if it is to make a successful fight against Mr. Roosevelt is too obvious to argue."

Mr. Kent has no difficulty in comprehending the obvious except when he is discussing the New Deal. Then his mind becomes so clogged with prejudice and intolerance that his intellectual processes fail to function with their accustomed brilliancy.

For instance, Mr. Kent quotes with approval the article in Fortune called "The Case Against Roosevelt." It may be entirely possible to make out a good case against Mr. Roosevelt, but to say, as Mr. Kent does, that "Mr. Roosevelt has changed this from a government of laws to a government of men, and that this is subversive of the American system and tends toward tyranny," is to talk arrant nonsense. Mr. Kent's conclusion might be true if his facts were correct.

The same charge was laid against Theodore Roosevelt and Woodrow Wilson. Every time a courageous, determined political leader arises who meets a social crisis by brave and unusual action he is charged by his opponents with trying to "change the American system."

What is this American system? It is a system of government known as democracy in which the people express their political convictions through representatives whom they elect to office. Both Congress and the President are powerless to change this democratic form of government in any respect. Congress may enact laws and the President may sign them, which men who believe, as Mr. Kent does, say are subversive of popular and representative government, but public opinion is the only cure for such evils. Congress may delegate unusual powers to the President, but there is always an appeal to the Supreme Court, whose decision is final.

The statement of Mr. Kent that the President is making this a "personal government" is incorrect. Germany has a personal government, and so has Italy, but America has not deviated one iota from its fundamental democratic principles. This is still a government of laws, not men, and the Congress and the President are not to be criticized as attempting to change our form of government if in their efforts to improve our economic system certain laws are passed and these laws are referred to the Supreme Court for adjudication. There is just one thing the Republicans can do about it and that is elect a new government which will do their bidding. Let them overthrow Roosevelt just as the people overthrew Hoover.

In the meantime AAA will continue to function under Mr. Wallace. He will do what the Congress said he could do and which the people gave him a mandate to do, until the Supreme Court says he cannot. It is up to Mr. Kent to show the farmers how foolish they are to vote as they do, and how unwise Congress is to pass such laws.

"Personal government" is a smoke screen to deceive the people into believing that America is rabidly guilty of "intellectual flabbiness." Kent is unwittingly casting suspicion upon American democracy and questioning its efficiency.

Yes, the Republican Party is guilty of "intellectual flabbishness." What the party needs is a brain trust. If the name is abhorrent, a rose by any other name would smell as sweet.

The Post Impressionist

"Language Most Shews a Man."

Post Office, Tuesday.

LATELY, we have had little cause to chide our volatile brothers of the rest of this page—but now we must at least rise to a question of personal privilege. Our editorial confreres who so frequently express admiration for the League of Nations' higher ideals, have violated one of the League's noblest principles: protection of the rights of minorities. And this time The Post-Impressionist is in the offended minority.

We refer to the Pennsylvania-Dutch and an editorial headed "American Undefiled." That article, after touching upon the accent, inflection and construction of both the New England and Middle West dialects, proceeded to poke the barb of irony into the prevailing tongue of the Keystone State. The writer intimated that it was illiterate, harsh, unintelligible.

Our duty, and our pleasure, enters a general denial.

There are two tongues loosely called "Pennsylvania - Dutch:" a Teutonic language and the English sometimes spoken by the possessors of that language.

Nor do we employ the word "language" inadvisedly. If you disagree, try to find your way among the farms of Lancaster County with your Hanoverian German. Not so long ago, all commands to a Berks County company of the N. G. P. were given in Pennsylvania-Dutch.

We're sure it is nearer the German of the Nibelungenlied than the German of Berlin. In the ancient Bernese Oberland, we've used Pennsylvania - Dutch successfully. But it is really unique. It has its grammars, its written and published literature—some excellent verse—and its translations from other tongues. "Pinafore" loses nothing by being turned into Pennsylvania-Dutch. The Pennsylvania - Dutch version of "Hamlet" is far funnier than the original text.

As for the English dialect of the Pennsylvania-Dutch, we protest that it is better fitted as a basis for this country's national language than anything to be found in New England or the Middle West.

You know the nasality of Vermont—the speech of the pure Pennsylvania-Dutchman is tempered by pleasing guttural themes. You are wearied by the prairie-flatness of the Hoosier — the Pennsylvania-Dutchman always begins on a rising note, then descends to the middle register, only to leap again at the end of the sentence. As thus, in a barber ship:

Customer Smith: "I'm going to Philadelphia today."

First Barber: "Are you going?"

Second Barber: "Are you going to Philly?"

Third Barber: "Are you going to Philly today?"

Most people suppose that you can convert an ordinary English sentence into this dialect by the simple process of sprinkling a few "stills" over it. Witness a recent slip of our own: intending to record a summons to a tardy diner, we wrote: "You're late still." But our fellow Pennsylvanian, former Attorney General A. Mitchell Palmer—although not, alas, a Pennsylvania-Dutchman—retorts:

"Nobody born to that tongue would use 'still' in this way. It would be 'You're late yet.' In fact, many would say in pure Pennsylvania-German (or Dutch) idiom, 'You're late already yet.'"

Precision in the use of "still," "a'rety," "yet" and that vigorous compound "a'rety-yet," or "yet-a'rety," is a token of elegance in the vernacular.

Among American authors, even some of Pennsylvania-Dutch blood or rearing have had their difficulties with those words. Eslie Singmaster masters them, of course. "George Schoch" rarely erred. However, two of our acquaintances generally failed: Helen Reimensnyder Martin—given, anyhow, to burlesque—and John Luther Long, whose Japanese, as in his "Madame Butterfly," were more like the Japanese than were his Pennsylvania-Dutchmen to the folk of his native Hanover, Pa.

But the great recommendation of this dialect is its terseness. If there is one thing in which all Americans agree it is a desire for speed. Well, nobody cuts the meat of his words closer to the bone of his meaning than does the Pennsylvania-Dutchman.

He doesn't say, "I want to get up." He says, "I want up." He doesn't say, "I want to get down." He says, "I want down."

The busiest Washingtonian "switches off the light." In the gaseous epoch he "turned it out." To this day, the Pennsylvania-Dutchman "outens" it.

Harmony, precision, elegance, succinctness: more good qualities than these can reasonably be required of no tongue—except, perhaps, clarity. And, if we had the time, we could prove to you that Pennsylvania-Dutch-English (American) possesses clarity also—to an eminent degree.

It is the ideal foundation for our national language.

Fair Enough

Sidney Smith.

Rome (By Mail).

OF all the eminent Americans who prospered during the big boom there was none more deserving to be called the perfect flower of the era of wonderful nonsense than the late Sidney Smith, the comic artist, who drew the Gumps. Sidney was Andy Gump himself. He was a money-lover at heart, and as he made money beyond his own most fabulous dreams he expressed his joy by raising Andy from modest circumstances to vast wealth. Early in the game, as his own earnings increased, he put Andy into the stock market and won him a fortune. Not content with that he presently invented a long-lost uncle from Australia, Bimbo Gump, the billionaire.

Sidney took a childish delight in depicting Bimbo Gump surrounded by huge stacks of currency and strong boxes bursting with jewels and gold. From time to time, out of Bimbo's incalculable horde, he passed out new fortunes to Andy and the family. Money was a subject that was always on his mind. His work was autobiographical, so he used riches as the theme of his long continuity.

To describe Sidney as a money-lover is not to say that he was uncommonly stingy or greedy. It startled him to find the money pouring in on him after many years of experimenting with comic strip characters on the Chicago papers. His amazement grew as his royalties mounted.

Sid erected a statue of Andy Gump on his estate. He had likenesses of Andy and Min Gump emblazoned on his automobile, which was the most luxurious that money could buy. He took a house in Palm Beach, and on one side of the foyer hung a plaster plaque of Andy, on the other side a plaque of Min. He hired a retired prizefighter to box with him, for he was a good-sized man with a childish desire to punch people on the nose and boast of fist fights that he had won.

• • • •

ONE night in New Orleans he spent a whole hour going over his conquests for the entertainment of a dark-browed tactful listener. There had been a waiter in Toledo, a fresh bellhop in Miami and a taxi driver who had tried to short-change him in New York. Sock-sock-sock! Sidney had socked them all and left them for dead.

On his fiftieth birthday, Sidney gave a party for about 50 persons in Palm Beach. He led off with caviar at $3 a copy and wound up with black cherries in burning brandy, also at $3 per head. And from start to finish of the long evening the waiters were bringing in champagne at $25 a quart.

"I make so much money I don't know what to do with it," Sidney said. "I've got a yacht, too. But, God, I'm tired! I do 5 miles of road work every morning, but this morning I did 7 miles. How is that for a man of 50?" Turning to the woman sitting next him Sidney switched around in his chair, placed her hand on his leg and said, "Feel that! How is that for a man 50 years old? Feel my arm, too. How is that! Feel my arm

SIDNEY SMITH suffered a painful social and professional rebuff that winter when the Artists' and Writers' Golf Tournament was held in Palm Beach. Meaning no harm, he called around to meet the New York artists in the tournament and was soon telling them how much money he made. He made more than any two of them together. But the New York artists had a low opinion of his art and the humorists thought his humor horrible.

Whether Andy Gump was humor or not, he became a famous American character. If there was anything humorous in Sidney's favorite exclamations, "Oh, Min!" and "Soup's on!" it was very obscure to the intelligentsia, but they became popular expressions and millions of people thought they were funny. Andy Gump received nominating votes in two national party conventions and isolated popular votes on several election days. Sidney himself became a celebrity, in demand as a speaker or guest at Babbitt luncheons. State legislatures invited him to honor them with a visit. He loved it. He was a great American big shot, growing richer all the time, and the routine by which he manufactured situations and drawings was now so well organized that he became almost an absentee comic artist.

• • • •

AND strangest of all in Sidney Smith's career was that his creature, his personality on paper, Andy Gump, was a flagrant violation of the original character as it had been handed to him in 1917. His instructions were to keep Andy Gump in moderate circumstances, the typical, socially clumsy, suburban American husband of a commonplace wife and father of a brat child. As this character began to bring in rich royalties Sidney correspondingly improved the fortunes of Andy Gump until Andy, like Sidney himself, was rolling in money and Uncle Bim was moving through the story with his billions. This was contrary to orders from upstairs, but the steady increase of Sidney's own royalties showed that millions of people had the same dreams.

So Sidney's career was the realization of the ambition of the greatest number of Americans. He never got education or refinement. He just got enormously rich.

Perplexed France

Bewildered Man In The Street Veers Away From Russia And Toward Germany; Sees Sanctions As Inapplicable In The Future.

By Andre Vulliet.
Special Correspondence of The Post.

Paris.

BATTERED by foreign problems that spring forth in hydra-like succession, and sensible of the importance of the role they must play in any drama on the European continent, the French people waver and hesitate as to the best way of making the most of a none too enviable position.

For a year or so they have been distracted by such questions as German rearmament, the eastern European pact, the Danubian pact or the danger of a Nazi putsch in Austria. Then, last September, the Italo-Abyssinian conflict broke into front-page news and became a new source of trouble.

Considering that the question of a Franco-German rapprochement is again revived and that the ratification of the Franco-Soviet pact signed last May is soon to come up, it is but normal that most Frenchmen should be frantic trying to figure out which way to go. Great Britain, Italy, Soviet Russia, Germany or the League of Nations without hesitation? But all this is not only more than the mind of the average man in the street can bear, it is also too much for him to understand.

Yet it is these very men in the street who make almighty public opinion. "In our democracies," as Andre Maurois, noted French novelist, wrote sometime ago in Le Figaro, "the man in the street judges without appeal . . . But is the man in the street informed? Can he be? The man of 1935 knows a lot less about the affairs of the world than the man of 1235. The man of the Middle Ages had to know the affairs of his guild, of his city, and he knew them well enough. The modern man wants to have an opinion about Russia, about the New Deal, about the Japanese policy, of which he knows nothing."

• • • •

THIS is just as true in France as it is anywhere. Most Frenchmen must have an opinion on their country's foreign policy. But either they judge it exclusively from the angle of France's interior policy or they make short shrift of history and simplify all problems to such an extent that they can solve any issue in no time.

Take the Italo-Abyssinian conflict, for instance. Many people seem to think that a little British good will would rapidly bring about a solution. But the issue is not so simple as all that. The truth is, it seems, that there now exists a real Italo-Abyssinian war and that, so long as the two opponents have not found out at their own expense the limit when they had better call quits, they will not let anyone stop it. This will come in due time. Great Britain's good will and France's mediation may then be extremely useful in helping map out a solution that will fit in with the League of Nations, pact, regardless of the fate of the present much-abused proposals.

Those, both in France and abroad, who urge a Franco-German rapprochement, even at the expense of Soviet Russia, on the ground that Germany is overpopulated and must expand eastward, seem to forget that such an expansion might not go without a hitch, as the territories east of Germany, be it Poland or Ukraine, are just as populated as Germany.

• • • •

A FEW figures, compiled for the French paper Le Temps, by Rene Lauret, a keen observer of the Franco-German problem, may be of interest. "It so happens," he wrote, "that the most populated Russian provinces are those which are nearer to the Reich. White Russia has a population of 108 inhabitants to the square mile; Ukraine has 175 (almost the same density as France), and Poland, which separates White Russia and Ukraine from Germany, has 200 inhabitants to the square mile.

"In the provinces of Northeastern Germany, the population is not of a higher density (it often is lower). The figures are: 158 in Eastern Prussia, 108 in the Grenzmark, 158 in Pomerania, and 125 in Mecklenburg. Of course, the density of the German population as a whole is of 350 to the square mile, but this figure alone must not be taken into consideration when it comes to projects such as those concerning the "colonization toward the East." Since the overt claim is to enable farmers to get more land, one must know first how many farmers are already established in Germany and in the bordering Russian provinces.

"German statistics show a proportion of rural population of less than 30 per cent in Germany, of 76 per cent in Poland, of 85 per cent in Ukraine and European Russia. This shows that Germany has a rural population of 105 to the square mile, while Poland has 150, White Russia, 95, and Ukraine, 158. Similar figures stand at 65 for Eastern Prussia, 48 for Grenzmark, 58 for Pomerania and 48 for Mecklenburg.

"Thus, although it may be unexpected, the fact is that Poland and Western Russia already have more farmers established on one square mile of territory than has Germany as a whole and particularly its Northeastern provinces."

• • • •

PREOCCUPATIONS of a purely political order are particularly dominant when it comes to the stand most Frenchmen adopt toward Soviet Russia. It is not even exaggerated to say that this stand determines their attitude in the question of Franco-German relation.

As Vladimir d'Ormesson, a former French diplomat and noted political observer, recently put it in Le Figaro. "Those who are now urging cordial relations with Germany are the same people who were dead set against the idea not so many years ago, at a time when the Reich was not yet armed to the teeth. They are the Conservatives, the Nationalists and even the ultra-Nationalists, for the rapproachement with our German neighbors has now become a position of the rightist parties.

"Of course, all those who line up with the leftist parties have adopted the opposite attitude," the French writer continued. Having pleaded for a better understanding with France's former enemy, they now regard the possibility of a Franco-German entente with little if any enthusiasm. The reason for this change is that friendly relations between France and Soviet Russia have developed in the meantime and the Soviet regime seems nearer to the French leftist parties' ideologies than Nazi Germany.

• • • •

THE same attitude holds true, of course, as regards the Italo-Abyssinian war. Speaking of this conflict and of the sanctions applied to the aggressor country, it is interesting to discuss the idea as to whether such sanctions, universally applied to any aggressor country, would actually carry into international life the principle of equality for all, sponsored by the democratic League of Nations.

"Economic sanctions," Lucien Romier, a French economist and writer, recently wrote, "can only be felt in a quick and decisive manner by those countries which are poor and deprived of natural resources. Thus the very principle of equality upon which the Geneva institution is based is shaken to the roots. . . . "

Showing that the United States, the British Empire and Soviet Russia (in not too distant future) can be self-supporting in case of war, the writer continues thus: "So the three largest powers in the world would successfully evade the effect of economic sanctions.

"One may wonder if the present inequality is not likely to cause those countries that can not be economically independent to associate with those that can. Thus, in spite of Geneva, and maybe because of the Geneva institution, the necessity to compensate economic deficiencies may bring us back to the old system of alliances."

Uncle Gaetano's Warning.

MY friend Peter Kihss's revelation of the manner in which the keep-the-kids-in-ignorance law slipped through the last Congress and foisted upon the unsuspecting and voteless citizens of the National Capital seems to me to savor very much of what will happen when we allow fascism to get the upper hand. Coming, as it did, just when that kindly old uncle, Dr. Gaetano Salvemini, was in our midst praying that we do not sacrifice our democratic institutions for what he rather mildly called the "intellectual and moral degradation" which follows in the wake of dictatorship, we should, I think, take the matter seriously.

Uncle Gaetano's trim white whiskers waggle with indignation whenever he thinks of that "perpetual night in which lost spirits waver," which is his quietly poetical way of describing the nasty nightmare of repression in which Mussolini is the chief devil fiendishly dancing on the footboards of the bed. Having been chucked into the can for questioning Il Duce's right to supremacy, no doubt he is slightly biased on the subject of fascism; at least, he does not take it with the calm and superior attitude displayed at Town Hall on Monday night by Dr. Lothrop Stoddard, the yellow peril man. He sees fascism as something destined to crush everything held dear by just such inquiring intellectuals as Dr. Stoddard undoubtedly likes to think himself.

THAT fascism could "happen here" Uncle Gaetano, who has been around the country more than most of us and who has a political, as well as an intellectual background to aid his observations, does not find beyond the realm of reason. That it has happened here upon occasion is also not questionable. The imposition of the don't teach edict is, I think, a case in point, for here a very silly, antithoughtful, and quite irritating act of repression was imposed upon the populace without open debate, even the kind of open debate that Congress affords.

The peepul of Washington have no direct, democratic, ballot-box say about the manner in which they are to be ruled. In this they are something like the Italians. Each Senator or Representative on the committees which direct the affairs of the Dictatorship of Columbia is, in his petty way, a minor Mussolini. Thus when one of them has an idea, or what passes for an idea, he calls the Gosundarstnanaia Planovaia Commissia, or Appropriation Committee, together in a back room somewhere, and this all-powerful committee decides how to put it over on long-suffering Washington.

• • • •

ACCORDING to the inquisitive Mr. Kihss, it's all done in secret until the appropriate day. Then, just before sundown when the guardians of democracy are happily engaged in discussing communism over their cocktails in the intellectual atmosphere of the Carleton bar, it is submitted to the Legislature. Most of these gentlemen, aware that a District bill is about to be voted upon, are also out sipping sustenance somewhere. And so the law is passed without anyone knowing anything about it until they read it in the newspapers, which, strangely enough, have a way of finding out about such things. Thus are the voteless subjects of the dictatorship of Columbia ruled.

Of course laws equally as un-American are passed by legislatures which openly debate the subject, as was the case in Massachusetts where the swear-to-be-true-to-the-red-white-and-blue law was enacted this year. But there the minority had a chance to squawk beforehand, and the fact that they did not do so loud enough is but one of the penalties of living in a democracy. The school law of Washington is different, inasmuch as it was crammed down the throats of the dear public without their having so much as a chance to gargle.

• • • •

IT is interesting to know this, because it's a foretaste of what would happen generally if America should go the way of poor Uncle Gaetano's Italy. These so-called patriotic organizations, most of whom take their inspiration from the revolutionary ardor of forefathers who were pretty proud of their town meetings and other manifestations of democracy, may honestly think they are saving the country by defending laws passed by such tactics. They are only kidding themselves. This fascist dictator for whom they are paving the way may not like the super-patriots when he takes over the White House, and may send them all to concentration camps, especially when they start growling because, as will happen, he takes over their property so that he can afford to live in the manner to which dictators quickly grow accustomed.

This, of course, would be very funny, but is it worth imperilling our present set-up for the sake of a gag? There are still a lot of us suckers who learned about all sorts of governments when we went to school and who still are naive enough to think that neither communism nor fascism is necessary. Perhaps the trouble with us is that we really didn't have enough free discussion in the classroom under the pictures of the Three Gray Poets and the American Flag. But that we had at least produced something a whole lot better than Uncle Gaetano's grim and dreadful country of perpetual night.

Pope Pius Calls For Peace Allied 'With Justice'

Avoids Direct Reference to Africa; 20 Cardinals Are Appointed.

By the Associated Press.

Vatican City, Dec. 16.—Pope Pius, without direct reference to the Italo-Ethiopian war, expressed a fervent hope "for that peace which is allied with justice, with truth and with charity," in a secret consistory today.

The pontiff created 20 new cardinals, bringing the total in the college to 68, 2 under the 70 permitted. There are 37 Italian cardinals and 31 from other nations. The ranks were reduced by one through the death of Cardinal Lega, 75, an hour and a half before the consistory opened.

Pope Pius refrained from specific advice in the present crisis brought on by the war, asserting any observation he might make "would not be well understood, or would be deliberately misconstrued" in many quarters.

Fears Misunderstanding.

"We do not wish to enumerate those conflicts which give worry not only to Europe and Africa, but to all the world," he said, "because in so many places there is danger our word either would not be well understood or would be deliberately misconstrued."

The consistory lasted one hour, with the college ratifying the appointment of the new cardinals. His Holiness also filled a vacant bishopric in the United States by appointing Joseph P. Gilmore chancellor of the diocese at Helena, Mont., to succeed Ralph L. Hayes, who has been appointed rector of the American College in Rome.

Only 22 of the 48 cardinals were present when the Pope, who is now 78, escorted by noble and Swiss guards, walked into the consistory hall and mounted his throne.

Sixteen of the new cardinals awaited notification of their elections in Rome, while the four others were in Vienna, Warsaw, Madrid and Paris, where they are nuncios.

Their red hats, symbolic of the cardinal's rank, will be given the new princes Wednesday night in a secret session and again Thursday in a public consistory in the Basilica of St. Peter's.

A delegation of papal heralds went to the residences and hotels of the new cardinals and officially advised them of their appointments. They were invited to visit the Pope Wednesday night. Until that time they will make no public appearance.

In his allocution, the Pope referred briefly to the Church situation in Germany and Mexico, by saying:

"We would not lack reasons for sadness. It is enough to remember the deep vow of our Father's heart, such, for example, as events and happenings in Russia, Mexico, and also Germany."

He had expressed joy over "the triumphant demonstrations of faith at Lourdes, Buenos Aires, Cleveland, Tarano, Praha, Lubiano and Lima, where following the example of religious leaders, civil authorities and notables, there gathered innumerable crowds of people."

U. S. to Buy 500 Planes

ent time 1,196 planes are on hand. However, 358 of these are trainers or transports, leaving only 838 fighting ships. Contractors are now completing work on 243 ships which were ordered some months ago and which will be delivered to the tactical units in the near future.

It is believed that more than 100 of the new planes will be twin-engined bombers. These long-range, heavily-armed fortresses must show a flying speed of 200 miles an hour, and a speed of 250 miles an hour is "desired."

Plan 4 'Fortresses.'

It is understood also that a number of the four-engined "flying fortresses" will be purchased "for tactical experimentation." The first of these huge planes, weighing 15 tons, was flown in August from Seattle, Wash., to Dayton, Ohio, a distance of 2,100 miles, at an average speed of 233 miles an hour.

However, it was destroyed on October 30 in a crash which took the lives of Maj. P. P. Hill, veteran Army pilot, and Leslie Tower, senior pilot of the Boeing Co., which built the fortress.

It was announced that "locked controls" had caused the crash. Brig. Gen. Augustine W. Robins, chief of the Materiel Division at Dayton, Ohio, said then that none of the fortresses would be bought. Indications at the War Department, however, are that Gen. Robins will be overruled.

The procurement program is expected to provide more than 200 attack type planes. Like the bombers, the attack ships must fly 200 miles an hour before they can be accepted and a speed of 250 miles is "desired."

200 Pursuit Planes.

Nearly 200 pursuit planes make up the balance of the equipment to be acquired. These ships are required to fly 250 miles an hour and Army officials are hopeful that they will make 300 miles or more.

Then military officials early in January will turn their attention to obtaining an even faster fleet in 1936.

In his recent annual report Secretary of War Dern recommended "inauguration of a five-year aircraft procurement program under which approximately 800 airplanes of various types will be procured annually." At the end of five years this would develop a flying force of 3,000 combat airplanes of modern design.

Preliminary plans for the 1936 program already have been made. Chairman Parks (Democrat), of Arkansas, has said that his House Appropriations sub-committee will try to work money for 800 planes into the War Department appropriation bill. Hearings on this measure started yesterday, with generals from various corps areas and departments assembled here to confer with the Appropriations Committee.

Michigan Vote Today to Test Townsend Plan

Republican Backs Pension Issue in Representative Campaign.

By the Associated Press.

Battle Creek, Mich., Dec. 16.—The hotly contested battle over the Townsend old age pension plan raged unabated today as the Third Michigan District prepared to choose a Representative tomorrow.

An exceptionally large vote was predicted in the election which officers of the national Townsend organization have said will serve as a barometer of the vote-getting strength of the $200-a-month pension plan in the 1936 Congressional elections.

While the Republicans declared that "all indications point overwhelmingly" to the election of Verner W. Main, the Republican candidate who is an enthusiastic advocate of the Townsend plan, the Democrats predicted a close victory for Howard W. Cavanagh, a harsh critic of the Townsend proposal.

Cavanagh's managers said the announcement of Dr. Francis E. Townsend, co-sponsor of the plan, that he might form a third party in 1936 had added theih last-minute drive for votes.

"On the eve of the election, I am still waiting for my opponent to say whether he is a Republican or a Townsendite," Cavanagh said in a statement today.

Main, who made a series of speeches during the day, asserted that third party talk "is entirely beside the point," and renewed his pledge to vote for the McGroarty (Townsend plan) bill if elected.

Some Republican leaders, who were acutely embarrassed when a Townsend advocate captured the party's nomination in the five-man primary, pointed out that a victory for Main in a district that has been strongly Republican for more than 30 years would be without signifcance as far as the Townsend plan is concerned unless his plurality were unusually large.

Although most of Main's support during the campaign has been from the numerous Townsend clubs in the district and from speakers from the national Townsend organization, both Gov. Frank D. Fitzgerald (Republican) and U. S. Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg have urged his election.

Neither, however, indorsed the Townsend pension proposal, and Vandenberg said flatly he did not believe it was "feasible or constitutional."

Finland Pays U. S. $230,453 on Debt

Secretary Morgenthau announced yesterday the Treasury had received a cash payment of $203,453 from Finland to cover the semi-annual installment of its debt to the United States.

Formal notice that they would pass up their payments, due Sunday, was received yesterday from Belgium, Estonia and Latvia. Eight other nations previously had served notice of default.

The total amount due from 12 countries was $965,414,177.64. Prior to yesterday, Britain, France, Italy, Poland, Rumania, Czechoslovakia, Hungary and Lithuania had informed the United States they would be unable to pay.

Nazis Order Expulsion Of Danish Newsman

Berlin, Dec. 16 (AP).—The German government today ordered Thorsten Steinthal, for 25 years a correspondent here for the Copenhagen Daily Politiken, to leave the country.

A communique, issued through the official news bureau, said: "The Jew Steinthal consistently, through untrue and hateful reporting, has seriously hurt the interests of the German Reich."

Christmas Program Is Given at Seaside

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Chesapeake Beach, Md., Dec. 16.—Carols were sung under a large Christmas tree here Saturday night as the annual Christmas tree celebration was held. Prayer was led by the Rev. O. C. Mitchell and was followed by an entertainment in the Seaside Park ballroom.

Experts Shelve Tokyo Demand For Ship Parity

Possible Disaster Averted; British Substitute Plan Studied.

By the Associated Press.

London, Dec. 16.—The simple expedient of changing the subject served today to steer the five-power naval conference temporarily away from a threatened deadlock and possible disaster.

With no progress in sight on Japan's proposal for a common upper limit for equality of world fleets, the conference agreed unanimously to shelve it for the time being and take up consideration of a substitute British proposal.

However, a communique issued by the delegates made it clear the Japanese scheme is "being reserved for further reflection and examination."

This meant the conference undoubtedly will carry over into 1936. Development of the British plan for announcement of building programs over periods of six years or more likely will require the remainder of the week. After that, the conference will adjourn until January 2.

Suggested by Monsell.

Today's maneuver was accomplished at the suggestion of Viscount Monsell, first lord of the British admiralty. It was believed agreed upon by the Japanese over the week-end.

At any rate, no objection was heard. The Japanese conceded that other delegations had given due consideration to their proposal, and said they, in turn, would gladly consider other suggestions.

The action caused no particularly bright hopes, because the British proposal was rejected in 1934 after lengthy negotiations with the Japanese. Whether it now has been overhauled to make it more acceptable was uncertain.

Japan turned down the proposal last year because she considered it a perpetuation of the ratio system, which she is determined to end forever. Her upper limit proposal would eliminate ratios in principal.

Aim Not Yet Clear.

But whether Japan is seeking common tonnage with Britain and the United States in actual practice is not yet clear.

The French expressed relief at the shelving of the Japanese proposals in favor of the British, "which coincide more closely with our own point of views on quantitative limitation."

Nevertheless, the French spokesman emphasized France prefers announcement of building programs over a much shorter period than do the British. France is not expected to agree to making public her projected construction for more than one or two years, because of her misgivings on German shipbuilding.

The Italians, so far more observers than delegates, were awaiting with considerable interest the disclosure of details of the British proposals. These, an Italian spokesman said, "appear more in line with our point of view than the Japanese."

Favor Long Period.

The British are not irrevocably tied to quantitative construction over a six-year period, but believe the period should be long enough to eliminate uncertainties and preserve confidence.

Every effort so far has failed to induce the Japanese to disclose the figure they contemplate for their parity demands or to indicate a possible avenue of compromise with the British and Americans, who insist on superiority of tonnage because of their alleged greater needs and vulnerability.

It was understood the Japanese had recognized these claims to different needs, which they thought might possibly be met through consideration of adjustments in total tonnage. But it was not clear to delegates how this would work out in practice.

Hence they voted to change the subject.

The Japanese, however, were keeping the upper tonnage limit alive by separate discussions with other delegations. With that object in view, they will visit the Americans tomorrow.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

The Bridge Battle of the Century.

Contract bridge has become a spectacle for the bowls, the stadia and the amphitheaters. Madison Square Garden, scene of countless fist fights, is to stage a bridge game, and the jump is not as great as it sounds.

• • • •

The finals of the International Bridge tournament between America and France will be staged by Mike Jacobs, the fight promoter, in the Garden, and the winner may get the next shot at Joe Louis.

• • • •

The two bridge teams will meet in a glass cabinet, and 52 sandwich men, acting as the cards in a bridge deck, will record each play on a raised platform as the fans fill the air with shouts of "Lead your queen, you bum!" "He reneged!" "Quit stalling with that jack!" etc.

• • • •

It will probably be the biggest gathering of kibitzers in history.

• • • •

Whether there will be any preliminary bouts is uncertain, but it would certainly seem to be a perfect spot for an encounter between Mrs. Jennie Poddell, the star of the Canarsie Ladies' Aid Club, playing with her friend, Wingate Erpp, champ of the 5:10 local, against Mr. and Mrs. Tooper, winners of the live turkey in the last Parish House tournament.

• • • •

We know a lot of bridge players we'd like to see up there on a platform where we could laugh outright, hoot 'em from the galleries and perhaps toss down an empty beer bottle.

• • • •

Presumably the Garden will have a hard time shaking off the custom of introductions before the main bout.

• • • •

Just before the international stars climb in for the big battle the announcer will probably introduce Cedric Flummph, Rahway's up and coming 165-pound card expert, Miss Olive Mollupp, who startled the Wappingers Falls Bridge Club by bidding six spades and discovering all her black cards were clubs, and Col. Pinkney Boozle, who is willing to meet any bridge player in the world at his weight.

• • • •

The demand for ringside seats is reported very heavy. A lot of the boys want to be up where they can smell the cigarette ashes, watch the footwork and see the temples throb.

• • • •

Ladies and gentlemun . . . in this corner Messrs. Oswald Jacoby, David Burnstine, Michael J. Gottlieb and Howard Schenken, champions of the United States, four fearless boys who never know when they have had enough.

• • • •

Their opponents—quiet please!—Pierre Albarran, Sophocles Venizelos, Emmanuel Tulumoris, and Georges Rousett, worthy opponents from across the seas! In their corner is Baron Robert de Nexon, their captain.

• • • •

'Ted' Clark, 57, Coolidge Aid, Dies at Home

Ex-White House Secretary Known to Thousands Throughout U. S.

Edward T. ("Ted") Clark, 57 White House secretary during the Coolidge administration, died early yesterday at his home, 4706 Seventeenth street northwest.

Vice president and Washington representative of the United Drug Co. since 1929, he went to his Shoreham Building office Saturday as usual and appeared in good health.

Death, attributed to acute indigestion and heart disease, came as a shock to his many friends.

Due to his long association with the former President, Mr. Clark was known as an outstanding figure in the Coolidge wing of the Republican Party.

Mutual friends often spoke of the similarity in the traits of Mr. Coolidge and Clark. Both were known for their taciturnity and sharp sense of humor.

It was probably his natural tendency to remain silent, coupled with his high regard for confidences which guided Clark in rejecting countless lucrative offers to write his memoirs.

"Ted" Clark's early home was in Northampton, Mass., of which Coolidge formerly was mayor. Also like Coolidge, "Ted" attended Amherst College, from which he was graduated in 1900. He received his law degree from George Washington University in 1903.

He returned to Washington nearly 30 years ago as secretary to the late Senator Henry Cabot Lodge. He became Mr. Coolidge's secretary on the latter's election to the Vice Presidency and remained with him during his six years in the White House.

Clark and his twinkling blue eyes were known to thousands of political and business leaders throughout the country.

He is survived by his widow and two sisters, Mrs. R. G. Proctor and Miss Alice Clark, of Northampton.

He was a member of the Metropolitan and the Chevy Chase Clubs of Washington, a Theta Delta Chi and a member of the Amherst Club of New York.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow at 2:30 p. m. from the Clark residence with the Rev. Allen A. Stockdale, pastor of the First Congregationalist church, officiating.

The body will be sent to Northampton for burial Thursday.

Bishop A. J. Smith Dies After Stroke

By the Associated Press

Nashville, Tenn., Dec. 16.—The death of the Most Rev. Alphonse John Smith today removed from the diocese of Nashville the State's No. 1 advocate of Catholic education.

The bishop died of a heart attack at St. Thomas Hospital. He was seized with the fatal illness last night while delivering a sermon at the dedication of a statue at St. Vincent's church, a Nashville Negro congregation he organized, and succumbed a few hours later. He was 52 years old.

Funeral plans for the bishop will be made tomorrow.

Although his title of vicar general ceased with the death of the bishop, Monsignor Mogan, as chancellor, will temporarily administer temple affairs of the diocese.

Bishop Smith was a native of Madison, Ind. He is survived by five sisters, two of whom are nuns at St. Mary of the Woods near Terre Haute, Ind.

Club to Collect Books.

Books for the Washington Boys Club Library will be collected today at the annual Ladies Day luncheon of the Optimist Club at the Mayflower. Joseph E. Rice, president, has also asked the members to bring toys to the meeting, which begins at 12:30.

Funeral Rites In N. Y. Today For Miss Bacon

Representatives' Daughter Victim of Pneumonia; Burial to Be Here.

Funeral services for Alexandra Murray Bacon, 21-year-old daughter of Representative and Mrs. Robret Low Bacon, of Westbury, Long Island, and 1801 F street, will be held at 3:30 p. m. today in St. George's Church, Stuyvesant square, New York City. Burial will be in Arlington Cemetery tomorrow.

Miss Bacon was stricken with a severe cold on her way home from Europe on the liner Washington. Last Wednesday she was taken to Doctors' Hospital, in New York, where she died Saturday of pneumonia.

Her father heard the news by radio while in Jamaica on a southern cruise. He started immediately on a 2,800-mile plane trip home.

Miss Bacon, a granddaughter of the late Robert Bacon, Ambessador to France under Taft and Secretary of State under Theodore Roosevelt, was graduated from Miss Hewitt's School. She made her debut in New York and Washington in 1932 and was presented at the Court of St. James the following June. She was returning from a six-week trip in Europe, where she visited her two sisters, Virginia, who is studying in Germany, and Martha Bacon, a student in France.

Bigger Boys' Club Sought in Northeast

The need for an enlarged and more modern boys' club in the Northeast section of the city was discussed yesterday at a meeting of the board of directors of the Northeast Boys Club at the Occidental Hotel.

A committee composed of W. R. Willoughby, Charles H. Cooke and Capt. Richard Mansfield was appointed by President Albert W. Howard to plan a Northeast Olympic to raise funds for a bigger club.

The present club, the directors stated, is too far from the center of boy population and is not designed to afford recreation for older boys. Replacement of the gymnasium floor is necessary because of termite damage.

Mrs. Stabler, 90, Brooke Family Member, Dies

Descendant of Emigrant Given Land Grant by Charles I.

Mrs. Alice Brooke Stabler, member of one of the oldest families in Montgomery County, Md., died at her home, 3244 Thirty-eighth street northwest. She was ninety.

Mrs. Stabler was born at Brooke Grove, one of the ancestral Brooke estates, in 1845, the daughter of George E. and Elizabeth Jordan Brooke. She was a direct descendant of Robert Brooke, who came to this country with a grant from Charles I and settled in St. Mary's County in 1650.

The first Brooke in Montgomery County was James Brooke, who settled at Charley Forest, the estate granted him by Lord Calvert in 1728.

In 1870 Miss Brooke married James P. Stabler, of the Department of Agriculture, a member of an old Montgomery family. He was later chief clerk of the statistical division of the department and took part in the organization of Sandy Spring Telephone Co. afterward merged with another system.

Mrs. Stabler lived most of her life in Sandy Spring, moving to Washington only after the death of her husband several years ago.

She is survived by one son, Harold B Stabler, an engineer; two daughters, Mrs. Frederick W. McReynolds, wife of the chairman of the Board of Public Welfare, and Mrs. George S. Worth, of Wayne, Pr.; a brother, Charles F. Brooke, and a sister, Mrs. Charles F. Kirk, both of Sandy Spring, as well as nine grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

Funeral services will be held today at 2:30 p. m. from the Friend's Meeting House, Sandy Spring. Burial will be in the Meeting House cemetery.

Water Tests Started For Aluminum Ship

Bath, Me., Dec. 16 (AP).—A 10-foot shell of aluminum alloy, actually a cross section of a ship, was placed in the water here today beginning a series of experiments which its sponsors expect will inaugurate a new era in naval design and construction.

Miss Mary Newell, daughter of President William S. Newell, of Bath Iron Works, Inc., christened it the "Alumette."

Tomorrow it will be put aboard a flat car and shipped to Newport News, Va., where experiments of one to two years will be conducted. The craft's designers and sponsors hope to prove that ships built of aluminum alloy will resist corrosion as well as steel and that certain type vessels made of the light metal can supplant those of steel.

Allen Is Chairman For Birthday Ball

Commissioner George E. Allen yesterday was named chairman of the 1936 birthday ball for President Roosevelt. The ball will be held here January 30 and, as in the past, the proceeds will go to treatment of local victims of infantile paralysis and to the Warm Springs Foundation in Georgia.

Announcement of Allen's appointment was made by Henry L. Doherty, national chairman of the President's Birthday Ball Commission for Infantile Paralysis Research.

Commissioner Allen said he soon would appoint the committee which will assist him. It will be composed of men and women prominent in Washington's social, official and civic circles.

Max Kaplowitz, Injured in Fall Last Week, Dies

Proprietor of Delicatessen Store Here Succumbs in Hospital.

Injured last Tuesday when he fell from a chair, Max Kaplowitz, 65, proprietor of a delicatessen store at 2133 G street northwest, died yesterday in Emergency Hospital.

Physicians atiributed his death to complications following the injury. He suffered a fractured rib.

Kaplowitz is survived by three sons, A. J. and S. H. Kaplowitz, joint proprietors of Kaplowitz Bros., Inc., women's wearing apparel store at 512 Thirteenth street northwest, and Isador Kaplowitz; three daughters, Mrs. M. D. Burka, Mrs. David Mondzac and Mrs. Herbert Budner, and three brothers, Abraham Kaplowitz, of New York, and David and Joseph Kaplowitz, both living in Russia.

Kaplowitz had been a resident of Washington for 15 years. He was a member of Eazras Israel Congregation.

Funeral services will be held today at the Bernard Danzansky funeral home, 3501 Fourteenth street northwest. Burial will be in Eazras Israel Cemetery.

Richard Glazebrook, English Scientist, Dies

London, Dec. 16 (AP).—Sir Richard Glazebrook, 81, an authority on physics and aeronautics, died today. He became Zaharoff professor of aviation and director of the department of aeronautics at the Imperial College of Technology in 1920.

He was president of the Institute of Electrical Engineers in 1906 and was elected a fellow of the Royal Society. Sir Richard was knighted in 1917 and served on many royal commissions and government committees.

New Inquiry Planned In Wild Duck Deaths

Baltimore, Dec. 16 (AP).—A further investigation of reports that hundreds of wild ducks along the Chesapeake Bay had been killed by feeding on phosphorous deposits is planned by the State conservation commission.

Richard T. Norris, chief deputy game warden, said today a wide search of bay waters in the vicinity of the Aberdeen proving grounds had failed to show evidence of the killing of numerous wild fowl reported by sportsmen in northeast Maryland.

A few years ago the Federal Biological Survey, in investigating the killing of thousands of wild ducks in the Aberdeen area, reported the deaths were caused by phosphorous deposits left by firing of big guns at the proving grounds.

Walmsley Is Booed At Span Dedication

New Orleans, Dec. 16 (AP).—A $13,000,000 bridge across the Mississippi was dedicated today as a "monument to the memory" of the late Senator Huey P. Long as followers of his old regime lustily booed Mayor T. Semmes Walmsley, arch foe of the Long organization.

The steel span, 2 miles above New Orleans, was proclaimed the "Huey P. Long Bridge" by Gov. O. K. Allen at ceremonies which took on a turbulent political hue.

It links the east and west banks of the "Father of Waters" below Vicksburg, Miss., for the first time.

So lustily did the crowd hiss and boo the mayor that the proceedings were halted fully ten minutes, and when he finally delivered his address his words were lost to all but a few.

Finan Awarded Medal In Georgetown Debate

Thomas B. Finan, jr., of Cumberland, Md., was awarded the Hamilton Medal last night at Georgetown University following an extemporaneous debate on the question: "Resolved, that Congress shall have power by a two-thirds majority to override a decision of the Supreme Court declaring an act of Congress unconstitutional."

The competition, open only to members of the 100-year-old Philodemic Society at the university, was founded by George Hamilton, dean of the Georgetown Law School. Finan was one of six contestants. With John F. Lang and James D. Curtain he debated in the negative with Peter J. Brennan, jr., David J. Power and Newton A. Free.

Trade Leaders Of South Turn Upon New Deal

Industrialists Bitter at U. S. in Business; One Man Defends AAA.

By the United Press.

Birmingham, Ala., Dec. 16.—Business leaders from 14 States below the Mason-Dixon line today turned the third annual convocation of the Southern States Industrial Council into a bitter anti-New Deal forum.

Announced as designed to devise a quadrangular legislative program for the next Congressional session, the meeting heard violent complaints from industrial leaders against what they termed unjustified presumption of private enterprise by the Government.

One pro-New Dealer, however, arose in the meeting to defend policies of the Roosevelt Administration as they affect agriculture in the deep South. He was Dr. L. M. Duncan, president of the Alabama Polytechnic Institute, who told the 200 delegates here that the AAA has brought positive dollars and cents benefits to Dixie.

Charles Gilbert, secretary of the council, advocated, however, an organized campaign by Southern industry to depose Southern Congressmen who refuse to become "convinced of the error of supporting the New Deal."

"The socialistic tendencies of the Administration," he said, "will cause many of them to show changed views at the next session. It is a great compliment to Southern industry that it has been able to survive the ordeal of the New Deal."

The convention ended tonight.

Loomis Deserts Bride of a Week

By the Associated Press.

New York, Dec. 16.—Laura Hampton Hover, daughter of a California oil man, was alone in her midtown apartment tonight while her bridegroom of less than a week, Homer L. Loomis, jr., was hidden away in his family's Park avenue apartment.

The socially prominent young Loomis, former Princeton student, had "nothing to say."

The couple were married at Northcastle, N. Y., Thursday, the bride admitted. They were accompanied by two New York friends.

"There was no drinking, no party," she added. "We have known each other for three months. The reason we denied the marriage was because I didn't want my family to know."

With a shake of her marcelled, blonde curls, she said she couldn't see "what all the fuss was about" any why Loomis said he "couldn't remember" about the marriage.

Chevy Chase Group To Vote on Liquor

To sound out the sentiment of the Chevy Chase Citizens Association on the liquor situation, members will be asked to express their views on the subject at the regular meeting tomorrow night.

The pending Guyer bill to bring back prohibition to the District may come up for consideration before the association's next meeting.

According to Edwin S. Hege, president of the Chevy Chase organization, "there would probably be considerable opposition to any place in our area being allowed to sell alcoholic beverages for consumption on the premises where sold."

Hege added that there seems to be a feeling in Chevy Chase that "we have enough or perhaps too many stores selling such beverages for off-sale use."

Liberty League Plans Reports on Finances

The American Liberty League announced yesterday it would make regular reports on receipts and expenditures to the clerk of the House.

Such reports are required of political organizations by the Federal corrupt practices act. The executive committee of the league decided, an announcement said, that "although the league is not subject to the provisions of the act," it would make public the information the statute requires.

"This is done because the league desires that everyone at all times shall be fully informed of all its activities, including its receipts and disbursements," the statement said.

Will Leaves $1,000,000 To Yale as a Memorial

New York, Dec. 16 (AP).—Into the legal files of surrogates court today was placed a tribute of a father to his only son, who died shortly after starting his college education.

It was contained in the will of Charles Howard Warren, former underwriter and railroad official, who bequeathed his residuary estate of $1,000,000 to Yale University as "a memorial to my son, Lewis Baker Warren," and "to the Anglo-Saxon race, to which the United States owes its culture."

dividual families and organizations which have made their appeals through The Post. A dime or a dollar will help.

A grandmother brought two overflowing boxes of splendid toys which belonged to her grandchildren now in England to the headquarters of the Toy Fund yesterday. They were gratefully received and she will have the consolation of knowing that these playthings of her dear little ones will make many needy children happy on Christmas.

Used toys should be in good condition, not in need of repair, for time before Christmas is now too short for repair work to be done on them.

Toys may be sent to The Post Toy Fund headquarters in the Post Building free of charge by calling "Decatur 5130." The Terminal Taxicab Co. drivers are all serving as Santa Claus' aids for this purpose.

Aden Is 'Fortress' On Road to India

Aden, Arabia, Dec. 16.—This eastern terminus of the road to India is an increasingly formidable nest of arms, men and munitions, alert for any possible repercussions from the war in Africa.

The foreign population, usually about 1,000, now is approximately 5,000, with a continuous stream of British soldiers and sailors, sent here since the Italo-Ethiopian conflict thrust a tense situation across the Mediterranean, Red Sea and Gulf of Aden.

All important buildings in the British settlement, the telephone exchange, oil and shipping offices, are completely buffered with sandbags. Giant red crosses recently were painted on the roofs of hospitals.

Great Britain, in the last two months, has surrounded Aden with an imposing "mobile wall," apparently designed to cut off the whole of the eastern end of the Red Sea in an emergency. Six light and heavy cruisers, eight destroyers, four submarines and half a dozen other smaller gunboats ride at anchor in the harbor.

Mexico Senate Removes Heads Of Four States

All Sympathetic to Calles; Two School Bombings Add to Tension.

By the Associated Press.

Mexico City, Dec. 16.—The Senate, meeting in special session, tonight ousted the governors of four states who were known to be sympathetic toward former President Plutarco Elias Calles, as two new school bombings further disturbed Mexico's turbulent political atmosphere.

Heavy guards were ordered thrown around all school buildings in the capital after the latest bombings, which caused heavy property damage, but no injuries.

Three similar incidents during the day were attributed to opponents of socialistic education, apparently taking advantage of the situation created by the return to Mexico of Gen. Calles.

Paez, Ramos Included.

The four governors removed from their office tonight were Dr. Manuel Paez, of Sinaloa; Ramon Ramos, of Sonora; Carlos Real, of Durango, and Manuel Yanez Maya, of Guanajuato.

They were accused of seditious activities and violations of the constitution.

A few hours before the Senate acted, Gen. Calles, political foe of President Lazaro Cardenas, let it be known he would not leave the country again. He returned Friday from Los Angeles from a self-imposed exile.

Name Leyva, Gutierrez.

After removing the governors, the Senate named Col. Hernando Javiet Leyva as governor of Sinaloa, Jesus Gutierrez of Sonora, Gen. Severino Ceniceros of Durango and Enrique Fernandez Martinez of Guanajuato.

The Senate named a commission to request the war department to dismiss Gen. Calles and Gen. Jose Maria Tapia from their posts in the army.

Some speakers accused Tapia of attempting to line up state governors behind Calles in a movement against the government.

Metropolitan Begins Season With 'Traviata'

Policy of Americanization, Modernity to Feature 51st Season.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Dec. 16.—The Metropolitan opened its fifty-first season tonight with "La Traviata" under a new management committed to modernization and Americanization of opera—in the hope that the public will go clamoring to the box office.

Hollywood was called upon for advice about the staging and lighting. There was an entire new set for each act, designed by Jonel Jorgulesco. The new American ballet made its debut. An American soprano, Thelma Votipka, got her first chance at the Met as "Flora," a courtesan.

"We want to end the old system that forced Americans to go to Europe to win recognition before they could make a debut at the Metropolitan," asserted Director Edward Johnson, Canadian-born impresario, who succeeds Gatti-Casazza—retired after 27 years and now living at his home in Italy.

But the burden of Verdi's music was entrusted to seasoned troupers—Lawrence Tibbett, Richard Crooks and Lucrezia Bori. Bori's appearance was something of an innovation, too. It was believed the first by a member of the Met's board of directors. She was elected last season.

The opera house itself had new dress—socialites dined in a refurnished hall, the bar installed running water, the lounge had new cuspidors, and there were several hundred new seats in the orchestra.

Third Would-Be Robber Finds Wang Too Tough to Handle

James Wang, 44, is a north China man and he would just as soon tangle with a robber as serve a bowl of bird's-nest soup.

Another would-be holdup man got rough in Wang's restaurant at 1910 Eighteenth street northwest yesterday and was the third to come off second best with Wang in a year.

The man, later identified as Raymond Talbot, colored, 42, of the 300 block Second street northeast, took his seat in Wang's restaurant and ordered a dish of eggs foo young.

To help his digestion, he turned on a phonograph and played over and over again "I'm Painting the Town Red."

Finally, he turned to Wang and said:

"How much do I owe you?"

"Forty-five cents," said Wang.

"Well," Wang later quoted Talbot as saying, "I am not paying you; you are paying me."

Talbot pulled a revolver, police were told, and Wang snatched it.

He beat Talbot on the head alternately with the revolver and with his fist, then called two men to hold him while he called police. Talbot was taken to the Third Precinct Station and booked for investigation. But first he was taken to Emergency Hospital, where his wounds were treated.

A year ago two men tried to rob Wang. He noticed that they had guns, however, and when they demanded that he "stick 'em up," he shot one of them in the hand and the other in the arm.

Wang simply has made up his mind that he is not going to be robbed.

LET KIDNEYS FLUSH OUT 3 LBS. A DAY
Clean Out 15 Miles of Kidney Tubes
Nature put over 15 miles of tiny tubes and filters in your kidneys to strain the waste matter out of the blood. Kidneys should pass 3 pints a day and so get rid of more than 3 pounds of waste matter.
When the passing of water is scanty, with smarting and burning, the 15 miles of kidney tubes may need flushing out. This danger signal may be the beginning of nagging backache, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes and dizziness.
If kidneys don't empty 3 pints a day and so get rid of more than 3 pounds of waste matter, your body may take up some of these poisons causing serious trouble. Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, which have been used successfully by millions of people for over 40 years. They give happy relief and help the kidneys to flush out 3 pounds a day. Insist on Doan's Pills. Advt.

ritory" played a part in the selection. Two outstanding contenders for the party's Presidential nomination are Gov. Alf M. Landon, of Kansas, and Col. Frank Knox, of Chicago. No Ohioan has been prominently mentioned for the nomination.

Candidates Avoided.

If any Republican Presidential aspirant gained any advantage from the committee's actions yesterday it was not apparent on the surface. Even the fight over the apportionment of delegates—the sharpest which took place—did not in any apparent manner involve the prospects of any candidate.

Indeed, the committee members publicly and in many cases in private conversation, kept away from the topic of candidates. Gov. Nice, of Maryland, was the only one of the list of possible Presidential candidates who put in an appearance. All the others stayed away, although their agents and representatives were scattered throughout the Mayflower's ballroom, where the meeting took place.

Only once was the name of former President Hoover mentioned and that was at the end of the meeting when the committee's secretary, George deB. Keim, called the attention of members to the fact that the titular leader of the party would make last night's radio address. There was not a single audible handicap or other evidence that this announcement caused pleasure to anyone.

Speculation on Hoover.

In the corridors outside the meeting there was speculation as to what part Hoover plans to play in the party's fortunes next year and for that reason every observer watched every move his former secretary, George Akerson, who held a proxy for Mrs. Margaret Kent Medler, of New Mexico.

Akerson, in the only roll call which took place—that on apportionment of delegates—voted to support the position taken by Hilles. But this was not regarded as indicative of Hoover's views, since Mark L. Requa, personal friend of the former President and committeeman from California, and his associate, Committeewoman Edith Van de Water, both voted against Hilles. Walter F. Brown, Ohio committeeman, former chairman of the committee and Postmaster General under Hoover, cast Ohio's two votes in support of Hilles.

Henry P. Fletcher, national committee chairman, started the meeting with few preliminaries. He forsook the opportunity for an extended speech summarizing the party's prospects, but drew prolonged applause when in greeting the committee he declared that "we all know the New Deal is slipping" and again when he said: "We've got the Democrats on the run."

Routine Follows.

Routine business quickly followed, including ratification of new members to fill vacancies. Among those seated was O. E. Weller, as the Maryland committeeman to succeed Phillips Lee Goldsborough, now holding office in the New Deal as director of the FDIC. Weller immediately surrendered his seat by proxy to Gov. Nice and observed the remainder of the meeting from a balcony.

William B. Bell, chairman of the party's new finance committee, said the Democrats need not worry over the possibility that the Republicans would get large contributions from those with huge incomes because under the New Deal there were "no large incomes left in the United States." He said the committee would solicit contributions of less than $1 as well as others, and expected that farmers, home owners, insurance policyholders and millions of others who had suffered instability under the New Deal would support the Republicans cause.

George F. Getz, party treasurer, reported receipts of $617,432.78 since his last report and expenses of $484,035.67, with a balance in the party war chest of $133,387, exclusive of $42,000 due on a broadcasting debt incurred in the 1932 campaign. Fletcher congratulated the party on being "solvent."

While sub-committees went to work to draft memorials for deceased members and to formulate the call for a convention, the committee heard applications from cities desirous of obtaining the convention. Cleveland's newly elected Mayor, Harold H. Burton, Representative Chester C. Bolton, Committeeman Brown, Joseph R. Nutt, former Republican national treasurer, and Maurice Maschke, former committeeman from Ohio, presented the Lake Erie city's claims.

May Win Over Ohio.

These speakers offered a convention hall seating 15,500 persons comfortably and a city with sufficient housing facilities to take care of 100,000 or more persons. Brown put his plea on a political basis when he intimated that selection of Cleveland would bring Ohio back to the Republican fold.

Spokesmen for Chicago and Kansas City made their pleas and the committee adjourned for luncheon. The ballot on a convention city was taken immediately on reconvening. When Chairman Fletcher called for action on the date of meeting, former Senator Lawrence C. Phipps moved for an executive session.

Reed moved to refer this question to the executive committee. Wallace Townsend, of Arkansas, opposed this move and for a few minutes the meeting was in confusion. Finally it was decided to defer action on the date until later in the meeting. The next item of business was the selection of a vice chairman to succeed Mrs. Hert.

Mrs. Virginia W. Speel, committeewoman from the District of Columbia, moved that Mrs. Hert's resignation as vice chairman be re-

Text of Hoover's Address to Young Republicans of St. Louis Attacking Roosevelt's Policies

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, Dec. 16.—Following is the text of Herbert Hoover's address before the John Marshall Republican Club here tonight:

It was a pleasure to accept your invitation to debate national policies. There has been no time in two generations when it is more needed that men stand up and discuss public questions. The welfare of our people can make progress only upon the sunlit road of frank debate. The witchery of half truths fades only under the exposure of discussion and there is only disaster in the dark alleys of inspired propaganda. There ideals and men are assassinated with poisonous whisperings.

I have recently discussed the New Deal at Oakland and again at New York. Since then President Roosevelt at Atlanta has entered the debate in defense of the New Deal—particularly its spending, deficits and debts. I propose to debate so much of that statement as time permits.

You will not be astonished if we do not agree.

Perhaps more than any other living person I can sympathize with the President in his burdens. We could agree upon some acts of this Administration, but we disagree upon profound principles of human liberty. In its larger dimensions this irrepressible conflict is between the American system of liberty and New Deal collectivism. May I again say that true American liberalism is not the possession of any political party. Belief in it does not constitute men either Republicans or Democrats.

Recalls Speech.

Three years ago, speaking in New York City, I said "this . . . is a contest between two philosophies of Government. The expressions our opponents use must refer to important changes in our . . . system . . . otherwise they are nothing but vacuous words . . . They are proposing changes which would destroy the very foundations . . ." That warning was denied by our opponents.

We have now had three years of it. We have seen the weakening of self-government by Federal centralization. We have seen the color of personal government in the abandonment of Congressional responsibility under executive pressure. We have seen executive orders, propaganda, and threats substituted for specific laws. We have seen the color of despotism in the creation of a huge bureaucracy. We have seen the color of facism in the attempt to impose government-directed monopolies. We have seen the color of socialism by government in business competion with citizens. We have followed the old Roman pattern in the reputation of government obligations by the clipping of the coin. We are now speeding down the road of wasteful spending and debt. And unless we can escape we will be smashed in inflation. This is not forward-looking American liberalism. These are the suicide roads along which so many liberal governments in Europe have plunged over the precipice to despotism. It is no kaleidoscope of glittering forms for the amusement of children.

"Not Too Late."

It is, however, not too late to turn about. In that aspect I find a newspaper dispatch dated November 28 from Los Angeles. After announcing the naming of a new street as New Deal avenue, it says: "The new street is located near the Tugwell resettlement colony . . . because New Deal avenue comes to a dead end the county will arrange ample room . . . to turn around."

The practical questions we have to debate separate themselves into two great fronts.

The first is the insidious expansion of government over the lives of the people. Unless it is arrested it means the strangling of the liberties that were born with this Nation.

The second is the spending, debt, currency and credit policies of the Government. Even if they stood alone they would bring poverty and despair.

In speaking at Atlanta two weeks ago the President's first basis of defense for his gigantic spending, deficits and debts was the assertion that "the mechanics of civilization came to a dead stop on March 3, 1933."

Induced Hysteria.

What happened on March 3, 1933, was an induced hysteria of bank depositors. The banking structure at large subsequently proved to be sound. That is scarcely a dead stop to civilization.

I have always believed that

newspapers are one of the machines of civilization. They did not quit. At that time I saw no headlines that the farmers had ceased to fill the fields. Most of you did not detect that the delivery of food to your doors had stopped. Railway managers apparently did not know that their trains had stalled. Somebody failed to inform us that the hum of our factories was silent. We still had to jump out of the way of the 23,000,000 automobiles. Our churches, schools and courts are a part of the mechanics of civilization. They did not close. And the Supreme Court seems to be functioning yet. If civilization came to a dead stop the press missed a great piece of news that day.

If this notion is to be the excuse for this spending and other vagaries of the New Deal, we had better examine into it.

The truth is that the world-wide depression was turned in June-July, 1932, all over the world. That was before the election of the New Deal. That is supported by scores of leading American economists, business men and public leaders. It is supported by the economic publications throughout the world.

Claims Republican Aid.

That turning was aided by the measures of our republican government. These measures were within the Constitution of the United States. They were not that futile financial juggling which has violated economic law, morals, the Constitution and the structure of American liberty. The turning was aided by the efforts of foreign governments. Every commerical country, including the United States, surged forward. Prices rose, employment increased, the whole agricultural, financial and business structure grew in strength. After the election of the New Deal we began a retreat. Only in the United States was there an interruption. We were the strongest and should have led the van. And we lagged behind for two years. The other countries of the world went forward without interruption. They adopted no New Deal. Apparently those nations did not hear that the mechanics of civilization came to a dead stop on March 3, 1933.

It did not come to a stop even in the United States. It was meddled with. We have not got over it yet. But why did we have a panic of bank depositors in 1933? Because they were scared. We had no bank panic from the crash of the boom in 1929. We had no panic at the financial collapse in Europe in 1931. We had no panic at the most dangerous point in the depression when our banks were weakest in the spring of 1932. There was no panic before the election of November, 1932. When did they become frightened? They became scared a few weeks before the inauguration of the New Deal on March 4, 1933.

Asks Questions.

What were they frightened of? They could not have been scared by the outgoing Administration, which had only a few days to run. They were frightened at the incoming New Deal. Why were they scared at the New Deal? Because soon after the election large numbers of people awoke to the fact that promises given in the campaign would be violated. Among other things it gradually spread that the gold standard would be tinkered with. It was evident that a wholesale orgy of spending of public money would be undertaken. Business slackened its energies. Shrewd speculators shipped their money abroad at fabulous profits. Bankers tried to protect themselves. The public in blind fear demanded gold and the "covenants" of the United States which called for gold. Some of them were scared at the banks by the destructive publication of RFC loans. The banking structure was not insolvent. After the banks were closed it was found the solvent banks, measured by deposits, comprised 92 per cent of the banking strength of the country. The President himself stated they were sound. Subsequently more banks were found sound and reopened. And beyond this, important banks wrongfully closed by the New Deal, such as in the Detroit area, are now paying out 100 per cent to the depositors. It was the most political and the most unnecessary bank panic in all our history. It could have been prevented. It could have been cured by simple co-operation.

Quotes Roosevelt.

The President in further elucidation of the stop of civilization says: "At that time our national balance sheet, the wealth versus the debts of the American public, showed we were in the 'red.'" The value of America is not the quotations in the market place—either the highs of inflation booms or the loans made in anticipation of the New Deal. He informs us, however, that some great bankers told him that the country could safely stand an increase in the national debt to between 55,000,000,000 and 75,000,000,000. He adds, "remember this was in the spring of 1933." Thus we are to believe that when our wealth was less than our debts we were so strong we could still borrow 55,000,000,000. It certainly is a confusing thought. It indicates some little excess of assets and at the same time great restraint on the part of the New Deal.

The breakdown in confidence which sounded the advent of the New Deal is, of course, a helpful statistical point when they want to show how good they have been to us.

I have no desire to waste time over historical discussion. But correction of distortion which is used to justify destructive national policies and this high piling up of debt and taxes is imperative. It is even more imperative, as the documented facts upon that subject were published by Myers and Newton six months ago and have not been refuted.

New Deal Bookkeeping.

A second defense of this spending is a grand example of New Deal bookkeeping. The President justifies the 8½ million rise in debt by the New Deal by suggesting it is offset by "nearly 4½ billions of recoverable assets." He states also that the debt increased a little less than four billions in my administration. The little less was $400,000,000 less. But, of more importance, he received more than $2,200,000,000 of these recoverable assets from my administration; or, alternatively, they have realized those assets and spent the money. The President seems to have forgotten the very powerful agencies set up which were making loans for relief of agriculture and unemployment long before his administration.

With these corrections the increase in burdens on the taxpayers in the Hoover administration was under one and one-half billion. Also in addition to his two-and-one-half-billion error in estimating New Deal debt increase the President omitted the New Deal guarantee of four or five billions in bonds of lending companies. We may expect respectable losses on these also. It is unfortunate that within ten days after that address the national debt should have jumped another billion. And this is not the last jump. From the high signs in the Government skies I venture it will jump to thirty-two or thirty-three billions by next July.

But now we come to the President's major defense for this gigantic spending and unpaid bills. That is the need to relieve the unemployed. I shall develop that subject, for there is no better example of the whole workings of the New Deal. Its organization is typical of the whole gamut of waste, folly, ineffectiveness, politics and destruction of self-government. When in the face of a decrease in the unemployed the cost of relief rises from $1,100,000,000 to an appropriation of $4,800,000,000 for a single year it is certainly reason for searching inquiry.

Pities Decimal Point.

But when I comb over these accounts of the New Deal, my sympathy arises for the humble decimal point. His is a pathetic and hectic life, wandering around among regimented ciphers trying to find some of the old places he used to know.

Let me emphasize one thing right at the outset. There is no disagreement upon the public obligation to relieve distress which flows from national calamity. The support of that comes fom the conscience of a people. It comes from their fidelity to the Sermon on the Mount. The American people know that the genuine sufferers on relief are not slackers. They know the weary days of tramping the streets in search for a chance to work. They know the discouragement and despair which has stalked those homes. There is not a real man or woman whose heart does not warm to them who will not sacrifice for them.

Some five years ago I stated that, "as a Nation we must prevent hunger and cold to those of our people who are in honest difficulties." I have never heard a disagreement with that. And I wish to emphasize that there is no humor in relief. It is grim tragedy.

I believe I can without egotism claim to have had some special experience in relief. At one time or another it became my task to organize and administer relief to over 150,000,000 people who had been reduced to destitution by war or by famine or by flood both at home and abroad. I gave some years to that service in the aspiration to save life, to allay suffering, to restore courage and faith in humanity.

Cites 1930 Relief.

It also became my duty in 1930 to see that relief was organized for our unemployed. Organization of relief upon a Nation-wide basis was practically unknown in the world before those experiences. It therefore fell to me and my colleagues to pioneer in methods. We had to learn what basis would best and most sympathetically protect those in distress and still place the least burden on those who had to pay for it. I spent long, weary days listening to arguments whether to have direct money relief, or relief in kind, or public works, or made-work, or "boondoggling," or centralized administration, or decentralized responsibility. We tried out these alternatives. Out of those poignant experiences we learned certain fundamentals. We quickly learned that there were four types of persons who rush into relief. There were the starry-eyed who periodically discover that relief is needed and that everything up to date is wrong. There were those whose major passion was sociological experiment upon a mass of distress. There were those who would make profit from misery. There were always those present who do not neglect the political possibilities of relief. But there were the sterling, solid men and women in every city and hamlet who willingly served and sacrificed.

We learned that relief was an emergency operation, not a social experiment; that the object was to serve the people in genuine distress and nobody else. We learned that the dreamers cannot effectually conduct the grinding tasks of relief; that politics must be shunned as a plague. We learned that centralized bureaucracy gives the sufferers more red tape than relief. We learned that we must mobilize on a voluntary basis the best hearts and brains in every community to serve their neighbors. We learned that there must be complete decentralization to them of both authority and administration. We did not have to learn that local self-government and local responsibility was the basis of American life.

Secured Committees.

In 1930, by co-operation with the States, we secured the creation of State committees of leading citizens. With them we secured the creation of similar committees in every city, town and county where relief was needed. These committees had no politics. They were men and women experienced in large affairs, sympathetic understanding of the needs of their neighbors in distress. And they served without pay. In those days one did not enter into relief of his countrymen through the portals of a pay roll. American men and women of such stature can not be had as a paid bureaucracy, yet they will serve voluntarily all hours of the day and defer their own affairs to night.

These committees used the existing officials; they engaged their own tested organizations; they employed their own trusted citizens. They had the complete authoritw to determine the methods best adapted to their neighborhoods. They knew the problems of the man next door better than anybody in Washington. They themselves determined for their locality what method was to be used. They adapted those needs to the individual families. Their stewardship was under the limelight of their own community. They gave spiritual aid and encouragement.

At the start the relief in 1930 depended upon private giving. As times became more difficult, the committees co-operated in the use of county and municipal funds; and as it became still more difficult many of the State governments provided them with funds. Finally, as State resources weakened, we provided Federal Government funds to be distributed to the State governments and by them redistributed to the local organizations. That we built up no bureaucracy is evident from the fact that, although the Government had many new emergency tasks, yet during the Hoover Administration the total number of all Government officials decreased by 10,000. That form of organization expressed in its noblest form the whole American ideal of local self-government. Local responsibility, national co-operation, and the voluntary spirit of human service.

Denies Failure.

There was no important failure to provide for those in real need. There was no substantial complaint or suggestion of waste, politics, or corruption. Neither the Republican Party nor any of its agencies ever asked for votes or claimed that its Administration deserved votes for it. That idea was repugant to every decent sense of Americanism.

However, all this was forgotten on March 3, 1933. We may accept that the date of creation was moved to March 4, and we may examine what sort of a world has been made.

At that moment good men appeared who were certain that before their advent everything was done wrong. Also came the visionaries, the profit-maker, and above all, the politician. They all yearned to serve their fellowmen.

The whole relief work was promptly centralized from Washington. State and local organizations were dismissed or reduced to mere window dressing. A paid bureaucracy was spread over the land. The history of the last two and one-half years shows the floundering of this Administration. That needs no more proof than the buffeting of those in distress from FERA or PWA or its subsidiaries to EPW, then to SERA, then to CWA, partly to FRSC, then back to FERA and over to WPA. It has been a sort of rain-maker's cabalistic dance. As each of these alphabetical organizations flares up in folly and waste its victims and its accounts have been buried by juggling of the alphabet. Now the Federal Government disavows its responsibilities for all but 3,500,000 out of the 10,000,000 unemployed. But what of the tragic anxiety in this mass of people lest they may be left out in all this shifting? That reminds them to collect a little political influence that they may not be forgotten men.

Skeptical on Works.

From ample experience during my administration we were compelled to the conclusion that Federal public works in these times except in narrow limits do not secure enough jobs to justify them. Nor does employment seem the dominant idea in the billions now being poured down such projects. Part of these billions are going into wholesale sociological experiments. Most of them are already demonstrated failures. Part of these works are to take the Government into business competition with the citizen. The Government pays no taxes. The Treasury pays the losses. The constant threat of them retards enterprise and therefore jobs. One of the ideas in these spendings is to prime the economic pump. We might abandon this idea also, for it dries up the well of enterprise.

One department of these works is of interest to the farmer. The reports of the reclamation service show new expansions begun in the past three years which in capital and interest will cost over $800,000,000 to complete. We in the far West like it. At the same time the farmer is being paid to let his land lie idle. It lacks some element of horse sense. But we have been governed by paradoxes and contraries and complexes ever since "the mechanics of civilization came to a stop." The New Dealers told us we were hungry because we had too much food and the way to repletion was through scarcity. Perhaps this reclaimed land will enable us some day to improve that third-class diet which we encourage today with scarcity, increased cost of living, and taxes.

Quotes Mayor.

There is something for thought also in the recent protest of the Democratic Mayor of Pittsburgh, who complains that "a job in our city done under unemployment relief methods cost $64,000, while the contract estimate was $18,000. This is typical of all projects to a greater or less degree." He further says that "by its methods . . . It has created a blood clot in the arteries of industry."

I do not wish to weary you with details. Anyway, the taxpayer had better not complain of these gigantic wastes. He will be told he has murder in his heart through trying to starve his fellow citizens.

—ROOSEVELT—

We may compare the cost of these two forms of administration—the one founded on local self-government under the glare of its local public opinion; the other being run by a political bureaucracy from Washington.

Statictics are dry subjects, but just now figures are the most important thing in our national life. The entire cost of relief to unemployment during the last year of the Republican Administration was about $1,100,000,000. That includes Federal, State, municipal, county and private giving. It includes Federal Public Works above normal and does not include relief to agriculture.

The Federal overhead was not over $250,000 a year. That total number of paid Federal employes was less than 200.

Gives A. F. L. Figures.

Now let us examine the respective needs in these two periods. The average of the monthly figures of the American Federation of Labor shows 11,600,000 unemployed during the last year of the Hoover administration. During the year of the New Deal ending this October the unemployed have averaged about 11,100,000. That was a decrease of the unemployment load by about 5 per cent.

Now let us note the increase in relief cost. However, the marvelous migatory habits of these relief funds from one place in the alphabet to another make them difficult hunting. But judging from Treasury and other statements the expenditures on all relief alphabets in the year ending last October for Federal, State, and local were over $3,500,000,000. This also includes Federal Public Works over normal, but does not include relief to agriculture. There were over pose of any bureaucracy," he said, "is to use its powers to secure its jobs. The sudden appropriations to cities, counties and States were singularly timed to elections. And this is not the only method of making politics out of human misery."

'33 Bank Panic, Waste Charged To Roosevelt

Hoover Declares Increases in Costs Are Grounds for Inquiry.

"Reason for Inquiry."

"When, in the face of a decrease in the unemployed, the cost of relief rises from $1,100,000,000 to an appropriation of $4,800,000,000 in a single year, it is certainly reason for searching inquiry . . .

"Every community has been forced to become a conspiracy to get its share from the Federal grab bag."

He asserted the Administration's "floundering" was shown by "the buffeting of those in distress from the FERA or PWA or its subsidiaries to EPW, then to SERA, then to CWA, partly to FRSC, then back to SERA and over to WPA.

"It has been a sort of rainmaker's cabalistic dance."

Attacking the President's Atlanta statement, Hoover said:

"I have always believed that the newspapers are one of the mechanisms of civilization. They did not quit . . . I saw no headlines that the farmers had ceased to till the fields. Most of you did not detect that the delivery of food to your doors had stopped . . . we still had to jump out of the way of 23,000,000 automobiles . . . and the Supreme Court seems to be functioning yet.

"If civilization came to a dead stop the press missed a great piece of news that day."

Criticizes Figures.

Hoover said the bank panic was precipitated by the realization that Democratic campaign promises were to be "violated" and that currency was to be "tampered with."

"After the election of the New Deal we began a retreat," he said. "Only in the United States was there an interruption . . . The other countries . . . went forward. They adopted no new deal. Apparently they did not hear that the mechanics of civilization came to a dead stop on March 3, 1933."

"The President justifies the $8,500,000,000 rise in debt by the New Deal by suggesting it is offset by 'nearly $4,500,000,000 of recoverable assets' . . . He received more than $2,200,000,000 of these recoverable assets from my administration; or, alternatively, they have realized those assets and spent the money."

He quoted Roosevelt as saying the debt increase under the Hoover Administration was "a little less than four billions," and added:

"The little less was $400,000,000."

"With these corrections the increase in burdens on the taxpayers in the Hoover Administration was under $1,500,000,000."

Hoover said "important banks wrongfully closed by the New Deal, such as in the Detroit area, are now paying out 100 per cent to the depositors."

Cites Experience.

Saying, "I believe I can without egotism claim to have had some special experience in relief," Hoover suggested the following relief plans:

1. Stop these wasteful Federal public works projects; confine them to projects which meet the needs of the Nation.

2. Decentralize the administration of all other forms of relief. Turn them back to the States and local communities . . . in joint cooperation with governors, mayors and county authorities, enlist again the voluntary services of American men and women on a nonpartisan basis . . . allot to the States less than one-half the present funds being spent in the relief. Require the local authorities to find from their local funds at least 5 per cent as a check on waste. Require the State to do its share, discharge most of the Federal officials . . . The unemployed will be better cared for than they are today.

3. Do it now. That would go far to assure a clean election. . . .

4. . . . True relief must come from honest productive jobs, not from public funds. Those jobs would return quickly if the currency were stabilized and this torrent of unnecessary expenditure were stopped and the budget were balanced.

Hoover asked young Americans to study their country and debate every phase of its government.

"What you decide," he said, "will be final for your country for you have many votes."

New 'Baby Bonds' Go on Sale Jan. 1

By the Associated Press.

Secretary Morgenthau announced yesterday a new series of "baby bonds" will be offered the public January 1.

These will be designated "Series B" to differentiate them from the securities sold during 1935.

The new bonds in all other respects will be similar to those now being sold, and will be marketed under the same terms and conditions.

Since the sale of these securities began last March 1, cash receipts have aggregated $178,718,250, representing a maturity value of $238,291,000.

They are sold on a discount basis, the interest payments being deducted from the purchase price. For the full ten years of maturity, the interest amounts to 2.9 per cent.

Couzens Off for Capital.

Phoenix, Ariz., Dec. 16 (AP)—Senator James J. Couzens, of Michigan, after several weeks here recovering from a serious operation, left by train today for Washington.

Zoe Patterson Is Wed At Brilliant Ceremony

Hundreds See Cuban Ambassador's Daughter United to Swiss Legation Attache; Apostolic Delegate Officiates.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

"Here Comes the Bride" was played with solemnity by a stringed orchestra yesterday as Senorita Zoe Patterson, daughter of the Cuban Ambassador, and Mr. Ernest Schlatter, attache of the Swiss Legation, were married. Several hundred members of the diplomatic corps, official and residential society gathered at the embassy on Sixteenth street long before 4:30 o'clock to obtain advantageous places for the ceremony.

An improvised altar had been arranged in the conservatory at one end of the ballroom, with hangings of white velvet forming the background for the altar, above which hung an ancient icon. The Apostolic Delegate, Archbishop Ciagnini, performed the ceremony, clad in the crimson robes of the church.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white satin fashioned on severely simple lines, with a bateau neck and long-fitted sleeves. The skirt terminated in a long circular train, and her veil of rare old lace was held in place by a bandeau of orange blossoms. She carried a bouquet of lilies of the valley.

Sister Among Bridesmaids.

The bridesmaids were Senorita Olga Pattersen, sister of the bride; Senoritas Marta Graciela and Rebeca Trucco, daughters of the Chilean Ambassador, Senor Don Manuel Trucco; Senorita Ema Gaete, niece of the Chilean Ambassador, and Miss Florence Harris, daughter of Mrs. Russell Bennett. They all wore frocks of aquamarine crepe fashioned on long straight lines, with long flowing sleeves and high necklines. The frocks were girdled with antique gold and turquoise, and the bridesmaids wore bandeaux of golden leaves in their hair and carried arm bouquets of yellow roses.

There were no groomsmen, following the European custom, but Mr. Marc Peter, the Minister of Switzerland, was best man for Mr. Schlatter.

Following the ceremony there was a reception at which the young couple was assisted in receiving by the Ambassador, Senor Don Guillermo Patterson; the Minister of Switzerland and Mme. Peter, and Mme. Schlatter-Roll, mother of the bridegroom, as well as the bridesmaids. Mme. Schlatter-Roll wore a gown of terra cotta crepe, with a smart hat of brown felt, and Mme. Peter wore a gown of black and silver lame, with a tiny hat of black antelope.

Many Beautiful Girls.

Guests moved from the reception room to one of the drawing rooms, where the bridal gifts had been arranged. And such a beautiful array of presents! Whole tables of Lalique vases and bowls, handsome flat silver service plates of hand-wrought silver, bowls of antique Sheffield, a tea service which had been willed to the first of the sisters who married, a case which contained several handsome pieces of jewelry, a miniature of the bride painted on ivory, a silver rosary, a gift from the apostolic delegate, and many other articles too numerous to mention.

Then on to the dining room where there was a magnificent buffet, and where the guests drank the health of the young couple with champagne punch. There was dancing in the ballroom, and a general atmosphere of festivity, as the most dignified guests responded to the delightfully informal air which characterized the reception.

Just before retiring to dress for the wedding trip which will take the young couple to Bermuda, the bride stood at the marble railing which forms the balustrade of the crimson - carpeted staircase and tossed her bouquet to the six pretty bridesmaids, who scrambled enthusiastically for the prize, which was caught by Miss Harris, but finally carried off by Senorita Marta Trucco.

To Live in Alexandria.

Guests lingered until late for a glimpse of the departing bride and bridegroom, and were not disappointed, for Mr. Schlatter and his bride made their exit from the front door of the embassy and were pelted with rice. The bride wore for traveling a frock of hennacolored crepe with a hat to match and a brown coat trimmed with mink.

After January 2 Mr. and Mme. Schlatter will be at home in Alexandria, where they have leased one of the charming houses of that quaint town.

Among the guests were Mrs. Henry A. Morgenthau, jr., wife of the Secretary of the Treasury; Mrs. Claude A. Swanson, wife of the Secretary of the Navy; the Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. Daniel C. Roper; the Ambassador of Peru, Senor Don Manuel de Freyre y Santander; the Ambassador of Argentina and Senora de Espil, the Charge d'Affaires of Poland and Mme. Sokolwska; the Ambassador of Italy, Signor Augusto Rosso; the First Secretary of the Embassy, Signor Bartholomeo Migone; the Naval Attache of the Embassy and the Marchioness di Sant'Orsola, the Ambassador of France and Mme. de Laboulaye, accompanied by their daughter, Mlle. Marie Therese de Laboulaye; the Military Attache of the French Embassy and Mme. Lombard; Frau Scholz, wife of the First Secretary of the German Embassy; Rear Admiral Witthoeft-Emden, Naval Attache of the German Embassy, and Dr. Ernst Meyer, First Secretary of the Embassy; the Ambassador of Chile, Senor Don Manuel Trucco; the Charge d'Affaires of Spain and Senora de Yrujo; the Ambassador of Turkey and Mme. Ertegun, the Ambassador of Mexico and Senora de Castilla Najera, the Ambassador of China, Dr. Sao-Ke Alfred Sze; the Minister of Austria and Mme. Prochnik; the Minister of Guatemala and Senora de Recinos; the Charge d'Affaires of Czechoslovakia, Dr. Josef Nemecek; the Minister of the Irish Free State and Mrs. Michael MacWhite; the Minister of Denmark and Mme. Wadsted; the Minister of Panama, Senor Dr. Ricardo Alfaro, with his daughter, Senorita Amelita Alfaro; the Minister of Bolivia and Senora de Finot; the Minister of Iran and Mme. Djalal; the Minister of Portugal and Mme. de Bianchi; the Minister of Hungary and Mme. Pelenyi; the Minister of the Union of South Africa and Mrs. Ralph Close; the Minister of Finland and Mme. Jarnefelt; the Minister of Greece, Mr. Demetrios Scicilianos; the Minister of Bulgaria and Mme. Petroff, and the Minister of Siam and Mme. Rajamaitri.

Others in Attendance.

Others were Mrs. B. Sumner Welles, wife of the Assistant Secretary of State; Mrs. James J. Davis, just back from New York, where she attended the wedding of Mrs. Marjorie Hutton and Mr. Joseph E. Davies on Sunday; Mrs. J. Hamilton Lewis, wife of Senator Lewis, just back from Europe; Rear Admiral and Mrs. Mark L. Bristol; Mr. and Mrs. William P. MacCracken, jr.; Baroness von Below, and many others.

Mrs. Lawrence Townsend will present the first musicale of the current season of concerts sponsored by her each year, tomorrow at the Mayflower Hotel. The doors to the ballroom will be closed at 11:15 a. m., immediately after Mrs. Roosevelt's arrival.

The musicale will mark the Washington debut of Mme. Kirsten Flagstad, Norwegian soprano, who has been singing recently at the Metropolitan Opera Company in New York. Also appearing at the musicale will be Ramon Totenberg, Polish violinist, who made his American debut several weeks ago with the National Symphony Orchestra.

Members of official and diplomatic society will be represented at the affair. Among those who have recently come to Washington to reside and who will be present will be Mrs. Lewis Emory, jr., Mrs. Fred M. Davenport and Mrs. Frank Knox. And from Virginia will come Mrs. K. H. Metcalf, of Middleburg; Mrs. C. Oliver Islin, of Warrenton; Mrs. Kenneth Gilpin, of Boice, and Mrs. Patrick Hurley, wife of the former Secretary of War, of Leesburg.

Immediately following the concert, Mrs. Townsend will entertain at luncheon for the two artists, with members of the Polish and Scandinavian legations as special guests.

Several of the boxes which have been taken for the season will be vacant for the first concert, as the boxholders will be attending the funeral services at Arlington Cemetery for Miss Alexandra Bacon, daughter of Representative and Mrs. Robert Low Bacon.

Ball Set Tonight By Democrats

The Farleys and Woodrings to Be Among Guests at Affair.

The Postmaster General and Mrs. Farley and the Assistant Secretary of War and Mrs. Harry H. Woodring will be among guests at the Democratic campaign fund ball tonight in the ballroom of the Mayflower Hotel.

Other guests at the affair will include the Assistant Secretary of the Interior and Mrs. T. A. Walters, Judge and Mrs. William E. Lee, Gov. and Mrs. James Curley of Massachusetts, Senator and Mrs. David I. Walsh, Senator Robert Wagner, Senator and Mrs. Royal S. Copeland, Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Lattimer and Mr. Pat O'Brien.

Boxes will be arranged around the ballroom for State presidents and their guests with the seals of the 48 States decorating the boxes.

Miss Ruth Evelyn Madden is general chairman in charge of arrangements and Mrs. Bradish Carroll, jr., is box chairman.

McKellar to Attend Tennessean Dance

Senator Kenneth McKellar, of Tennessee, who returned recently to Washington for the coming session of Congress, will be among the Tennesseans in the receiving line at the entertainment and dance to be given by the Tennessee State Society this evening. The affair will be held in the Hall of the Nations at the Washington Hotel at 9:30 p. m.

Party Planned At White House For Diplomats

Reception to Be Held Tonight; Mrs. Roosevelt Host to Texans.

President and Mrs. Roosevelt will entertain at a reception for members of the Diplomatic Corps of Washington tonight at the White House.

Mrs. Roosevelt was hostess at tea yesterday afternoon in the state dining room of the Executive Mansion following the lecture given by Lady Mabel Dunn, of England, in the east room. The lecture, which was illustrated, was on Salzburg, where the music festivals are given. Earlier in the afternoon, Mrs. Roosevelt received a small delegation from Texas which delivered to her an invitation to attend the Texas Centennial.

Last night, Mrs. Roosevelt attended the performance of "Victoria Regina," in which Helen Hayes is appearing.

Mrs. G. R. Howard To Lecture on Play

Review Today Last Before Christmas Holidays.

Mrs. Georgette Ross Howard will open her weekly current topics lecture at Sulgrave Club this morning at 11:30 with a brief review of "Victoria Regina," the new play in which Helen Hayes is appearing this week.

"Across the seas" topics will include a discussion of the proposed partition of Ethiopa, the actions of the League of Nations and a summary of the situation at the London naval conference, which is "nearing its first crisis while Japan marches into China." Questions of national interest include the "Three Chief Issues Confronting America Today," "The Nine Wise Men in the Temple of Justice," and "The Town Tonight on the Rampage."

This lecture will be the last before the Christmas holiday. Mrs. Howard will resume her series on Tuesday morning, January 7.

Notables Will See 'Inheritors' Play

Ballou Among Those Accepting Theater Invitation.

Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools, has accepted the invitation of the Columbia Players to attend their production of "Inheritors," by Susan Glaspell, at Pierce Hall Thursday. This will be the second performance.

Educators are showing much interest in the production of the famous play.

The players have also invited the Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Henry Wallace, the Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes and the Undersecretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Rexford Guy Tugwell.

This will be the first presentation of the play in Washington. Last year the players produced Miss Glaspell's other famous play, "Alison's House."

Dance to Be Given By Jersey Society

A Christmas dance will open the season for the New Jersey State Society Thursday night at the Shoreham Hotel. Dancing will be from 9:30 till 1 o'clock with floor show presented during the intermission.

Featured in the entertainment to be presented by the Hoffman Studios will be Miss Lillian Hoffman, Miss Gloria Kenney, Miss Zoe McComb, Miss Mae Jacobs and Miss Helen Fay Smith.

Sydna White Tells Impressions Of 'Different' India After Visit

Guest of Mme. Bonesco Went to Orient to Study Music for Year and Came Away With New Ideas of Ancient Country.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

MOST AMERICANS who visit India return with hair-raising tales of child marirages, enforced widowhood, thieves' bazaars, and women whose faces men never see; but Miss Sydna White, of Boston, has different tales to tell after a year spent in the Orient. Going to India to visit a friend and study native music, she remained a year gathering impressions that have little to do with the "Mother India" of fact and fable.

Miss White, a guest of Mme. Bonescо, wife of the counselor of the Rumanian Legation, describes with enthusiasm the experiences of her year in India. She visited the home of a missionary; stayed a few weeks with a woman physician "who conducts a successful practice in a village of 10,000 Hindus;" took "tubbla" lessons—"something unheard of for a woman in India"—from a Bengalese teacher; distributed Christmas mufflers to lepers, hunted for leopards in the wilds of Kashmir, and pedaled on a bicycle through streets crowded with "camels and cows, buffaloes and babies, holy men and men not-so-holy."

From her experiences she gleaned material enough for a series of lectures that present India from the point of view of one who went to the Orient to study music instead of people and came back knowing a good deal about both.

Caste Breaking Down.

Miss White declined to talk of the work of either Mahatma Gandhi or Rabindranath Tagore, but she did express the opinion that caste is breaking down in India; that many women are coming out of "purdah" to play an increasingly active part in public affairs, and that others are attending universities to become lawyers and teachers.

"There are many women physicians already," she said, "because women in 'purdah' cannot be attended by a male doctor." The flowing white dresses of the women in "purdah" are still commonly seen on the streets in India. Miss White brought back with her some typical costumes which are designed to cover the head and face, and hang to the floor.

Indian women are apparently not interested in what Western women wear, according to Miss White. "I don't believe they will ever discard their native dress," she declared, "which is a good thing, for nothing would be so becoming to them as the traditional 'sari,' which, by the way, comes from a Sanskrit word meaning 'to flow gently.' Worn in many different ways, according to caste and religion, the scarf falls like a cascade from the brow to the hem of the dress."

Women Beautiful.

She described the women as being beautiful, "with their glossy black hair parted in the middle, their smooth complexions and their regal posture." She was impressed with their serenity, but credited it less to their philosophy than to the fact that "their lives are slowly paced. Vitality is low in India. You don't find anyone getting very much excited about anything over there."

"The caste mark, red circular insignias on the forehead of Indian women, attracts much attention from the traveler," she said. "Another thing I noticed was the red mark in the part in the hair of many women. I learned this simply signifies that the woman is married. The mark is placed there first by the husband on the morning after the wedding night."

Discussing Indian music, Miss White emphasized that it is monotonous to the Western ear at first, but "later, as you hear it more and more, you fall under its spell." When she inquired about taking lessons on the "tubbla," saying she wanted to play her own accompaniment when she sang Indian songs, the natives were astonished. "Women don't play the tubbla in India, and musicians don't accompany themselves. When I finally persuaded a teacher to give me lessons, I found it's a difficult thing to do. Something like patting your head and rubbing your stomach," she said.

Rhinestone Set Adds a Festive Touch to Frock

Brilliant Ornaments Are Old Stand-bys for That Bit of Glamor.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

RHINESTONE ornaments are old stand-bys when it comes to giving one's dress a festive touch. Two clips, a brooch, a bracelet, earrings or a belt buckle, any one of these has played the hero time and again by adding a bit of scintillating glamor to a frock.

That's why we are all delighted to find a gift of rhinestones (since we can't have diamonds) in our Christmas stocking. One buyer who is ecpecially adept at catering to our shopping fancies tempts us this week with the most practical, rhinestone groups you ever saw and priced at the most amazingly low prices. For instance, one set includes a stunning rhinestone bracelet and two matching clips. Another, an exquisite belt buckle, and one large glittering clip. You should see the two brooches in the shape of wild ducks flying! And no set among them costs over $1.

Cocktails for Two!

HAVE YOU SEEN the quaint little cocktail shakers that are just right for two. Not two cocktails, mind you, but two persons. They'll hold four, maybe half a dozen martinis or manhattans.

But guess what comes inside when you buy them. Bath salts! One whole pound of fine crystals to impart a luxurious fragrance to your tub! The price—$1.

Smart Vanity Set.

IN A BOX like a little toy drum comes a most delightful vanity set consisting of a small bottle of gardenia perfume, a lovely lipstick and a perfectly thrilling compact.

Here's a set that's usable! Besides being ornamental—and it is that!—it's practical a hundred times over.

It's just that grand price of $3.50 that comes in so well between the $1 and $5 brackets on our list.

Luxury Bath Set.

THEY HAVE the delightful fragrance of old English lavender, some bath sets made by an English concern. They include a bottle of lavender cologne, a cake of soap and a package of bath crystals.

A little luxury set like this makes an ideal Christmas gift. Many are the women who would adore to step into a sweet-scented tub of water, bathe with a fragrant lathery soap, and then daub a refreshing toilet water over themselves!

Christmas Carol Sets.

THOSE OF YOU who have postponed shopping for Christmas cards until this very last moment and now find that you haven't time to search the town over for distinctive ones—here's an earful of glad tidings. In the stationery department of a local store are some Christmas cards literally brimming over with personality. One group of them is the Dickens set. Sixteen gravure cards (with envelopes, of course), showing interesting scenes from Dickens stories. There's Mr. Micawber and David Copperfield, Tony Weller and his Christmas party, and any number of others.

Handkerchief Bargain.

THERE MAY be nothing exciting about handkerchiefs, but they do make gifts that are definitely usable. So, those of you who are in the market for a real handkerchief bargain, don't miss the sale of six for a dollar. The hankies are white or colored, with an embroidered initial in the corner.

Call Ruth Anne Davis, of The Washington Post, National 4200, Extension 323, for further information, or write, inclosing stamped, addressed envelope.

This BUSINESS of LIVING

Girl Debates Giving Gifts to Employer and Friendly Men in Office.

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: I have been employed for 11 months and have been most kindly treated by my employer and by two other men employed in the same office. One of the latter and his wife have treated me almost like a daughter. They gave me a birthday gift, and also, from time to time, have given me other things like cake and candy.

• • • •

The other day I overheard this man telling my employer that he and his wife were getting me something for Christmas. Now, I would like to know if it would be proper for me to give that man and his wife a Christmas gift, and if so, should I also give my employer and the other man some remembrance? I think it would certainly be proper for me to send each of the men and his wife a Christmas card, wouldn't it? Please advise me as soon as possible. Yours very truly,

PUZZLED.

• • • •

DEAR PUZZLED: In the case of the couple who have collaborated in showing you little kindnesses the past year, it would be enough to remember them at Christmas with a card sent to their home address and inscribed to Mr. and Mrs. So-and-So. However, if you wish, it would be entirely proper to send a gift, impersonal in nature, which both might enjoy, such as a potted poinsettia plant for the home, one of the new books, a handsome deck of cards or a box of sweets addressed, of course, to both.

• • • •

Since it is to be expected that employers treat employes with constant courteous, if impersonal, consideration; and that employes work together in harmony, it does not necessarily follow that one must put a personal construction on well-bred office civility by adding all one's business confreres to one's Christmas gift or even card list. It is enough to verbally wish such associates a merry Christmas. If, however, your employer's wife as well as your employer has demonstrated a cordial awareness of your existence, and if the same is true in the case of the other man in the office, it would be quite all right to send them Christmas cards at their home address, addressed to husband and wife. I think it would be exaggerated holiday sentiment to send cards either to home or office address of men associates in business whose wives you don't know.

Two Washington Women Construct Realistic Plaster Model Of Scene From the Poem, ''Twas the Night Before Christmas'

Mrs. William Walter and Mrs. Ruth Deggs photographed with the model they made for their children's Christmas present. The scene is based on Clement Moore's well-known poem which begins, "'Twas the night before Christmas."

Four Months Were Required for Clever Replica of Midnight Episode.

By Dudley Harmon.

WITH NIMBLE fingers, plenty of paste and paint, and a copy of Clement Moore's beloved poem, "'Twas the Night Before Christmas," two Washington women set to work in September to make something original to put under their children's Christmas tree.

The women are Mrs. William Walters, 4530 Twenty-ninth street and Mrs. Ruth Deggs, Kennedy Warren apartments, whose children are firm supporters of the Santa Claus theory.

Now, four months later the two point with pride to a completed model, exactly to scale, depicting the exciting moment in the poem when Saint Nicholas arrives on Christmas Eve and wakes up the sleeping family with his jingling sleighbells.

In the model, the head of the house, aroused by the clatter outside, is depicted with nightcap flying and shirttails flapping in the cold breeze which sweeps in through the open window and twists the curtains crazily. If you look closely, you will see that in his haste to see what the hullabaloo is all about, father has paused long enough to put on only one of his bright red slippers.

Mother is Excited.

Mamma, from her place in the big four poster, is equally excited. She is dressed appropriately for a winter night in a frilled gown and matronly mob cap, faithful reproductions copied by the young artists from illustrations of the period.

Asleep in their trundle bed lie two little children, as yet unawakened by the noise, and no doubt still dreaming of the sugar plums and other good things which Santa Claus will leave behind him on Christmas Eve. The two children doze peacefully beneath a benevolent chromo on the wall above, which reads, "God Bless Our Home."

You will perhaps remember that the poem describes the scene outside the open window as follows:

"The moon on the breast of the new fallen snow
Gave the luster of mid-day to objects below,
When, what to my wondering eyes should appear,
But a miniature sleigh and eight tiny reindeer."

Although they cannot be seen in the photograph, moonlight, sleigh and all eight reindeer are carefully reproduced just outside the window. The snow is really white paint, the moon effect is a cleverly concealed electric light, and a rosy-cheeked Santa in plaster is airily suspended in his sleigh against a cardboard sky.

Mrs. Walter and Mrs. Deggs made every bit of the model, including furniture and clothes, by hand.

"For the curtain and bedspread," they said, "we had to invent our own formula, a combination of plaster and glue. We wanted not so much to copy these materials exactly as to strive for an effect. We used plaster in the composition of the curtains to make them billow in the imaginary breeze. The bedspread has pink and blue patches painted on it in quilt design. The clothes we coated with wax to make them stand out stiffly.

"We made the furniture from sketches of the period. The fourpotser is of ordinary wood, but the chest of drawers is actually only cardboard, shellacked and painted to look like the real thing. We fashioned the miniature rag rug on the floor out of odds and ends of cloth.

"We worked on the model whenever we could snatch spare moments from household duties, and looking after the children."

Both Mrs. Walter and Mrs. Deggs studied at the Corcoran Art School. In addition, Mrs. Deggs studied with Dwight Franklin, well-known instructor in modeling, and worked on several of the models on view in the Red Cross Building in Washington. Elated by the success of their first experiment, they plan next to illustrate scenes from Dickens and other authors whom children enjoy.

"The model was at first intended as a surprise for the children on Christmas Day," said Mrs. Walter, "but you can't keep anything like this a secret from their inquisitive eyes."

However, none of the original excitement has worn off as far as the children are concerned.

"It's just like Christmas every day to have the model around," said 4-year-old Diana Walter.

Mothers Urged To Teach Child By Play Method

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

THE SUREST WAY to make a child dislike books and learning of any kind is to make his first lessons unpleasant.

Children are naturally very curious and eager to learn all that they can about the world they live in. Learning and playing are practically synonymous to a little child. He learns every minute that he is playing, and it is quite easy to reverse the process and let him play every minute that he is learning.

This does not mean that he is always to play, never to learn what it means to concentrate and to work hard on a problem because it must be solved, whether he enjoys it or not. But the first lessons, those which he learns in the nursery and kindergarten, should be of such a kind that his curiosity, his interest and his ambition are aroused. He must learn to associate pleasant emotions with learning, not unpleasant ones.

It is amazing what such a point of view can do to stimulate the tiny child. He can, with little effort, learn enough before he is 6 to enter the fourth grade in school. Instead of that, most children enter the first grade at 6 or 7, with no interest in work, and find the next few years a hard grind of absorbing information against their will.

The nursery is the place to teach colors, form, nature, texture, simple arithmetic, folklore, love of poetry, rhythm, rhyme, singing, dancing, the days of the week, months of the year, mapmaking, use of pencils and scissors, bedmaking, simple cooking, plain sewing, use of tools, how to speak, even reading and writing.

The lessons should not be formal, but should be part of the routine of everyday life. It does not take an educator to do it, but a mother who is herself interested and who never loses her temper or grows impatient, because it is all play.

Brings Music and Colorful Tales From India

A RECENT visitor in Washington, Miss Sydna White, of Boston, is one of the few women in the world who play Indian songs and accompany themselves on the native musical instrument, the tubbla. She spent a year in the Orient studying native customs and returned with a repertoire of songs and colorful stories on people and practices in India.

Bride Is Urged To Adjust Self To All In-Laws

Experts Say Persons Are Happiest as Members of "the Clan."

UNLESS a young woman adjusts her personality so that she can become a congenial member of her future husband's family circle, it is probably wise for her to terminate her engagement, according to Mary Morgan, radio authority on human relationship problems.

"I can't bear George's mother, but it's all right because I'm marrying George and not his family," say many young brides-to-be. But, in Miss Morgan's opinion, it is George's family that is to be married, just as much as George himself. Very few young couples can make their own circle of friends and be completely oblivious of family ties that have flourished for years before the wedding. For a short time most couples are self-sufficient, but children are invariably happiest as part of a family group and need close associations with grandparents, aunts, uncles and cousins for a completely happy childhood.

"Sociologists, psychologists and experts in human relationships," Miss Morgan said, "all agree that people are happiest when they are members of families or clans composed of relatives who have enjoyed a similar environment and had like social and economic problems. A really perfect marriage will unite two families of equal social standing to the mutual benefit of both groups."

Personality adjustment to in-laws, and particularly to a mother-in-law, the member of a fiance's family seemingly most feared by future brides, is not at all impossible, believes Miss Morgan. First of all, the younger woman must put aside any intuitive dislike of her fiance's mother in a kindly effort to understand her.

Deliberately saying and doing the things that will smooth another's feelings is not being hypocritical, assures the charm expert. Pleasing others brings out the best that is in them, and is not a form of deceit. Even the most difficult mother-in-law will respond to admiration and few older women can resist the compliment of being asked for advice, whether it's how to bake George's favorite cake or how to handle his pet grouches.

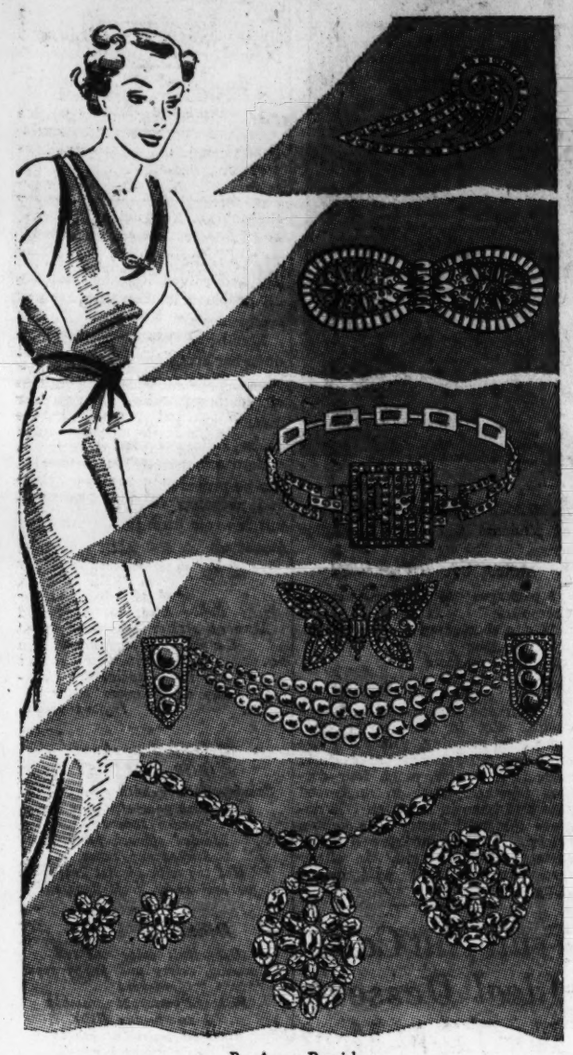
Twinkling Jewelry Vogue Is Increasingly Popular



By Amos Parrish.

NEW YORK, Dec. 16.—There's glitter-glitter everywhere this season. On the street, the gleam of a hat-clip catches your eye. In the evening, theater and ballroom lights are scintillatingly multiplied by twinkling jewelry. In the afternoon your bridge partner's bracelet flashes triumphantly as she sweeps in the tricks.

Rhinestone hair ornaments, such as you see top left, are a boon to the hundreds of women who want their heads fashionably bedecked in the evening, but who can't get away with the more pretentious feathers and flowers and elaborate structures of the mode.

Use of Several Cuts.

That smart bow clip next to the top in the picture shows you what to look for if you want your jewelry gift to be very "last word." For it uses several different cuts of stones contrasting with each other—baguettes outlining the edges, marquise stones to make the center knot, rose-cut rhinestones filling in the design. Grouping several cuts of stones in this way—and also combining massed colored stones with rhinestones—are new ways of getting interesting effects in new jewelry.

Of course you know how rhinestones can glorify a monogram. She'll probably never see her name in twinkling electric lights—but you can give her the satisfying pleasure of seeing her initials glitter on her shoulder, at her throat, or on her wrist. That link bracelet sketched third from top in the illustration is a grand way to label somebody.

Insects Crawl to Front.

The insect world is having its heyday in the new pins and clips. You see women going about complacently decorated by pinch-bugs, and lady-bugs.

Butterflies, such as you see sketched under the bracelet, make especially dainty designs, and are probably a safer choice for a lady whose bug reactions you're not sure of.

You might not suspect it at first glance, but that pearly affair beneath the butterfly in the sketch is a necklace—though it doesn't embrace your neck. The glittering clips on each end anchor it to each side of your dress neckline. The necklace, brooch and earrings at the bottom of the sketch are of shining colored stones. They make a lovely ensemble to go with a Renaissance evening frock.

Tomorrow: Gay new vanity bags carried everywhere.

Physician Tells Secrets of Diet

Doctor Who Took 30 Pounds Off Teacher in 3 Months Reveals Method.

HOW Miss Rose Freistater lost 30 pounds in three months so she could renew her application to teach in the New York public schools has been revealed by her physician, Dr. Gerald Schuman.

Diet, massage and exercise did the trick, Dr. Schuman told the Associated Press. Miss Freistater suffered no impairment of health. Now Dr. Schuman expects to take 25 pounds more off of her.

Here's the menu that, with copious exercise and one hour's hard massage a week in the right places, did the work:

Breakfast—Fruit, an egg, two strips of bacon, half a slice of bread, coffee, cream and sugar.

Lunch—Fruit, vegetable salad, one slice of bread and butter, half portion pie, coffee and cream, no sugar.

Dinner—Two vegetables, meat, coffee, cream, sugar, cake or fruit and one-fourth of a potato.

Pleasant HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

THE LITTLE GIRL with brown braids informed her parents that she wanted Santa Claus to bring her a little typewriter, a desk, a life-size baby doll, a real hammer and a Scottie dog. Just what a psychoanalyst would make of her list we don't know, but certainly these naively sophisticated children of the present have unexpected combinations of ideas. One thing they all want—a room of their own—but who doesn't? Many shops have collected interesting selections of gifts for children's rooms to help slove the gift problem for the most fastidious of youngsters . . . such as a terrestial globe for a child with a yen for aviation, geography or exploration . . . bookends or a lamp with wild animal designs for a little boy who is bent on being a big game hunter or a lion tamer when he grows up . . . a pretty little mahogany sewing table for a little girl who loves to sew . . . a set of pretty painted hat stands for a closet shelf—or gay small coat hangers . . . a set of dishes in a juvenile design for small parties . . . a low sturdy maple table with chairs for games, tea parties or study . . . a specious chest for toys, projects or clothes . . . a work bench table with a set of carpenter's tools for a boy who tinkers.

Rapid Cures Are Necessary In Meningitis

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

A CENTURY ago devastating epidemics of what was called jail fever, camp fever, or spotted fever were more dreaded than smallpox. For years the cause of the condition was not understood, and it was not until 1887 that the organism—the meningococcus—was identified. The disease is now known as cerebro-spinal fever. Although it was known that it attacks the nervous syestem, little could be done, and for years attempts to develop an antitoxin were unsuccessful until the Flexner serum was perfected in 1905.

The onset of meningitis may be stealthy. There is first an infection of the nasal passage that may behave exactly as an acute cold or influenza. Sometimes the symptoms are not severe and the individual may be up and about, during which period the organisms invade the blood stream. Shortly after this the coverings of the brain are usually attacked.

Any inflammation of the nose and threat may usher in an attack if the meningococcus is present, but there is a big IF, as most types of nasal irritation do not arise because of the presence of this particular organism. If infection has occurred, the patient appears dull and indifferent. He resents being disturbed, answers yes and no, or merely grunts; the voice is without expression. He generally lies on one side with the knees drawn up and the head bent forward. These symptoms attract the attention of the mother, who may say that she has never seen Johnny act that way before. The temperature is not unduly high—101 degrees Fahrenheit being about the average—although the pulse is usually quite rapid. Sometimes the patient will complain of being sore all over. In many cases a rash appears on the skin. These reddish areas may vary in size from a pin point to a half inch in diameter. They are a dusky red in shade, fading in three or four days to a rusty brown.

The disease in this stage may not be recognized, and it is only when the youngster complains of a bursting headache, with vomiting and a neck stiff, that the diagnoiss is made. At this time there is definite involvement of the brain coverings.

Every year when seasons change we must be on the lookout for meningitis. It is a disease that will not wait if life is to be saved. We must not say that "Perhaps Johnny will be better tomorrow." In a very real sense meningitis is an emergency—one that calls for the earliest possible diagnosis and prompt relief measures.

Fortunately scientists have developed a highly valuable serum. This is given in generous quantities directly into the blood stream and into the spinal canal as well. It is desirable to test the patient for serum sensitivity by first injecing a small quantity into the skin. If after an hour no symptoms have appeared the full dose may be given into the circulation. Physicians have learned that the serum must be given very slowly and the patient watched for adverse reactions. In the stage in which the headache is of unusual severity and the neck stiff the serum should be given into the spinal canal as well—after a slightly larger amount of spinal fluid has been withdrawn.

How is the disease acquired? We can readily understand that like diphtheria it may spread from the sick to the well by contact. But in many instances it is probably acquired from individuals who appear perfectly well yet whose throats and nasal passages harbor these virulent organisms, which are harmless to their possessors but dangerous when planted on new soil.

Best Thinking Done In Lazy Posture, Experiments Show

Put your feet on your desk and sprawl back in your office chair if you would do your best thinking. Recent experiments by Dr. Donald A. Laird, professor of psychology at Colgate University, indicate that human beings think best when their feet are higher than their heads. Any method by which an increased supply of blood is sent to the brain will improve thought processes, the experiments indicate.

By use of a tilting couch and mental arithmetic problems Dr. Laird tested a group of students. When the students were in a head-down position, their speed of adding was increased 7.4 per cent and their accuracy was improved by 14.1 per cent.

Previously Dr. Laird has found that students were most sluggish mentally after eating heavy lunches. It was believed this was because the blood was drawn from the brain to the stomach during the digestive process.

Brilliant perfume for the woman of poise! At its worldly best when worn with furs. Exquisitely bottled, in a modern setting. You can't go wrong in giving this—it's one of the great favorites! $2.25 to $7.50.

Six Wild Game Recipes Listed For Housewife

Hunting Husbands Prefer to Have Prizes Cooked by Someone Else.

THE woman whose husband is addicted to periodic hunting trips will find her larder filled with many strange wild game and fowl this month. It is well for the women whose husbands love to indulge in this sport to learn a few things about the cooking of wild game, for usually after the men bag the game, they prefer to have the cooking of their prize done by someone other than themselves.

Here are some recipes for the more common types of game.

Fried Rabbit.

Skin, singe and wipe rabbit, joint it and soak it in cold salted water for one-half hour. Wipe pieces of rabbit, dip them in flour and fry in hot fat until tender and brown on each side. Remove rabbit from pan and add heaping tablespoon of flour and about three cups water. Bring to boiling point and when thickened add salt, pepper, teaspoon chopped parsley, little grated lemon rind and two tablespoons currant jelly. Serve sauce in bowl. Garnish rabbit with green parsley. Serves four.

Roast Hare.

Skin and wipe hare, stuff and sew up carefully. Truss forelegs back and hind legs forward, and put in baking pan; fasten thin slices of bacon over shoulders and back, put into quick oven and bake 1½ hours, basting every ten minutes with ¼ cup butter in ½ cup boiling water. When one-half done dredge with flour and baste once more. Remove to hot platter and garnish with slices of lemon and water-cress.

Stuffing: Make moist stuffing as for chicken, using water in which giblets were boiled and working in minced giblet meat. Allow 1 pound for each serving.

Squirrel Pot Pie.

Prepare squirrels as rabbits, cut in pieces, flour and fry brown in tablespoon butter. Cover closely and stew for one hour. Make delicate biscuit crust, cut in rounds and lay on top of squirrel, let them boil, covered closely, 15 minutes; pile squirrel in center of hot platter, arrange dumplings along sides. Thicken gravy with one tablespoon flour browned in one tablespoon butter and pour gravy over meat.

There are many favorite recipes for cooking wild duck, but the following is the recipe usually used by game lovers of Maryland.

Canvasback, Red Head, Black Duck.

Do not draw the ducks more than three hours before you will use them. The less time the better. They bleed freely and should be washed in as little water as possible and with a rag, otherwise you will lose much of the blood, which, of course, is the flavor. Do not stuff with anything as it is important the heat should strike inside of the duck to prevent the loss of juices there. Have an old-time baking pan not higher than 2 inches on the side so the heat can sear the duck at once and does not steam it, causing loss of juices.

Have a very hot oven, hot enough to sear them at once. Have the breast rubbed with butter. Put them in a low baking dish with as little water as possible, baste three times, adding boiling water to the baking dish each time so that it will not cook dry. Bake 22 minutes if you have a very hot oven, or 25 minutes if your oven will not reach a very high temperature. This is not an exceedingly rare duck.

Wild Turkey.

Dress turkey, and if weather is cool, hang it outside on a porch or some convenient place for six or seven days before using. If weather is warm, hang in cold storage, but do not freeze it, as freezing will take away the flavor of wild turkey.

Prepare stuffing with fine bread crumbs and chestnuts as follows: Boil chestnuts until mealy and mash them up fine. Put one-half bread crumbs and half chestnuts with some butter and salt and pepper, and mix up well.

Stuff the turkey with this filling. Put in oven to roast, putting plenty of butter on turkey, also some small strips of bacon over the breast and legs. Cover bird with a cloth. While roasting baste thoroughly, and when turkey is about tender, take the cloth off and brown it thoroughly. Put salt and pepper on turkey with butter before starting to roast.

Fried Venison Cakes.

A good way to prepare venison is to put 1½ pounds fresh raw venison through the meat chopper with ¼ pound raw bacon and 1 small onion. Mix well, add 1 egg, 1 teaspoon salt and pepper to taste. Form into cakes, roll them in flour and fry in frying pan with just enough fat to prevent burning.

Your Fortune in the Cup

Tea from the far corners of the world.
MING CHA

The tea wine of China, hauntingly fragrant.
HU KWA

With that delicious smokey flavor.
DARJEELING

The finest tea the world produces, grown on the slopes of the Himalaya Mountains.
SAHIB

The master tea of India.
JASMINE

A china tea delicately blended with the jasmine flower. Try dropping one of the little buds in each cup at your next tea and watch them open and float on top like a water lily. This delightful tea is packed in beautiful decorated jars, tea pots, dragon tins and attractive baskets. All of the above are reasonably priced and make very attractive gifts.

Aluminum Ware Ideal Christmas Gift for Woman Who Likes to Cook

THE WOMAN who takes her cooking seriously will be charmed to find one of these shining pans under her Christmas tree this year. Perhaps she would like a tea kettle that whistles as it steams (below); or one of the two three-in-one pan combinations also illustrated. The set of pans at the left consists of two pans and handy lifting rack. The three at the right may be used separately or stacked together in the oven.

Baskets for Shut-ins and Needy Half the Fun of Christmas Giving Carefully Planned Collections of Wide Variety of Food and Little Things Are Welcome Gifts and Show Real Thought for Unfortunates.

By Dorothea Duncan.

HALF THE fun of Christmas giving is in planning the basket for the shut-in or the family who is less fortunate than ours.

If you have ever been ill at Christmas time and have been shut off from all the glamorous pre-holiday displays downtown, you will realize how important it is at this time to receive a gift brimming over with the Christmas feeling.

If you are tempted to just run down to the fancy grocers and send a lovely basket of fruit because you know it will be pretty, reconsider. Instead round up aHHw round up a whole menagerie of little things and fix the box or basket yourself. A pretty sewing hamper that can be used afterward for knitting or needlework will be a good background for your collection of small Christmas gifts. Even a gay red sock, made in an exaggerated size, will serve your purpose. This can be run up on your own sewing machine in a few minutes and should be stitched at least twice, so the toe will not burst when it is heavy with packages.

DUNCAN.

It is a clever idea to tie up each article for the stocking in a separate package and, if possible, write a gay line or two on each. In this way the receiver will spend at least one very happy hour on Christmas Day just opening each little package that comes from within the one great stocking.

Unusual Foods Acceptable.

There are any number of invalid foods on the market that are rather unusual and no doubt very different than the ones included in the daily meals at home or in the hospital. It isn't necessary, of course, to include any food in your package, but it will be acceptable, you can be sure.

Some of the biscuit companies have an array of very lovely boxes of simple cookies, and if you haven't made any of your own this year, you might include one of these or a box of melba toast. English marmalade almost always comes in very attractive crocks or jars, the type of container that can be used afterward for a twig of holly or a climbing bit of wandering Jew or ivy.

A stocking, no matter what else it might contain, wouldn't be Christmasy unless it contained some fruit. Oronges and tangerines, kumquats and apples will make a bright selection and some of the attractive packaged dried fruits also may be included.

Then there is always a great array of soups. When you select your soup for this particular type of package try to consider the type of package as well as the quality, for you want the container to be superior to the everyday ones that come in through the kitchen in the grocery-store basket.

You might include a jar or two of calve's foot jelly, being sure to select each of a different flavor, a jar of white meat of chicken and a package of fragrant tea.

Baskets for the Needy.

The basket for the less fortunate family should be just as full of the Christmas spirit as the one for the shut-in, but in a rather different sense, for in this basket you will want a supply of foods for a number of husky appetites.

It is well before planning this second basket to learn a little about the family who is to receive it; the number of persons in the family, their ages, etc., for you will want to include food that each member of the family can enjoy.

There will be a turkey or ham or roast for the Christmas dinner, of course, and all the trimmings.

If there is room in your basket you might include a supply of canned goods rather than fresh foods so that they may be kept safely without any possibility of spoilage.

If the family includes a number of children it will be wise to select Christmas foods that are less rich than ones that would be chosen for adults. Have a box of simple cookies and some fruit rather than a rich plum puddng, vegetables that are on the approved list for the child rather than the adult, and a fowl instead of a ham or roast of beef.

Include several holiday packages of dried fruits and raisins instead of nuts and rich candy.

Remember, too, when sending a basket of this kind that it is offered as a Christmas gift and should appear as festive as possible. Though the basket is plain and sturdy it may be lined with holiday paper and the handle tied with red ribbon and holly.

Dried Fruits, Rice Make Good Dessert

Fine Substitute for Rich Christmas Sweets.

IF the usual Christmas dessert of plum pudding or mince meat pie is too rich for the young members of your family you might substitute a delicious pudding which combines one of the popular dried fruits and rice. The following recipe may be made, using freshly cooked rice and leftover stewed dried prunes or apricots.

Apricot or Prune Rice Custard.

2 eggs
1 cup sweetened apricot or prune juice
2 cups evaporated milk
½ cup pulp of stewed apricots or prunes sweetened with ¼ cup sugar
Pinch of salt

Wash rice. Drop into 1 quart briskly boiling water to which 1 teaspoon salt has been added, and boil until tender. Drain and rinse with hot water. Beat eggs, add apricot juice and milk, then rice. Add pinch of salt to the apricot pulp and place in the bottom of a buttered shallow baking dish. Add rice mixture. Place baking dish in a pan of water and bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees F.) until set, 45 minutes to an hour. Yield, eight servings.

Wives Will Appreciate Practical Christmas Gifts for the Kitchen

Smart New Cooking Utensils, Baking Pans and Electric Appliances Lessen Household Drudgery and Are a Constant Delight to the Matronly Eye.

WHILE A WOMAN likes her husband to remember her at Christmas with an entirely personal gift—a tall crystal bottle of her favorite imported perfume, a pair of dainty satin mules, or a swanky velvet lounging robe—she will also appreciate a more practical gift. It may be something for the kitchen, for example, especially if it has been chosen with an eye to making her wifely duties more interesting or less strenuous.

A new electric stove or gas range, an electric beater, a new waffle iron or sandwich grill, a streamlined percolator, a chafing dish of bright nontarnishing chromium with a flashy colored handle, a new hors d'oeuvre tray with one of those cunning little animal figures stuck porcupine fashion with an array of colored toothpicks—any of these would be a very welcome gift. Then there are the new kitchen utensils designed for smartness as well as practicability.

Perhaps you need just one more gift to tuck under the Christmas tree for your wife. How would she like this illustrated tea kettle that whistles a merry tune as it boils? It will look very gay in any kitchen for it is fashioned of bright aluminum which seems even brighter in contrast to the black bakelite handles and whistle knob.

If your wife is short on cooking utensils be sure to get her new ones that are as up-to-date and practical as the three-in-one roaster illustrated in the top left picture. It is really three utensils in one. The two pans and handy lifting rack make an ideal covered roaster; yet used separately the two pans serve perfectly for everyday baking and for vegetable cookery.

The three pans illustrated at the top right combine the features of beauty, smartness and practicability. The idea behind the design of these pans is modern to the last degree. First of all each pan is fitted with a separate lid which is fitted so that the steam of the food being cooked will be sealed in. The flat tops make it possible to use the pans for a complete oven-baked dinner. Each one can be filled with its separate food and then, if your oven is small, the pans can be stacked one on top of the other for space saving. The handles of these aluminum pans are clever, too, for they are made of nonskid, nonburn bakelite.

Peanut and Date Balls Ideal Christmas Candy

Here is an ideal candy for the children's Christmas stocking. Put 1 cup roasted peanuts and 1 cup stoned dates through the food chopper, using the coarse blade. Moisten with 2 tablespoons fruit juice, cool, roll into small balls and place on a platter to harden.

Wrap each ball in waxed paper. Colored cellulose film may be used over the waxed paper wrapper if the candy is to be placed in the Christmas stocking.

Three Tips Listed For Those Sunday Evening Snacks

Here are three interesting sandwich tips for Sunday evening snacks.

Spread soda crackers with grated cheese, moisten with a little oil and vinegar, cover with another soda cracker and put into a quick oven until cheese melts and crackers become very crisp. Serve hot with coffee, cocoa, chocolate or tea.

Toast crackers until very crisp, then spread with cottage cheese, strawberry jam, or cream cheese topped with bar-le-duc. Serve hot with one of the above-mentioned beverages.

Cut marshmallows into eighths. Spread on soda crackers and place in oven until marshmallows are melted. Sprinkle with finely chopped nuts or coconut and return to oven for one minute. Serve hot. These are especially good with hot tea, cider or fruit punch.

Planked Dinner Of Fish or Meat Always Good

Salmon Steaks Now on the Market Are Cheap and Delicious.

A PLANKED or grilled dinner is always attractive, and if the chops and steaks that you usually associate with this type of meal are too expensive for more than infrequent use, try a fish dinner prepared in the same way.

Of the different kinds of fish now appearing on the market, the salmon steaks look particularly attractive in appearance and price range.

Your menu might include, besides the planked salmon, potato balls, spinach mold, a salad of greens with a simple dressing, bread and butter and a beverage. With this combination we suggest apricot and cheese turnover for dessert.

Have your salmon steaks cut 1½ to 2 inches thick. Two steaks average size can be placed on medium-sized plank. Oil the plank thoroughly, place fish upon it, and broil under the flame, turning flame low or lowering plank after first few minutes of broiling. Serve the planked fish surrounded by potato balls that have been cut with a French vegetable cutter.

After the potato balls have been cooked until tender they may be served with the following seasoning: Heat ¼ cup of cream, add salt and pepper, and three tablespoons finely chopped parsley. Shake potato balls in this mixture until well covered with seasonings.

You will find the salmon especially delicious if accompanied by a hollandaise or egg and lemon sauce.

Spinach Mold.

1 peck spinach
2 cups medium white sauce
½ cup dry bread crumbs
2 tablespoons butter
2 eggs
1 small onion

Cook spinach and mash fine. Brown onion in butter, add to the spinach. Beat egg yolks and stir into white sauce, adding butter in which onion has been cooked, and bread crumbs. Cool. Add the beaten egg whites. Place in well-greased ring mold, cover and set into frying pan into which has been poured hot water. Bake 25 minutes in hot oven (400 degrees F.).

This mold also makes an attractive luncheon dish when the center of the mold is filled with hot buttered asparagus tips, and the mold itself is garnished with strips of pimiento and slices of stuffed olives.

Apricot Cheese Turnovers.

2 packages (6 ounces) cream cheese
½ cup shortening
2 cups flour
3½ cups apricots
Salt

Cream cheese with shortening, add flour and salt and work into a dough. Set in refrigerator over night. In morning, roll out quite thin, cut into 2-inch squares. Place apricots in center, pinch four corners together, place in ungreased pans and bake in hot oven (450 degrees F.) until pastry is a golden brown. Canned or stewed dried apricots may be used. In either case, drain apricots well before using.

Olive Sauce for Duck.

One cup of olives soaked in hot water for 20 minutes (to extract the salt), pared round and round through stone to keep flesh in one curling piece, then added to one cup medium white sauce and cooked for 8 minutes make a delicious sauce for roast duck.

Fruit-Nut Cake Ideal Dessert For Light Meal

AFTER a light luncheon or a dinner of vegetables you will find this substantial cherry-nut topsy-turvy cake an ideal dessert. As the name indicates, it is an upside-down cake and this particular version is baked in a heavy frying pan. Here is the recipe.

Cherry-Nut Topsy-Turvy Cake.

Part 1—Heat 1-3 cup butter in frying pan, sprinkle with ½ cup sugar, 1 cup chopped pecans, 2 cups canned and drained red sour cherries.

Part 2—Cream 2-3 cup shortening with 1½ cups sugar, add 2 eggs unbeaten, beat mixture well. Combine 2½ cups sifted flour, 3 teaspoons baking powder and ½ teaspoon salt and sift. Add dry ingredients alternately with 2-3 cup milk, a small amount at a time, to the creamed mixture. Pour the batter over the Part 1 mixture in the frying pan, bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees F.) three-quarters of an hour. Turn out onto a large platter, and while cooling, make the sauce to serve with it.

Sauce for Cherry-Nut Cake.

Bring 1 cup of the canned cherry juice to boil with 2-3 cup sugar, then thicken with 1 tablespoon cornstarch dissolved in little cold cherry juice. Boil until thick, then cool. Just before serving, whip 2-3 cup cream, add the cherry sirup and spread on cake. Garnish with rubyettes, if desired. Serves ten.

This will make an excellent holiday dessert.

Wife Who Hated Cooking Solves Food Problem

New Jersey Woman Evolves Foolproof "Can and Package" Menus.

HATING housework, but determined to please her husband, Mrs. Kathryn Van Rifenburgh, New Jersey housewife and former newspaper woman, made a scientific study of the problem and solved it by, as she says all people in business do, "seeking professionals."

Results: A happy husband who finds her fresh and rested when he comes home from work and a set of foolproof "can and package menus" she knows she can count on, regardless of what happens.

Here are five of the menus that can be prepared strictly out of cans and packages as Mrs. Van Rifenburgh wrote them for the American Magazine:

Any Day Luncheon.
(For Four)
Baked hash casserole
Mustard pickles in lettuce cups
Canned corn on the cob
Grilled tomatoes
Bran muffins
Pears with custard sauce
Tea Instant cocoa

Bridge Luncheon.
(FOR TWELVE)

The Federal Diary

Registered in U. S. Patent Office.

By Morgan Baker.

REPRESENTING more than 160,000 Federal employes, the National Legislative Council of Federal Employe Organizations has launched a campaign for enactment of its recently adopted program in the coming session of Congress.

BAKER.

Major objectives of the council are summarized as follows:

1. Preservation and extension of the merit system. The council has voted its support of the Ramspeck and Logan bills.

2. Optional retirement at age of 60, after 30 years' service, and the optional acceptance of a lesser annuity by the employes to extend the annuity to a second life.

3. Passage of the McCarran-Boylan bond premium bill, under which the Government would pay for bond premiums when bonds are demanded by Federal laws or regulations.

4. Maintenance of present rates on first-class mail.

5. Extension of classification.

6. Liberalization of sick and annual leave by adoption of bills which were passed by the House at the last session of Congress.

In announcing these objectives, John J. Barrett, chairman, emphasizes that the council and its associated organizations view the merit system issue as the paramount problem confronting not only Federal employes but the country as a whole.

"The merit system is dictated by every consideration of good personnel administration, economy, and fair play, and we believe that Congress should act at the next session to remedy present conditions," he said.

Recent conventions of the organizations associated in the National Legislative Council have approved the major objectives cited by the council.

New officers of the council include, in addition to Mr. Barrett, who is president of the United National Association of Postoffice Clerks, J. Ed Cooper, president of the National Rural Letter Carriers Association, secretary-treasurer, succeeding W. G. Armstrong. Luther C. Steward, president of the National Federation of Federal Employes, has been re-appointed chairman of the legislative committee.

Every branch of the Federal service is represented in the organizations associated in the council.

Resettlement Christmas Frolic.

The Get Together Club of Resettlement Adminitration is sponsoring a dance to be held at the Kennedy-Warren tomorrow night from 10 to 1, with Johnny Slaughter's music. Arrangements are under direction of A. P. Jones (P), club chairman, who is assisted by:

Mrs. A. S. Kinnie (P), secretary-treasurer; Mrs. F. T. Briscoe, chairman of the social committee, and Miss Sally Lipman (C), and Bill O'Brien, publicity.

Judge Annabel Matthews, U. S. Board of Tax Apepals, will be among the honor guests at the Georgia State Society's Christmas Ball at the Shoreham Hotel Friday night.

Diary Guest Tickets.

IF F, P or C appears after your name in this column, call in person on the Federal Diary Editor today only between 3:30 and 5 p. m. You will receive two tickets to one of the following Loew's theaters: F, Loew's Fox (stage, Duke Ellington and his band and other acts; screen, Myrna Loy and Spencer Tracy in "Whipsaw"); P, Loew's Palace (Dick Powell, Ann Dvorak and Fred Allen in "Thanks a Million"), or C, Loew's Columbia (fourth week of Clark Gable, Charles Laughton and Franchot Tone in "Mutiny on the Bounty").

UNDER direction of Charles T. Hoffman (P), president, and a new slate of officers, Internal Revenue Lodge, No. 47, American Federation of Government Employes, is looking forward to an active program during 1936. With more than 1,200 members, the group is the largest unit in the entire A. F. G. E.

Mr. Hoffman will have the cooperation of the following new officers: Ira Y. Bain, first vice president; Miss Eleanor E. Capers, second vice president; Henry C. Iler, third vice president; Miss Bertha Neff, fourth vice president; Guy F. Glossbrenner, fifth vice president; Mrs. Irene C. Cantt, sixth vice president; Carl A. Baumann, treasurer; Miss Sarah B. Allison, secretary, and James D. Gillard, sergeant at arms.

Other officers include:

Delegates to the District Department—Charles T. Hoffman, George T. Ash, LaRue Tanner, Mrs. Maude Anderson, H. Grady Nail, Miss Lillian V. Keathley, Walter M. Hiley, Miss Clara T. Rollins and Mrs. Mae M. Kinney.

Alternates to the District Department—Ira Y. Bain, John T. Thomas Ryland A. Babb, Fred I. Edwards, Miss Ann Tidball, Mrs. Eleanor C. Major, Earl C. Sharits, Miss Marguerite Hughey and Allen M. Laster.

Delegates to Central Labor Union—Charles T. Hoffman, William N. Richards, Miss Grace B. Benton, Lloyd Odend'hal, Leon R. Escude, Mrs. Harriet McK. Baden and Miss Irene B. Keene.

Delegates to rent committee of Central Labor Union—Lloyd Odend'hal and Miss Grace B. Benton.

Another new local union of the National Federation of Federal Employes is announced by Secretary-Treasurer Gertrude McNally. The new unit is No. 550 and is composed of Veterans' Administartion facility employes in West Los Angeles, Calif.

$1,860 to $4,600 Jobs.

Civil Service Commission announces examinations for several positions with salaries ranging from $1,860 to $4,600 a year as follows:

Awning maker, $1,860 a year, National Park Service, Department of the Interior.

Senir animal husbandman (genetics), $4,600 a year, Bureau of Animal Industry, Department of Agriculture.

Social worker (psychiatric), $2,000 a year, junior social worker, $1,800 a year, Veterans' Administration.

Senior chemist (distillation), $4,600 a year, Alcohol Tax Unit, Treasury Department.

Welding engineer, various grades, $2,600 to $3,800 a year, Navy Department.

Certain specified education and experience are required for these positions.

Additional information may be obtained from Civil Service Commission, Seventh and F streets northwest.

Addresses Engineers.

Andrew W. Cruse, chief of the electrical division of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, addressed a meeting of engineers at Schenectady, N. Y., last week. He described what may follow in the wake of television. He predicted "sound-conditioning" apparatus that would throw a shroud of silence about factories, homes and other buildings and other interesting sound-wave phenomena.

Experience.

The Postoffice fire
Was sufficiently dire,
Yet it might have been grimmer
by far;
We can gain from the loss
If we use some good hoss
Sense future fires to bar.

Many records of worth
We can give a safe berth
In "Archives," just where they belong;
For inspection and drill—
When done with a will—
There are arguments valid and strong!

RALPH I. EGAN (P),
Commerce.

On the Air Today

THE presence in town this week of Singin' Sam, who incidentally is one of the most genuine and friendly personalities of the entertainment world you'll ever meet, takes me back some ten years to early newspapering days in Indianapolis. Sam is Harry Frankel out there in the corn and wheat country around Richmond, Ind.

The reminiscing has to do with the general period when radio broadcasting was first recognized as a medium of commercial and Nation-wide usefulness. The motion-picture theater was embracing the road unit show with Publix in the van and vaudeville of those days was in its dying gasps.

It was my custom to drop in once a week at the old Colonial Theater, where a land-office business was being realized through the presence of a small orchestra headed by a saxophone-trumpet player of no mean ability. Musicians said he was the best music arranger in the State.

It was also my custom, on one of these weekly tours, to visit the abbreviated stage show at the Ohio Theater, a second-string house offering Charlie Davis' orchestra. It, too, was enjoying a phenomenal business due, in no small part, to the singing of Davis' banjo player. He was a fair-haired, smiling, naive-looking youngster who had the girls of the town wrapped about his little finger.

Third on the itinerary was Seidel's music store. The entire Seidel family was musically inclined but tops went to the older brother who played piano in local theaters and made recordings at Richmond's Gennett studios. The Seidels at the moment were interested in the smooth compositions of a young Indiana Unversity student, whose conceptions of popular ditties were both tuneful and distinctive.

And very often, on the jump from the Colonial to the Ohio, a stop would be made at a little sheet music shop on Illinois street where the infectious laughter of the fat proprietor boomed out as he gagged with the musicians who killed odd-hours at his counter.

Culbertson On Bridge

Too Many Signals.

Whenever I have a bridge partner of less than expert caliber, before a bid is made or a card is played, I figuratively get down on my knees with the urgent plea: "Partner, will you do me one little favor? Please don't signal with high cards!"

I change the wording to mean individual temperaments. At times, with the more adamant type of partner, I become positively wheedling.

Of course, I realize that in making this request I am leaning over backward. I should prefer to ask that come-on signals be used only with great discretion. I am well aware that occasionally a high-card signal is vital to proper defense. But it has been my bitter experience that average, and lesser, players simply can not exercise the aforesaid discretion hence my plea for total abstinence.

Signaling by means of discards or follow-suit cards is an art requiring more knowledge and greater delicacy than any other department of bridge. Not one player in a thousand knows when to give a positive and when a negative signal. Fortunately, in almost every situation, the proper lead—and the proper cards to conserve—are manifest from consideration of the bidding, the opening lead, and the exposed dummy. This being so, signals almost always are merely redundant.

In today's hand North was smugly sure that his major tenace in clubs should be indicated to his partner. He succeeded only in "taking the guess out of the hand" for declarer.

South, dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
Pass	1 ♦	Pass	1 ♠
Pass	3 ♦	Pass	5 ♦ [final bid]

North opened the nine of spades, which was won by West's ace. A trump forced the blank ace, and another spade was won by dummy's king. Now a low spade from dummy, ruffed by West, established the ten as the high card in the suit. Dummy was put into the lead with a trump, and North seized the opportunity to discard the nine of clubs—an urgent signal. The declarer thus was steered on the proper course—he discarded a club on the spade ten and promptly took the heart finesse to his king-jack. Without North's signal, he might well have chosen to discard a heart, obviating a heart loser, and to have tried for one trick in clubs.

Trade Board Meeting Told Of D. C. Gains

Commissioners Draw a Cheerful Picture of the Future.

Sultan Reports Building Boom: Improvements Are Promised.

The first rounded picture of the present District administration was drawn last night by the largest group of District officials ever attending one meeting at a session of the Board of Trade in the Willard Hotel attended by 1,200 persons.

All three District Commissioners spoke. They made these points:

Col. Dan I. Sultan—That a private building boom was under way in the District and that New Deal works funds, providing sewer and street improvements, were making it possible.

George E. Allen—That the District could hope for a voice in its affairs if his referendum proposal could get through Congress.

Melvin C. Hazen—That the 36 District bills enacted at the last session marked the most intensive "District session" of Congress yet, and that a number of local improvements were scheduled for the near future.

Pledges Board Aid.

To the Commissioners, John Saul, president of the Board of Trade, pledged the board's support on the Commissioners' most pressing immediate fiscal issue, an increase in the Federal contribution to the District budget, for, otherwise, Saul put it:

"Things are going to be tough."

One more question came up for the board's indorsement, as United States attorney Leslie C. Garnett described what he called the "disgraceful" housing of the present local courts and added that he was fighting to block use of the Pension Building for anything other than the District Supreme Court, even though the last session voted to turn the building over to the Comptroller General's office.

Saul Promises Support.

Saul promised support to the courts' efforts.

Forty-four District officials and jurists were sitting on the platform in the Willard ballroom. Greens decked all the walls. A bulb-lit Christmas tree was on the side. And men in tuxedoes overflowed the seats, stood by the scores in the background corners.

Col. Sultan, infrequently a public speaker, said his job as an engineer was "a simple proposition—that of securing what you need without having to pay too much for it."

On that ground he defended his vote for the $4,000,000 sewage plant instead of the $8,000,000 one proposed by citizens' groups. The lower-priced one "accomplishes all the purposes."

On the same issue he defended the well-drilling efforts going on for the children's sanitarium in Glenn Dale, Md., instead of taking water by pipe from the District.

"I'm trying to save you $60,000 to $70,000," he said. "Of course I don't know what's going on 600 or 800 or 1,200 feet below ground, but we're going ahead on United States Geological Survey advice, and it's the cheapest and best thing to attempt."

Then he said he wanted to picture "the healthy condition of business affairs in your district." The amount of private building in fiscal year, 1933, judging by permits issued, was about $7,000,000. In 1934 it was $6,000,000. In 1935 it had shot up to $15,000,000, and for the first six months of this fiscal year, 1936, it was more than $11,000,000.

Mostly Small Homes.

"That's private building, most of it small homes," Sultan said. "And here I want to pay a tribute to the New Deal organization that has made it possible to keep up that program. We would not have been able to service sewers to these new homes or to have graded and paved the streets had it not been for WPA. Our own appropriations were entirely inadequate."

Hazen described projects completed during the Administration and listed as those to come "under construction soon" the Michigan avenue grade crossing overpass, the Franklin street viaduct and widening of Benning viaduct.

Garnett had praise for work of the criminal courts. With 442 felonies pending in District Supreme Court October 1, with Thanksgiving holiday after that, and with four long cases taking up four weeks' time in one court, the courts nevertheless had disposed of 441 cases by December 16, he said. In the period, 291 more indictments were received.

"Nowhere under the American flag is criminal jurisprudence more up to date than in the District," asserted Garnett. "For the first time in Police Court, jury cases are current—a man demanding a jury trial can get it next week. We are trying cases in Supreme Court within two weeks after their receipt."

Legion Post to Meet.

Costello Post, American Legion, will meet at 8:15 tonight at the board room, District Building. The session will be known as "Bill" Franklin Night to welcome this prominent Legionnaire in his new role of post adjutant.

All Smiles at Trade Board's District Night

Federal Grant Held Only Help To D. C. Deficit

Hazen Cites $8,000,000 Annual Need for Improvement Program.

Approximately $8,000,000 a year must be spent by the District for the next several years to meet the cost for public improvements, Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen said yesterday.

Admitting such a program of capital expenditures could not be met out of current revenues, Commissioner Hazen said its adoption as a practical plan must hinge on material increase in the Federal appropriation.

Several millions could be raised by new and revised taxes, the Commissioner said. Although he refused to commit himself on a program of new taxes, it is known he favors an inheritance and estate tax. Daniel J. Donovan, District auditor, has estimated such a tax would yield $600,000 a year. An increase of 1 cent a gallon in the gasoline tax is estimated to yield $750,000 additional and revised and increased public utilities taxes would yield another $1,500,000. Although Commissioner Hazen favors an increase in the gasoline tax, he might approve an automobile weight tax instead. It has been estimated the latter would yield a net $1,500,000 additional revenue, after deducting the loss of the personal property tax on automobiles, which it is proposed to eliminate.

Revenues proposed by three of these taxes would be from $3,500,000 to $5,000,000 short of the amount which would be required for maintenance and operating expenses of the District and the proposed $8,000,000 capital outlay, it is estimated.

"Those figures," Commissioner Hazen said, "clearly show the foolishness of trying to carry forward the development of the National Capital without a material increase in the Federal appropriation.

"For myself I do not intend to recommend to the other Commissioners nor to Congress any fiscal program for the future which does not provide for a sound and reasonable increase in the Federal appropriation."

Study made by Commissioner Hazen places the proper amount of the Federal appropriation between 25 and 30 per cent of the total annual District expenditures, he said.

Details are to be discussed in conferences this week with Maj. Donovan and with E. Barrett Prettyman, corporation counsel and chairman of the special municipal tax committee appointed several weeks ago by the Commissioners.

'Red' Rider in D. C. School Bill To Encounter Battle in Senate

Thomas to Demand Inquiry; Textbook Authors Are Defended.

Whatever may happen in the House, the Senate in the forthcoming session will be the scene of a vigorous fight against the anti-communism rider to the District appropriation bill "in its present form."

As now written the rider forbids the payment of a salary to any school employe "teaching or advocating communism."

Senator Elmer Thomas (Democrat), of Oklahoma, chairman of the Senate Appropriations sub-committee which handles the District appropriation bill, said yesterday:

"I will not support such a rider, and if one does go in I am going to see that there is an explicit explanation of what we mean. I am in favor of teaching about communism. It is inconceivable that any intelligent person would want to bar the knowledge of governments from students. But I am, of course, opposed to advocacy of communism in the schools."

Advocacy, Thomas said, could be prevented by an administrative order of the Board of Education. He said he did not know just how the rider had slipped into the bill, and added:

"It was a compromise and a sop to somebody—but the next time something like that goes on, we'll be on the lookout."

"Communism certainly makes an appeal to the man who has reached an age where he has lost hope of ever gaining economic security," he said. "It behooves our Government to keep the door of opportunity open to this class of persons so that they will not turn to communism as a last resort."

While the rider fight is certain to come up at the next session, and while opponents have been hoping to defeat the rider on the point that it is legislation attached to an appropriation measure, Lewis Deschler, House parliamentarian, said yesterday he thought any rider limiting use of an appropriation could be sustained.

Meanwhile another phase of the anti-communism fight was taking place in the board of education offices, where clerks checked over 19 telegrams to Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, board president, received in the last few days. They constituted a new deluge in favor of an author of a criticized textbook, Harold Rugg, paralleling the flow in favor of Carl L. Becker a fortnight ago.

Members of the board's special textbook investigating committee were preparing the lengthy report they will present at tomorrow's board meeting.

Telegrams defending Rugg came from such persons as Mary E. Woolley, Nobel peace prize winner and president of Mount Holyoke College; James T. Shotwell, noted historian and internationalist, of Columbia University, and the superintendents of schools of Chicago, Indianapolis, St. Paul, Winnetka, Ill.; Houston and Oakland.

"I know Mr. Rugg as advocate of democratic and tolerant discussion of problems of civilization," wired Miss Woolley.

"Rugg stands for sound American principles of free, intelligent study and discussion as contrasted with un-American suppression of ideas and regimentation of thought," telegraphed Edwin R. Embree, president of the Julius Rosenwald Fund.

"Motives of promoters of attack should be fully investigated and exposed," urged Thomas E. Benner, dean of the College of Education, University of Illinois.

Dr. Shotwell warned "efforts to hamper this kind of scholarly work would be damaging to our educational system and would undoubtedly react against the very purpose for which they were used."

Heed Transit Plea, Clayton Warns P. U. C.

Citizens Ready to Carry Complaints to 'Other Agencies,' He Says.

Martin, Sager Describe Service in Opening Day of Hearing.

Street car and bus riders will take their fight for better service beyond the Public Utilities Commission unless there is an immediate improvement in conditions, William McK. Clayton, veteran chairman of the public utilities committee of the Federation of Citizens Associations, warned at the public hearing on car service which began before the commission yesterday.

"I don't think anyone here is complaining about fares," Clayton said. "We may later, but we are willing to pay the fare necessary to make adequate service possible. We are not getting adequate service now and never have.

"If we can not get service through this commission we must and will turn to some other agency. This hearing is going to broaden out from the question of overloading this or that bus and into the question that this Nation's Capital is entitled to adequate service. We shall turn to some other agency if we must."

The statement came during the day-long stories of Fred A. Sager, chief engineer, and James L. Martin, executive secretary of the commission, reciting alleged inadequacies, breakdowns and other failures of the Capital Transit Co. cars and buses to meet passenger needs. Their testimony was the result of studies which had been ordered by the commission in anticipation of the hearing.

Elgen Forecasts Orders.

The commission intends to force the company to remedy conditions at once, Riley E. Elgen, commission chairman, said. He predicted corrective orders and regulations would be forthcoming before January 1.

Martin summarized 333 complaints received by the commission since August 1. Of these, 113 concerned the Connecticut avenue and Chevy Chase bus line; 37, the Massachusetts avenue line; 18, the Glover Park and Trinidad line; 18, the P street line, and 16, the Anacostia and Congress Heights service.

Complaints ran the gamut from irregularity, dropping of scheduled trips, overcrowding, dirty equipment, to too much noise incident to a bus stop beneath the bedroom window of a prominent woman whose residence fronts on Dupont Circle. They came from Government officials, Army, Navy and Marine Corps officers, business men, citizens associations, schools, churches and individuals from servants to their employers.

Sager, who presented chart after chart based on inspections made by commission employes, took most of the day to give his story.

"Slower and Slower."

"I want to make the point," he said, "that cars are running slower and slower instead of speeding up. I call that a decrease in service instead of an increase."

"Because of the new and longer routes now prescribed we can't tighten up our schedules any further and keep on them," John H. Hanna, president of the Capital Transit Co., said.

Rush hour departures from schedules are at least partially due to traffic conditions, Sager said, but pointed out that nonrush hour failure to maintain service time resulted in slower and irregular service.

Most of the difficulties arising from traffic could be overcome, he said. Employment of 25 or 30 inspectors to keep motor vehicles off car tracks at intersections would improve service and result in saving their salaries in final costs to the company. Hanna agreed the inspectors are needed and would be helpful, but said that was a matter for the Police Department.

Inspections made by commission employes, Sager said, showed that of 432 cars in nonrush hours, 49.6 per cent were on time, 22.8 per cent were from 1 to 10 minutes behind schedules; 10.6 per cent were from 2 to 3 minutes off and 17 per were more than 3 minutes off.

Investigation had disclosed overloading of buses and instances in which scheduled bus trips had not been made, he said. Concentration by the company on the job of getting the prescribed number of buses running over given routes during the time specified would correct overloading, he said.

Most buses, especially newer-type machines, he said, could safely carry the permitted 40 per cent standees, provided standing passengers were required to move back into the aisles.

The company has failed, he said, to maintain required schedules on the Anacostia and Congress Heights line; the Connecticut avenue, Chevy Chase, Glover Park, Burleith and Trinidad, Rhode Island and Massachusetts avenue lines. His report of inspections did not pretend to be a complete story of every line of the company, he emphasized, inferring other instances of poor service would have been found.

Quinn Upholds Ballou as 'Fine' Superintendent

Striking back at recent criticism of Dr. Frank W. Ballou, Henry I. Quinn, Board of Education member, last night termed Dr. Ballou a "fine superintendent of schools" in a talk before the Brookland Citizens Association.

Criticism of Dr. Ballou is without valid basis, Quinn told the association. The School Board member told the group that the board is striving for a larger appropriation for expansion of the school system.

The association adopted a resolution asking for the construction of a 12-room school with an auditorium in Brookland.

In event additional tax sources are needed for the District, the association recommended that they be sought in inheritance levies, increased taxation of public utilities and an additional 1-cent tax on gasoline, this last not to be restricted for highway purposes.

A storm of opposition arose at the meeting of the Georgetown Citizens Association when Malcolm Kirkpatrick, assistant to C. Marshall Finnan, superintendent of the National Capital Parks, said that the tennis courts in Montrose Park will have to be moved to save several old oak trees from death.

Kirkpatrick promised the members that no action would be taken until a new site for the courts was found. John Ilder, head of the Alley Dwelling Authority, said there was a move on foot to convert Bell Court, across the street from the playground, into tennis courts.

A resolution commending Dr. George C. Ruhland for his campaign agianst tuberculosis was adopted by the Lincoln Park Citizens Association last night.

Other resolutions adopted were one urging that legal residents of the District be selected for all District posts and another urging that the Lincoln Park section receive due consideration as a locality for the projected Thomas Jefferson Memorial.

The meeting of the Sixteenth Street Heights Citizens Association was a Christmas party with entertainment and refreshments. Only one item—consideration of the proposed bill to return prohibition to the District—was brought up. Action was postponed until the January meeting.

Good Morning!

This is the time of the year when you most require fine formal attire. And this is the time of the year we have chosen to offer a sale of Schloss Bros. Tuxedo and Full Dress Suits! Every suit is a new style from our regular stocks — substantially reduced in price!

Citizens Urge Steps to Reduce Toll of Traffic

The Interfederation conference, supporting the drive to decrease traffic fatalities in the District and nearby areas, last night indorsed the bill pending in Congress to provide for semi-annual inspection of automobiles and Maj. Brown's request for more policemen.

A traffic report, submitted by R. E. Plymale, chairman of a special traffic committee, was the basis for general discussion. The report urged revocation of permits of law violators, more traffic lights, more police, more one-way streets, additional staggering of hours, passage of the bill providing for mechanical inspection of automobiles, use of traffic observers, traffic regulations for pedestrians and strict enforcement of traffic laws.

A resolution providing that a summary report of the activities of each member organization be included in the regular order of business was adopted.

Thomas E. Lodge, president of the Federation of Citizens Associations, extended invitations to all members to attend the formal opening of the Calvert Street Bridge and the lighting of the community tree in Lafayette Park.

Traffic Death Toll for Year Goes to 114

Man Hurt in September Dies; Several Injured Throughout City.

Operator of Truck That Killed Woman Is Held for Jury.

The traffic death total for the year rose to 114 yesterday with the death of George Offenstein, 73, of 213 D street northeast, at Casualty Hospital.

Other traffic news of the day included:

Edward A. Brooks, colored, 24, of 1316 Sixth street northeast, was held for action of the grand jury after a coroner's inquest into the death of Mrs. Alice Johnson, 65, of 1012 Spring road northwest.

E. Barrett Prettyman, District corporation counsel, recommended that the District Commissioners press for enactment of a bill by Congress to bar both car and driver from the streets in cases where habitual recklessness has been proved.

Victim Hurt September 7.

Offenstein was hurt on September 7, when he was struck at Second street and Massachusetts avenue northeast by a car reported to have been operated by Samuel R. Franton, 27, of 1305 Tenth street northwest. Franton will appear at an inquest.

Brooks, held for the grand jury in the death of Mrs. Johnson, was held in a similar fashion in September of 1934, when a woman died from injuries received when a truck he was operating was in collision with a street car. He was released by the grand jury.

At yesterday's inquest, it was testified that a truck operated by Brooks at Thirteenth and Otis streets northwest, Saturday, was backed into Otis street, running over Mrs. Johnson. Brooks said he did not see the woman.

Several Others Hurt.

Several persons were injured yesterday in accidents. Two whose injuries were severe were Mrs. Alice Rhine, 57, and Mrs. Anna Taylor, 89, both of Berwyn, Md. They were treated at Casualty Hospital for cuts and possible internal injuries. They were passangers in a car which collided with another at Thirteenth and K streets southeast.

Prettyman described the legislation which he proposed yesterday at a meeting of the women's safety committee of the American Automobile Association. Admitting the proposal was drastic, the corporation counsel said it would reach a large class of car owners not seriously affected by present regulations barring the driver only for reckless operation.

"My Most Important Drama to Date," Says Gilbert Miller of "Victoria Regina"

Producer Sure New Play One Of His Finest

Producer Here for Week; Not Presented Tonight; Amusement Jottings.

By Nelson B. Bell.

"I look upon this new biographical drama of the late Queen Victoria of England, 'Victoria Regina,' as the most important play I ever have brought to the stage. Certainly the Laurence Housman drama is the most notable item in which Helen Hayes ever has appeared under my management."

This was the committment made by Gilbert Miller, the distinguished son of a distinguished father, and virtually the lone survivor of that ancient race of theatrical producers who kept the drama alive and flourishing on both sides of the Atlantic when the living theater was in its heyday.

Mr. Miller was about to launch a rehearsal of "Victoria Regina" in the comparatively ample esplanade on the second-floor, balcony front of the National, the stage being busily occupied by designers, directors, artisans and others primarily concerned with the proper "hanging" of the sets, adjustment of the lights and myriad other details that hedge about the presentation of a new play, only three days before the public.

An air of excitement pervaded the place. The players were "on their toes," as the saying is, with the producer personally present to direct their efforts. Miss Hayes, the star, excused from this extra bit of arduous effort on the afternoon of opening night, alone was complacent and presumably letter-perfect in her reading and depiction of the role of England's revered queen, Victoria. That is, she alone was complacent, with the single exception of Mr. Miller.

Producer Not Ruffled.

Gilbert Miller has been through the trying ordeal of play production a few times before. In his case, the occasion seems to be completely bereft of those sources of anxiety that shred the nerves and whip temperaments up to high tension.

Mr. Miller is smiling, affable, chatty and altogether the efficient and companionable executive who knows what he is about, what he wants from his company of players and how to get it with the least effort for all concerned.

Perhaps one reason is that he has just returned from the airport with Mrs. Miller—recently nominated as one of the ten best-dressed women in the world—who has arrived by plane almost within the quarter-hour to attend the premiere in the Capital of her husband's newest production. Mr. Miller confesses to a pilot's license, but lays no claim to having flown his wife into town. That was done by a professional pilot who, for the moment, also has looked in at the National on his way to his hotel. But it was his plane.

With regard to Miss Hayes' appearance in "Victoria Regina," Mr. Miller committed himself definitely.

"Houseman's play," said he, "not only is the most important play in which I ever have presented Helen Hayes, but it also is one of the most important plays in which she ever has appeared.

"'Petticoat Influence' and Molnar's 'The Good Fairy' were light, inconsequential things with a strong accent on comedy. This is the serious biographical drama of the life of a great ruler, from young womanhood to the end of her reign. There is something substantial, genuine and infinitely moving here."

Is Fond of Washington.

Washington, it may be said, is one of the favorite world capitals in Mr. Miller's estimation. He loves the city and knows it perhaps better than either you or I. Many of his closest friendships, and those of longest standing, are here.

He inquired eagerly, for example, of our mutual friend Frank P. Morse, for many seasons affiliated with the Henry Miller productions—beginning with Charles Rann Kennedy's "The Servant in the House"—and with whom I was associated on this enduring family journal when Gilbert Miller was a frequent caller at the drama desk, prompted by a fine spirit of camaraderie rather than an urge to crash the reading columns.

With theaters actively operating both in New York and London, "Victoria Regina" is not this energetic producer's sole concern at the moment. He has other productions "on the fire"—notably "Libel," a new play by Edward Wooll, opening in the Henry Miller Theater, New York, on Friday night.

Mr. and Mrs. Miller will be Washington guests throughout the current week, and a very fine fillip their presence will lend to the Capital's theater season, too.

It is important to local theatergoers to know that to compensate for the loss of tonight's performance by Miss Hayes and her company, by reason of the star's broadcast over WRC, a special matinee performance of "Victoria Regina" will be given on Friday afternoon. Seats for this extra matinee performance will be on sale at the box office beginning today. Prices will range from $1.10 to $2.75, including the Federal tax.

"Road" Is Still There.

While Helen Hayes is perfecting "Victoria Regina" for its New York premiere in the Broadhurst Theater the night after Christmas, Katharine Cornell enters her final week of one-night stands prior to repeating her "Romeo and Juliet" for a two weeks' engagement in the Martin Beck Theater, beginning next Monday.

The theaters Miss Cornell is playing this week represent a fair cross-section of what "the road" of one-nighters is these days. She is presenting the Shakespeare tragedy in all manner of auditoriums, tabernacles, convention halls and whatnot.

In Toledo, Thursday night, she will appear in a motion picture theater, the Paramount, leased for the occasion.

The seating capacity for the week aggregates 14,242, the Paramount Theater in Toledo being the largest of the lot, with a total capacity of 3,406—about the size of Loew's Fox in this city.

Miss Cornell, by the way, is up to her old tricks. On Monday night, December 9, in the Shrine Auditorium in Des Moines, Iowa, she played to the largest gross receipts she so far has drawn in "Romeo and Juliet"—$8,076 in a single performance.

Playgoers, it is interesting to note, came from six States—Nebraska, South Dakota, Minnesota, Illinois, Missouri and Iowa—to see her performance in the role of Juliet.

So there is no "road," eh?

It is a strange and tragic coincidence that the mysterious—up to time of writing, at least—death of Thelma Todd should occur while she and Patsy Kelly, her comedy co-star, are doing a brief bit of clowning for the issue of "Screen Snapshots" being shown currently on Washington screens. The cafe bit is done at Miss Todd's Hollywood cafe, near which her body was found in her motor-car. Interesting, I repeat, but just a little gruesome, too.

"Hold Your Horses" Again!

It is constantly being impressed upon the drama desks of the National Capital that this here, now, indoor, fambly circus, that Divisional Manager Carter T. Barron is attempting to keep a secret, really is going to be some show!

Lacking only the canvas "big top" and the tan-bark under foot, this Yuletide novelty, scheduled to open on the stage at Loew's Fox Theater on Friday, seems to be the real McCoy, as we say in the back room.

Furthermore, it has recently leaked out that Prof. Phil Lampkin, the fork-handed maestro at the Fox, is quietly plotting to steal a little of Paul Whiteman's stuff from "Jumbo," the Billy Rose theatrical Gargantua at the Hippodrome in New York.

Paul makes his entrance and does most of his directing on the comparatively comfortable saddled back of a horse. Phil is going to do the same thing.

That is to say, he is if the course of matutinal sprouts he has been going through of late have the proper and expected results.

Like "Poodles," Perhaps?

Prof. Lampkin, or so one hears, has been sneaking out of the apartment too early for any regular orchestra conductor these past several days caparisoned like one of the Hannefords. Everybody has been wondering what it is all about.

Well, it is all about Prof. Phil's getting acquainted with the equine teammate for the circus business to a degree that will insure his not being tossed off the stage and through Mr. Delphey's kettle-drum, and such, at the first performance. Or any other performance, as far as that is concerned.

The circus, so Mr. Barron still is trying to keep secret, will be like that—packed with surprises and "big time" stuff from the three rings and five platforms customarily encountered only under cloth.

So now you know—but don't give it away. The boys are trying awfully hard to keep all this sort of thing out of the papers!

Oh, yeah?

Another oddly tragic coincidence piles itself on top of the note of Miss Todd's death on this desk. No longer ago than last Friday morning we mentioned something about Sydney S. Cohen, national president of the Motion Picture Theater Owners of America when Jimmie Walker, recently repatriated former Mayor of New York City, accompanied the M. P. T. O. A. membership to Washington as chief legal counsel.

That mention was no more than in type when word was received of the death of Mr. Cohen in the Ansonia Hotel, in New York, where he lived with his daughter, Dorothy Louise, and son, Richard Sydney, who survive him. Mrs. Cohen died in 1918.

Sydney passed on at just about the time I was recalling his junket to Washington to Jimmy at the Union Station on Thursday afternoon.

Life and death are like that.

Learn-One-Thing-Each-Day Note.

And how do you pronounce "regina?"

O-ho! Well, I didn't believe it, either, until somebody else looked it up!

Magnificent and moving in the simple dignity of its delineation of the heart and mind of Victoria, Queen of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland and Empress of India, "Victoria Regina," last evening marked another distinguished achievement in the brilliant stellar carrer of Helen Hayes, a new triumph for the productional genius of Gilbert Miller and a glorious addition to the present season's growing list of thoughtful and impressive dramas.

Picking up the thread of the late Queen Victoria's life upon her accession to the throne of England at the age of 18, in 1837, the three acts and ten scenes of this excellently articulated Laurence Housman play trace the course of her life and reign to the Jubilee Celebration of 1897, a span of 60 momentous years that outline with sometimes startling frankness and always with accuracy and understanding the private and public concerns of one of history's most beloved and most harried sovereigns.

Follows Cumulative Course.

The intensity of her love for Albert, the German cousin who became Prince Consort in the face of a considerable opposition at court; the human frailties, the jealousies, the impetuous whimsies and the courage of a youthful and frequently perplexed queen occupy the early developments of the story. The second act takes on a little more of the adult manifestations of the responsibilities of an imperial, but not imperious, rulership, and the third reveals the aged, kindly and understanding monarch, reflected in the golden glow of more than half a century of sagacious and successful rule—a queen revered by the world, beloved by her subjects and rich in the wisdom of years.

This is a transition that Helen Hayes encompasses with almost unbelievable conviction and with a cumulative dramatic power that stamps her present portrayal as one of the most skillfully limned she ever has brought to the boards.

One contemplates the girlish, early passages of "Victoria Regina" with a mounting conviction that the star never will be able to assume the lineaments of the Victoria whose likeness is indelibly fixed in the mind of every member of the present generation of theatergoers. No greater fallacy could be assumed.

By some miracle of make-up, intonation and queenly demeanor, Miss Hayes becomes the living embodiment of the gracious monarch who so dominated the epoch in which she lived and ruled that it still bears her name.

Soars to New Heights.

Even beyond the blank verse grandeur of "Mary of Scotland," Helen Hayes in this play of far simpler pattern soars to new heights of histrionic perfection.

It is a performance that impels such respectful attention, such appreciative acclaim and such unbridled admiration that the countless curtain calls that follow the conclusion of the last act seem meager recognition of a huge task brilliantly accomplished by a diminutive actress with a prodigious sense of theater.

In fashioning his play, Mr. Housman has contributed another valuable exhibit to the recent trend toward humanizing and clarifying the commanding figures of history and fiction.

Maxwell Anderson started the vogue, perhaps, with "Valley Forge;" Katharine Cornell has extended it with her beautifully illuminated "Romeo and Juliet," and now Miss Hayes brings within the emotional understanding of every attentive auditor the simple character of a queen so nearly contemporary as to deserve the enlightened understanding of her human fallibilities that "Victoria Regina" inspires.

Investiture Is Aid.

It is due not entirely to the expertness of the star and her associates in roles of prime importance that "Victoria Regina" exerts so irresistible an appeal as a drama of visual as well as emotional completeness.

Mr. Miller's production is one calculated to revive nostalgic memories of the rococo magnificence of the era that is known as "Victorian."

Not a scene of the ten but is mounted with complete verisimilitude and an understanding attention to detail that add appreciably to the rounded effect of a play as distinctive in the character of its investiture as Max Gordon's recent production of Helen Jerome's dramatization of Jane Austen's "Pride and Prejudice," to cite a convenient example.

The value of the superlatively excellent cast that has been assembled for Miss Hayes' support, however, is not to be underwritten. Vincent Price, making his first appearance on the American stage—and with only one or two other roles to his credit abroad, as a matter of fact—plays the role of the Prince Consort with a mounting efficiency and charm that convert the part into a fitting companion-piece to Miss Hayes' queen.

A particularly illuminating and touching scene in the last act is played by Miss Hayes and George Zucco, in the role of Benjamin Disraeli, Earl of Beaconsfield, the prime minister who shared so fully Victoria's unveiled displeasure over the official behaviors of both Prime Ministers Palmerston and Gladstone.

A Brilliant First Night.

Lady Muriel and Lady Grace, not omitting the Duchess of Sutherland and Lady Jane, of the imperial court are handsomely played by Mary Heberden, Renee Cacredy, Cherry Hardy and Helen Trenholme. Then there are George Macready, as the unsuccessful suitor, Prince Ernest; James Woodburn in the brief but priceless role of John Brown, Scot attendant at Balmoral, and James Bedford as Mr. Oakley. It would be no more than the part of simple justice to mention every member of the cast for commendable performance.

Last night's Capital premiere of "Victoria Regina" was under the auspices of the Smith College Club of Washington and attracted probably the most brilliant audience of the season, including Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, wife of the President; Mr. Miller, the producer, and Mrs. Miller; Burns Mantle, noted New York critic, and the flower of Washington's social, official and business circles—a circumstance that added luster to a memorable evening in the theater at its best.

Walter Bush Dies; Was Picture Operator

Walter W. Bush, 40, one of the earliest motion picture operators in Washington, died Sunday at Sibley Hospital from pneumonia. He lived at 734 Third street northwest.

Bush had been a projection room operator at the Fox Theater since it was opened. He began his career 25 years ago as the operator at the Lafayette Theater, which at that time was next to the National Theater, on E street. Later he was the operator at the Strand.

Bush was a native of Washington. He was educated at the Seaton School and the Augusta Military Academy. He was a master of the National Lodge of Masons and a former vice president of the Motion Picture Machine Operators Union, Local No. 224.

Funeral services will be held at 9 a. m. today from W. W. Chambers' funeral home, 1400 Chapin street northwest.

Navy Yard to Entertain 50 Children Christmas

Plans for the Navy Yard's Christmas party for 50 needy children, brought to the yard on Christmas Day each year by the Salvation Army, were announced yesterday.

The children will arrive at the yard at 11 a. m., listen to music, have dinner, see some movie cartoons and then receive toys from Santa Claus. J. P. Casey, chief storekeeper, has made most of the arrangements, and enlisted men are sponsoring the party.

Broadcast Opens Drive For Police Yule Tree

Capt. Harvey G. Callahan, First Precinct, last night opened the annual drive for the Police Christmas tree party with a broadcast at 6 p. m. from a local station. He appealed in behalf of the committee, headed by Capt. Joseph C. Morgan, of the Fifth Precinct, for baskets of food to be given to the needy on Christmas Eve at the National Guard Armory, Pennsylvania avenue and Sixth street northwest.

Phil Furr Wins Decision Over Wilson to Retain District Title

Champion Pummels Foe in Late Rounds

By Bill McCormick.

PHILLIP FURR, the fitful fisticuffian, successfully defended his welterweight championship of the District by neatly converting Bob Wilson into an almost inanimate chopping block in the closing rounds of a 15-round encounter last night.

Some 2,500 fans wedged themselves into Joe Turner's Arena to view the proceedings. Many, many more potential customers were turned away when the fire department authorities insisted enough for safety were present.

The bout opened slowly as the contestants seemed to have formed a mutual admiration society, but it reached a blasting climax about midway and wound up excitingly enough as Furr suddenly shifted his attack from Bobby's head to his body to settle the matter decisively.

While he was firing almost exclusively at Wilson's head, the ultimate winner missed as often as a boxing writer's predictions. When Furr finally decided to lay down a barrage on the broader target presented by Bobby's brisket, he missed very little—and the result proved exceedingly painful to Wilson.

Furr Well Punched.

The winner did not escape unscratched, however one-sided the finish may have been. His nose was punched into the size and hue of a prize tomato in the early rounds and Wilson landed just enough lefts to the proboscis thereafter to keep it well tinted and well enlarged.

The first half-dozen rounds were very boring as the lads fiddled like Neros while the audience burned. In the seventh, the assemblage commenced the rhythmic handclapping which is literally translated from the prize ring parlance as "lousy."

The anti-ovation stung Furr into action—very furious action—in which he swung wild swings in the general direction of Wilson's conk, enough of which landed to win him the round very decisively as Bob was staggered repeatedly.

From that point on, Wilson took only one round—the eleventh—on The Post score sheet. After practically punching his hands out of shape against Wilson's brick-colored thatch, Phillip suddenly discovered that he could hit his opponent much easier in the midsection, and that the blows had almost twice as much effect.

Wilson on Verge.

From then on Furr never was in danger, but Bobby was time and time again on the verge of kissing the canvas for the long, long count. The only semblance of a knockdown came in the twelfth round as Furr rammed home a long right to the head which sent the half-exhausted Wilson gravitating toward the canvas. Bob stiffened his knees, however, and escaped a knockdown as Furr stepped back for some reason, allowing him to regain his balance.

Knockouts were plentiful in the five four-round preliminaries which

A. A. U. Court Group Will Gather Tonight

A meeting of the District A. A. U. basketball committee will be held tonight at 7:30 o'clock at the Washington Boys Club. Winfree Johnson, chairman, announces that plans for registration of A. A. U. players will be discussed. Johnson recently suggested to the National A. A. U. basketball committee that funds be provided for an Eastern team in the National A. A. U. championships at Denver.

The Washington delegate proposed an Eastern zone playoff, the winner to be sent to Denver. A third proposal made by Johnson was to the effect that the National A. A. U. champion and runner-up represent the A. A. U. in playoffs for the right to represent the United States in the Olympics. In addition to committee members, the Heurich, Government and Sunday School leagues are asked to be represented.

Directors of Browns Re-elect Official Staff

St. Louis, Dec. 16 (AP)—Setting at rest a larger-than-usual crop of off-season rumors, directors of the St. Louis Browns met today and re-elected all of the club's officers.

Louis B. von Weise again was named president, with L. C. McEvoy, first vice president and business manager; Walter E. Fritsch, second vice president; William R. Cady, treasurer, and Willis E. Johnson, traveling secretary.

Reports chiefly had been that McEvoy would not be renamed, but there were rumors of other drastic office changes.

Louis Voted Year's Best Athlete

Called 'Uncrowned King of Heavies;' Little Rated Second.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 16.—A clear head and shoulders above every amateur and professional athlete in the land during 1935 stands Joe Louis, black heavyweight sensation. The might of the 21-year-old Detroit boxer was revealed in the fifth annual Associated Press poll tabulated here today.

The immobile colored boy who brought the $1,000,000-gate back to boxing with his dynamite punch easily tops all masculine athletic performers for individual honors to become the first fighter ever to receive the honor. Former winners in yearly order were Pepper Martin, Gene Sarazen, Carl Hubbell and Dizzy Dean.

A year ago the average sports writer couldn't spell his name, yet in 1935 the Detroit Bomber won a 3-to-1 verdict over William Lawson Little, jr., king of the amateur linksmen and runner-up in the poll for the second time in a row.

Slightly Better Race.

Little made a slightly better race this year, however. The 1934 total was 268 points for the elder Dean and 113 for the golfer. Today's score shows that Louis recevied 182 points to Little's 129.

Most surprising item in the verdict of the Nation's leading sports authorities is the fact that this colored boy born in the tall woods of Alabama isn't even a champion and won't be accorded a try at James J. raddock's title until next September.

Most sports editors and writers contributing their views emphasized their high rating of Louis was due to his tremendous influence on boxing gate receipts as well as on his sensational knockout record.

Several rated him as the "uncrowned king" of the heavyweights,

Rassling Fans Learn to Hate Chief Chewaki, George's Rival

By George Considine.

WHEN the indoor wrestling season started a fortnight ago at Promoter Joe Turner's Arena, quite a crowd turned out to see Danno O'Mahoney, the world champion. Well, the crowd saw more than just a world rassle champion that night. It saw Chief Chewaki.

Now, in private life, Chief Chewaki is a pleasant, sociable sort of person. But the crowd didn't see him in private life. Carrying on as he did in one of the preliminaries, he was seen as the personification of all that is wrong, all that is to be despised. That was the chief's intention and he was profoundly successful.

In business the man is villainous to the nth degree. He is unfair, unjust, brutal. He works with the abandon of a huge gorilla gone berserk. Robert Louis Stevenson's Mr. Hyde immediately becomes little Lord Fauntleroy when compared with Chief Chewaki, the rassler.

Now the natural reaction on the part of the wrestling fan to Chief Chewaki, the rassler, is an overwhelming desire to see a Tarzan-like hero, brave, strong, stanch and true come along and knock the daylights out of the rowdy redskin, known as Chief Chewaki, the rassler.

Two weeks ago, when the chief performed in preliminary support to O'Mahoney, he battered and fouled his way to victory, much to the disgust of the fans. Everybody went back last week for the express purpose of seeing Chewaski get his ears pinned back. But once again he outraged the customers by illegally slugging his opponent into the land of tweet-tweet.

Next Thursday, we feel safe to predict, Chief Chewaski will gladden the hearts of his legion of professional enemies by concluding his match horizontally, if you get what we mean. And to complete the happy picture, a Tarzan-like hero, brave, stanch and true, will have his hand raised in victory. Once again virtue will be triumphant in the person of Handsome Ed (Don) George.

Aside from the allegorical angle, there is another and sublimely more important reason why the Turner Arena should be jammed to the bulging point next Thursday night. A generous percentage of the gate receipts will be turned over to The Washington Post Christmas fund, which will aid Santa get to places on Christmas morning—places he couldn't possibly reach otherwise.

This Morning...

With Shirley Povich

JIMMY BRADDOCK, who went into the ring on the long end of the 10-to-1 odds in his bout with Max Baer, is fated to be no less a long shot when he crawls through the ropes against Joe Louis some time next summer in New York's fistic extravaganza of 1936.

POVICH.

The odds against Braddock are rocketing with each preliminary test of Louis. In his every battle, the Detroit Negro is justifying his promise of greatness, if, indeed, he is not already great. Braddock will be the second heavyweight champion in history to defend his title as the underdog in the betting. The first was Max Schmeling, who was the possessor of a synthetic title gained while sitting down and yapping successfully that Jack Sharkey had fouled him. In the return match, Sharkey was a pronounced betting favorite.

No bout in the immediate offing is calculated to cause a revision downward in the odds on a Louis-Braddock fight. Before he encounters the champion, Louis will meet Izzy Gastanaga, Charley Retzlaff and Max Schmeling in bouts already contracted and none of this crew figures to embarrass him to any great degree.

Schmeling, of course, will be his severest test—maybe the hardest test Louis has confronted since he zoomed out of the amateur ranks a year ago into the forefront of the world's heavyweights despite his lack of a title thus far. Gastanaga and Retzlaff represent only just so much tonnage to be cut down and knocked over. Retzlaff reached his peak when he knocked out Marty Gallagher in a preliminiay to the Schmeling-Stribling fight at Cleveland six years ago and Gastanaga is still regarded as a semifinal fighter in New York.

SCHMELING may hold the answer to the still-mooted question of whether Louis can take it. The Negro has not yet been hit flush on the chin. Max Baer reached him with a long right hand to the side of the face that Louis shook off, but neither Primo Carnera nor Paulino were able to lay a right-hand punch against Louis' jaw. Schmeling, however, is a sharpshooter compared to the round-house swinging Baer and the pawing Carnera, and if the Negro can, indeed, be hit, Schmeling is the man who looms as the author of the first right-hand punch to catch him squarely.

But it is difficult to reconcile Schmeling's record with any kind of an impressive fight against the clever, shifty, hard-hitting Louis. The manner in which the comparative novice, Steve Hamas, battered Schmeling for most of 15 rounds in Philadelphia, augurs ill for the German's success against Louis. Since that engagement, Schmeling has evened the score, knocking out Hamas and also Walter Neusel, but in his most recent outing he was unable to tip Paulino, who was floored by the first Sunday punch that Louis unloosed.

Clumsier guys than Louis have had no difficulty in reaching Braddock's chin. At one point during his career Braddock was being knocked down and knocked out regularly by dime-a-dozen fighters. Nobody ever accused the present champion of being a boxer until he outfumbled a supine and disinterested Max Baer. Braddock's forte was his punch. It is inconceivable that he could blossom as a great boxer within a stretch of a few months, particularly when he never evidenced any ability in that direction.

But Braddock will carry into the ring one item that neither Baer, Carnera or Levinsky was equipped with against the Negro. That, of course, is a native courage that impelled him to fight his way up from the relief roles to the world championship. Courage in this instance, however, figures to net him only the severe and complete beatings that Louis' jittery opponents escaped by grace of the referees' intercession.

In Short—

Max Marek, one of the two men who beat Louis in the amateur ranks, was in the semifinal bout when Louis stopped Paulino . . . only one man has stayed the limit in the same ring with Louis in his three New York fights . . . he is Referee Arthur Donovan, who officiated in all three bouts . . . Louis attended the Wilberforce-Morgan game for the colored football championship at Wilberforce, Ohio, last month and was paid $1,500 as his share of the gate . . . a set-back in any of his three fights before he meets Braddock, would cost Louis his share of what would be a million-dollar gate . . . when Braddock crawls through the ropes to meet the Negro, no man in the history of the ring will be a greater sentimental favorite than the long-shot champion . . . Paulino still insists that he never knew what hit him when Louis knocked him down with a right, but even if he read only the Spanish papers, he had plenty of warning . . . Dempsey says he wants to see Louis knocked down and cut up before he passes final judgment on him as a great fighter . . . the only apparent chance he has of seeing that brought about is turning the clock back 15 years and doing the job himself.

G. U., Temple In League Opener

Clash Here Tomorrow; Catholic U. Is Host to Duke Quintet.

BASKETBALL hits its preholiday peak tomorrow night; Temple invades to help Georgetown open the Eastern Conference championship race while Catholic University entertains Duke at Brookland. George Washington, meanwhile, opens the week's campaign tonight at Richmond.

It will be another of those good big teams, as portrayed by Temple, against a good little team, speaking of Georgetown, when these two rivals get together on the Tech High School court. Temple boasts a combination averaging 6 feet 2 inches, while the Hoya courtmen, with few exceptions, are universally small.

Meyer Bloom, sophomore tap-off artist, stands 6 feet 5, and will be in the Owls' starting line-up, but Coach Jim Usilton has another even taller man available in Bob Chapman, a 6-foot 8-inch youngster. Mike Petroskey, Georgetown's rookie center, will be at a decided disadvantage against either, since he is only 6 feet 2.

Georgetown has won only one of its ten games with Temple, losing both engagements last winter. The same team that started against Western Maryland last week will start tomorrow.

Basketball practice virtually has been suspended at Catholic University now that the football team has resumed work. Capt. Bernie Lieb, Morrissey and Whitty are the only carsity courtmen practicing, since Hermie Schmarr, Zeke Brown, Bill Adamaitis, "Irish" Carroll, Joe Yanchulis and Sam Pagano are with the grid team. "Ace" Parker, Duke football star, will appear with the dribblers against Catholic tomorrow.

G. W. High Five Wins From Mt. Rainier, 35-23

A fast finish in the last three minutes of play gave George Washington High of Alexandria a 35-to-23 victory over Mount Rainier High last night on the latter's court. Mount Rainier had a lead of 22-21 with only three circuits of the minute hand to go but the Virginians opened up with a basket barrage which carried them to a convincing triumph. Bennie Burrell, forward, was the stand-out for George Washington but Tilly Scott, the Mount Rainier guard, led both teams with 15 points.

Sam Snead Paces M. A. Golf Players

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Coral Gables, Fla., Dec. 16.—Sam Snead, young professional at Hot Springs, Va., shot an even par 71 today to head the Middle Atlantic golf contingent in the $10,000 Miami-Biltmore classic with a 217 total for 54 holes.

Ralph Beach, of Suburban Baltimore, scored a 73, and has a 219 total, while Bobby Cruickshank, famous Richmond pro, added a 75 to his 145 for a 220.

Roland Mackenzie, Washington, lone eagle, shot a 76. His total is 224.

Morton McCarthy, of Norfolk, Middle Atlantic champion, has 229.

Turner Shoots A 66 To Take Miami Lead

By the Associated Press.

CORAL GABLES, Fla., Dec. 16.—Young Ted Turner smacked them straight down the middle of the Miami Biltmore golf course to forge ahead in the $10,000 open today with a 66 for the par 71 layout that shattered the tournament record set by Willie Macfarlane in 1933.

The 27-year-old Pine Valley, N. J., professional's 5-under-par performance, 2 strokes better than the 68 which gave him the lead on the opening day, made his 54-hole total 209, 2 strokes atop the crack field.

In second place, at 211, were Horton Smith, Oak Park, Ill., yesterday's leader, who added 72 today to his 36-hole total of 139, and the veteran Frank Walsh, Chicago campaigner, whose 69, 2 under standard, was added to the 142 that he finished with yesterday.

Second to Turner in supplying the day's drama, however, was none other than Macfarlane, the same old-timer from Tuckahoe, N. Y., who won the 1933 event.

First Nine in 31.

Macfarlane toured the first nine today in 31, 4 under par, chipping in thrice for birdies, and turned with an even chance of matching Turner's record. His back nine, however, was only par, giving him 67 for the day, 213 for the 54 holes and fourth place in the standing.

Tragedy of the day was furnished by John Milutic, Youngstown, Ohio, machine-like 22-year-old golfer, playing his third tournament, who put together two steady subpar 70s to trail Horton Smith by 1 stroke yesterday.

A cabbage palm helping guard the ninth hole caught Milutic's long, straight tee shot and before the former caddy could pound it out of the rough tree bark, chip to playing position and hole out, he had 6 for the par 4 hole.

After that, "everything went wrong," and he finished with 75, making his 54-hole total 215.

Behind Four Leaders.

One stroke better than Milutic and just behind the four leaders were John Revolta, P. G. A. champion and pre-tournament favorite, whose brilliant 68 today helped redeem two days of mediocre golf, and George Smith, Chicago, who played well to get 69, 2 under par.

Bunched with Milutic at 215 were Ky Laffoon, Chicagoan, who had 69 today, and Bruce Coltart, Wood Crest, N. J., who slipped back to 74.

While the 62 professionals who qualified yesterday battled for $2,500 top money in the sport's richest tournament, 11 amateurs questing after the Henry L. Doherty Trophy found young Henry Russell, home-town boy, pacing them for the second successive day. Russell had 223 for the 54 holes, with Carl Dann, jr., Orlando, Fla., 4 strokes back.

Before the tournament began, golfing veterans had pointed out the quiet, slender, 27-year-old Turner, winter professional at Pinehurst, N. C., as the lad to watch in this tournament. Mostly they got laughs, for the entries included the country's top names. He showed them today.

Allen Downs Natalie In World Cue Match

New York, Dec. 16 (AP).—Bennie Allen, Kansas City veteran, chalked up his second victory in the world pocket billiard championship tournament today, defeating Pasqualie Natalie of Chicago, 125 to 100, in 27 innings. Allen has lost four games. The defeat was Natalie's third in six matches.

Rudolph Wins to Enter Tie for Billiard Lead

New York, Dec. 16 (AP).—Erwin Rudolph, of Cleveland, former champion, tonight defeated Frank Taberski, of Schenectady, N. Y., 125 to 63, in ten innings, in a world's pocket billiards championship match.

Rudolph's victory put him in a triple tie with Jimmy Caras and George Kelly with four wins and one defeat.

Nats, Sixth in 1935 Standings, Led League in Number of Hits

Washington 2d in Team Averages

Also Left Most Men on Bases; Myer Leader; Five Above .300.

ADDITIONAL evidence that "they don't pay off on base hits" was revealed in the announcement yesterday of the official 1935 American League batting averages, wherein it is recorded that the sixth-place Washington club led all the rest in the number of hits made.

Another dubious distinction earned by the Nats last season is the championship for leaving men on bases. One thousand, three hundred and five times Washington runners languished on base, waiting in vain for a teammate to propel them home.

The pitiful pitching received by the Washington club is reflected in the team batting averages. Despite an average of .285, the second best team figure in the league, the Nats were barely able to escape seventh place. The champion Detroit Tigers appropriately led all teams at bat with an average of .290.

Washington made 1,591 hits to top all clubs in that respect—18 more than the Tigers and Indians, who were deadlocked for second honors.

The announcement of the league figures stamp Buddy Myer's batting championship as official. The Washington captain, with his .349 average, bolstered by four hits on the final day of the season, wrested the title from Joe Vosmik by a 1-point margin. Myer's figure was the lowest to lead the league in 27 years.

Myer was one of the five Washington regulars to hit more than .300. Cecil Travis finished with a .318 average, Johnny Stone amassed .315, Jake Powell hit .312 in his first major league season, and Cliff Bolton boasted .304 at the finish.

Advising Anna Wins Tropical Feature

10,000 Greet Return of Racing

5-Year-Old Mare Runs Steady Race Under Pollock to Win.

By the Associated Press.

TROPICAL PARK, Fla., Dec. 16. While more than 10,000 shrieking fans looked on, the 5-year-old mare Advising Anna, in the Western silks of Haughton & West, gamely held on to the wire to win the Coral Gables Handicap, one mile banner attraction of the Florida turf season's inaugural program. Making all her own pace under the perfect rating of Jockey J. "Red" Pollard, the brown daughter of Blondin streaked the eight furlongs in 1:38 1-5, one second behind Sea Fox's track record.

Chasar, a Crusader gelding that had shown very fast works for Owner L. E. Komorous, failed by a neck in his quest of the $795 winner's share of the purse. A length and a half behind came A. Rosasco's Dowdy Dell to be third.

Robert Robertson's Lynx Eye, favorite in the field of six, was a length out of the picture after threatening around the final bend. Advising Anna, which had been expected to close favorite, paid $7 for $2.

Dwyer Felicitated.

William V. Dwyer, guiding light of the Gables plant, was congratulated on all sides for the great transformation of the "friendly track." A more perfect day could not have been arranged. The remodeled home of the host organization, while not quite up to the larger grandeur of Hialeah Park, presented a beautiful tropical setting for the opening of Florida's 97-day season with a broiling sun beating down on the enthusiastic welcoming throng. Dave Sholtz, Governor of Florida, was unable to attend the festivities because of a political tour, but he was represented by Chairman Carl G. Rose of the State racing commission and his associates. Young Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, leading money-winning owner of the year, was one of the most interested spectators.

The new American totalisator was roundly praised and proved a big modern improvement over the old mutuels arrangement.

Advising Anna opened up a daylight advantage over Sunanair and put that colt, a 2-year old, away after a half mile. Chasar, well back in the early running, circled the leaders rounding out of the backstretch and set sail for the ultimate winner. Pollard did a beautiful job of holding Advising Anna together and the courageous mare beneath him refused to be passed, even drawing away slightly in the last few strides. Dowdy Dell flashed up on the inside in the short, 1-furlong stretch but could not make the grade while disposing of Lynx Eye for the short end of the purse.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—JOAN D., $6.80, $4.10, $2.70; CICARY, $22.30, $10.10; KEOKEE, $3.40.

JOAN D. was much the best. She was allowed to rate along to the top of stretch, where she ran into lead, drew out, but was doing her best to win. CICARY ran a splendid race and might have won but for running out on stretch turn. KEOKEE broke alertly, showed good speed and made a game effort. VITOPOL was outrun to the stretch, where she came with a rush and finished fast. FANLE, well up in the early part, stopped badly in final furlong. SPARKLING LADY had no mishap.

SECOND RACE—Five and one-half furlongs. Purse, $600; allowances. For 2-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place, easily. Went to post at 2:45. Off at 2:46½. Time, 1:06 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—DON CREOLE, $7.50, $3.10, $2.90; GLORY GREENOCK, $2.40, $2.30; MUSCLE IN, $5.50.

DON CREOLE, perfectly ridden, followed the fast early pace to the final furlong where he was in front to the outside and got up to win by final nod. GLORY GREENOCK was sent into a long lead, displayed good speed, but weakened in last 20 yards. MUSCLE IN was hustled along all the way and ran good game race. POLLY REIGH broke slow, lacked early speed, but closed some ground on turn, then stopped badly. BOMBASTIC and AUTOWIN were both outrun.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs; purse, $500; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:19. Off at 3:22½. Winner, J. E. Smallman's ch. c. (4), by Prince of Umbria—Helen Drake. Trained by G. Alexandra. Value to winner, $375; second, $75; third, $40; fourth, $10. Time, 1:12 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—PRINCE DRAKE, $17.50, $7.50, $4.70; BELLE GRIER, $4.90, $3.50; SCREEN, $6.50.

PRINCE DRAKE ran a splendid race. He broke fast, was sent to the front with a rush, displayed good speed and gamely stalled off all challenges, winning under a drive. BELLE GRIER broke slow and trailed far back, but came with a rush in stretch. SCREEN, well up all the way, ran good race. STRICKEN closed a big gap. DORNOCH ran good race and is worth nothing. STAROGAN had speed for three furlongs, then quit. M. J. BRENNAN lacked speed.

FOURTH RACE—One mile. Purse, $500; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start bad. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 3:52. Off at 3:52½. Winner, M. Simmons' ch. g. (6), by Spanish Prince II—Kitten. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $375; second, $75; third, $40; fourth, $10. Time, 1:39 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—EL PUMA, $12.50, $5.00, $4.00; DRUSUS, $3.20, $2.70; PAYRACK, $7.30.

EL PUMA moved up very fast in last half mile. He was taken to the outside, ran into lead entering stretch, drew away and won easily. DRUSUS was kept on the inside for entire trip and held on gamely. PAYRACK displayed keen speed for seven furlongs, then tired as if short. BOOCAP came from far back and was a fast going fourth. DANCING CLOUD lacked speed and failed to respond to urging. SLAVE was practically left and galloped along back of the field.

FIFTH RACE—One mile. The Coral Gable Handicap. Purse, $1,000. For all ages. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:27. Off at 4:27½. Winner, Haughton & West's br. m. (5), by Blondin—Henrietta. Trained by E. Haughton. Value to winner, $795; second, $175; third, $75; fourth, $25. Time, 1:38 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ADVISING ANNA, $7.00, $4.80, $4.30; CHASAR, $4.80, $4.60; DOWDY DELL, $5.80.

ADVISING ANNA broke very fast, was sent to the front going into first turn and, perfectly rated along, stood long drive gamely and right at end was going away again. CHASAR was allowed to drop far out of it, went up on the outside and closed with a rush. DOWDY DELL was on the inside in last half mile and held on well. LYNX EYE moved up gamely circling out of back stretch, but tired badly in final drive. GOLDEN ROCK II ran a fair race. SUNANAIR had speed for half a mile, then dropped out of all contention.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $600; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, easily. Went to post at 4:58. Off at 4:58½. Winner, W. Waterman's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BRANDON PRINCE, $21.50, $9.20, $4.40; BIG GAWK, $4.20, $3.60; MOUNTAINY MAN, $3.60.

BRANDON PRINCE trailed field for the first half mile, was sent up on the outside, caught BIG GAWK in stretch and won going away. BIG GAWK raced VOTE BOY into defeat, assumed lead, but weakened suddenly in last sixteenth. MOUNTAINY MAN was a stout factor all the way and held on gamely. FUSCO, outrun in early part, finished very fast. VOTE BOY had plenty of speed for six furlongs, then stopped and was a very tired horse. SAINTLITE, well up in early part, stopped to a walk.

SEVENTH RACE—One mile. Purse, $500; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:28. Off at 5:35½. Winner, Nardi & Mangino's ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—OUR ADMIRAL, $26.80, $10.90, $3.90; TIGHT WAD, $4.20, $3.10; MAJOR GENERAL, $2.70.

OUR ADMIRAL got away slowly but made up ground gamely, was taken to the outside around turn, took lead entering stretch and just lasted to win. TIGHT WAD was best, but was poorly ridden. He lost ground at far turn, but finished fast. MAJOR GENERAL moved up very fast in final quarter mile. HAPPY FLAG, very mean at the gate, trailed field as usual in early part, but came with a rush. JUDGE JUDY had plenty of speed for six furlongs. SALUT D'AMOUR ran well for half a mile.

At the Post . . .

with Bill Bennings.

Tropical Park, Dec. 16.

Dear Al:

I called the roll early this afternoon. Clocker Mike and Trainer Joe answered, "present." True to form, Mike was at the station to meet us but he deserves little credit. There is one of those ball machines in the station and Mike would have been there if we were not arriving. In fact, the clocker was sort of sore when the train rolled in on time, for he said he needed another "electric buzzer" for a 600 score. Just as he shot, the train came to a halt, jarred the station and the ball rolled into the "out" hole. Mike confessed that he had used 53 nickels. He was missing after the sixth race this afternoon. I'm going to take a walk over by the station in a few minutes to see how he's making out. Well, old Tropical looks about the same. The "light breeze," as the Miami papers called it, that struck early in the fall did some damage but it would take a detective to find it now. I saw a number of familiar faces in the ticket lines this afternoon. Two winners today for the firm, but tomorrow's another day.

BILL.

First race—Creme de Menthe has the speed necessary to take advantage of the No. 1 post position. Was shipped here in excellent condition and may win at the first asking. Pretty Busy will like the abbreviated route and looms as the one to beat. Brockton for the show.

Second race—Kings Pleasure, a star in New England this fall, was disqualified after winning at Bowie. Not a standout in this field, but one that will do a lot of running under strong handling. Minton and Granny's Trade to take care of the others.

Third race—Fred Almy and General A. will battle it out for this purse, I do believe. They get in with like weight of 115 pounds and both have had brisk airings on this track. Appomattox may go well at the light weight.

Fourth race—Hi Well showed improvement during the session at Bowie and may be ready to step to a set of brackets in this company. Gets in with a light assignment. Can Takit and Dream Kiss for the place and show.

Fifth race—If Dancing Doll isn't preparing for another wake-up I believe she wil take care of these all-age sprinters. Her last Bowie effort found her in front of excellent opposition. Crowning Glory carries only 105 pounds and is dangerous. Polar Flight has been freshened.

Sixth race—Western Lad, with Wayne Wright to do the saddle work, gets my call here. I see no reason for that 115-pound assignment hindering our chances. Diverting and Bonanza to coplete the money picture.

Seventh race—Belle Fille, Black Watch and Pass Shot is the way I prefer them in the day's finale. Clocker Mike has a special here in Chaumont. You can have this one.

C., B. & Q. Votes Dividend of $2, Doubling Rate

Increase by Firestone Likely; Special and Bonus by Shoe Firm.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Dec. 16.—Directors of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad today doubled the dividend on the capital stock by declaring $2 a share, payable December 28 to stock of record December 19. The last previous payment was $1 on December 26, 1934.

Ralph Budd, president, stated that indicated net income for 1935 was around $1,500,000.

Akron, Ohio, Dec. 16 (AP).—Harvey S. Firestone, chairman of the board of Firestone Tire & Rubber Co., told stockholders today that he would recommend to the board of directors today a quarterly common stock dividend increase of 20 cents to 30 cents a share, or a rate of $1.20 a year.

Columbus, Ohio, Dec. 16 (AP).—The Julian-Kokenge Co., shoe manufacturers, paid $27,000 in bonuses today to 900 employes and declared the regular semi-annual $1 dividend and an extra 20-cent dividend amounting to $156,000, on 130,000 shares of common stock.

"Things look better for the coming year," President H. M. Lape told the annual meeting of stockholders.

Hotel Food Prices At Year's High Level

New York, Dec. 16.—November hotel food prices reached a new high level for 1935, and increased 3.32 per cent over October, according to the monthly Grinstead hotel food price index. This is the greatest single monthly increase within the last ten months.

The average of food prices paid by hotels and restaurants during November stands 9.72 per cent above that of one year ago. Important increases in the prices of poultry, seafood, fresh salads and dairy products account for the current change. Meat prices continued to decline slowly.

New York, Dec. 16 (AP).—The Amtorg Trading Corporation announced last night orders had been placed with the Radio Corporation of America for $2,000,000 worth of radio equipment and machinery for shipment to Soviet Russia.

The equipment will be manufactured in the R. C. A. plants at Camden and Harrison, N. J.

Foreign Exchange.

By the Associated Press.

The dollar was ahead of most currencies in quiet foreign exchange trading yesterday.

The British pound sterling declined ⅛ of a cent in New York to $4.92¾ and French francs yielded .00¼ of a cent at 6.61 cents.

In London the dollar was a trifle higher at 4.92⅛ to the pound sterling and in Paris the American unit was steady at 6.607 cents to the franc.

Silver Declines To 59¾ Cents, 9 Months' Low

New York Price Is 1 Cent Under Last Week's Final Figure.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Dec. 16.—The price of foreign silver was fixed by Handy & Harman today at 59¾ cents an ounce, a decline of 1 cent from the quotation posted last Friday.

Prior to the establishment of the price here cable advices reported a London quotation of 26 pence an ounce for bar silver, off 7-16 pence from Saturday's nominal price.

Today's quotation carried the price of the white metal 5⅝ cents lower since the first decline was posted one week ago today, when a reduction of ⅝ of a cent an ounce set in motion a trend that has remained uninterrupted since.

The financial community still lacked authentic information concerning the real situation behind the present unsettlement in world silver markets, although many commentators have given various interpretations. The lack of bids by the United States Treasury in London touched off the decline.

Today's price was the lowest for bar silver in the New York market since last March 23, when it sold at 59 cents an ounce.

Treasury Still Buying.

Secretary Morgenthau said yesterday that the Treasury was "still buying silver everywhere."

The Secretary explained the Treasury's absence from last Saturday's silver market as being due to the difference in time here and at the world's markets, and to the fact that most markets observed half-days. For instance, he said, the London market closed at noon when it was only 7 a. m. here.

World markets were prepared for the absence of United States support last Saturday, he said, as he had directed the Treasury's fiscal agents to notify sellers in various places that this country would stay out of the market the following day.

Stock Exchange Names Nominating Committee

New York, Dec. 16 (AP).—Adopting for the first time the revised method for drafting its nominating committee, the New York Stock Exchange today named 20 candidates for the committee which will select next year's official slate.

Seven of those named will be selected as the nominating body by open voting of the members next January. The candidates were named by the retiring nominating committee.

Stocks Drift Mostly Lower in Dull Trading; Wheat Declines.

New York, Dec. 16.—Markets felt the weight of the dying year and lacked the exaltation from Christmas that may be expected a week from now, and as a result prices were allowed to drift about in circles. Changes were irregular at the close, with the tone steadier than it was most of the time last week. Turnover in stocks of around 1,300,000 was the smallest in over two months. Too little spirit could be scraped up to bring at any time either a rally or a sharp decline. Bonds were quiet. May wheat closed ⅞ of a cent lower at 97½ cents a bushel.

Stock trading was remarkable, in these days, for its lack of variety, the narrow range of most issues, the smallness of the volume and the all-round lack of interest. Silver shares naturally followed the metal market lower, and the steel and railroad stocks were inclined to soften with the seasonal recession in the industries. A dozen stocks made up about 25 per cent of the total turnover. Those stocks were Radio, Chrysler, Nickel, Cerro de Pasco, Houdaille, Hershey, Colgate, Consolidated Textile, American Radiator, United Corporation, General Motors, Anaconda and a small-priced issue.

Only a few groups moved uniformly in either direction and price changes were mainly fractional. Coppers followed the silvers, but not so rapidly, as some of the latter dropped more than 2 points. Chrysler was firm in the motor list. Small gains were the rule in the foods and rubbers. Tobaccos, with one or two exceptions, were firm, after a bad week of decline. Accessories were mixed, Houdaille Hershey making a new high and Evans being shoved along roughly. Rails were dull, with the Northerns helped by the Burlington dividend.

The various classes of American Writing Paper and Bush Terminal, both in receiver or trusteeship, scored sharp gains. Case, Pneumatic Tool, Douglas Aircraft, Food Machinery, General Outdoor Advertising and U. S. Gypsum moved up 1 to 2 points. National Lead dropped out of the 200 class on a fall of 4 points. Waukeska Motor, a newcomer, lost more than 2 points. Steel and the industrial standbys were steady to slightly lower.

Drop in Excess Reserves.

Foreign exchanges were quiet, in view of the continued fall in silver and the dispute over Ethiopian peace terms. Francs were steady and the eastern currencies changed little. Money markets were unruffled by the considerable financial turnover incidental to the last quarterly income tax payment date. Today was one of only a moderate number of corporation dividend payments, but Government financing was calculated to bring about a fall in excess reserves at the Federal Reserve member banks.

The excess reserves which are being taken out of the market may not come back to the banks for a long period. Some calculators figure that they will not return fully until February. Such calculations do not allow for another huge wave of gold imports or unforeseen sudden and large Treasury outlays such as, for instance, payment of a cash soldiers' bonus. For the week ending Wednesday it is estimated the money markets of the country as whole will lose about $600,000,000 net, of which about $350,000,000 will be in this district.

Cash payments on bank subscriptions to new Treasury securities today reached a new high level, only about a third of the total due being paid for by deposit credits on the books of the subscribing banks. On the last previous occasion when the Treasury sold a large issue for cash something over 50 per cent of the bank subscriptions were paid directly. Cash payments reduce bank reserves by the whole amount paid. When deposit credits are used the effect is merely to increase bank reserve requirements by a percentage of the amount of the Treasury deposits so created. In central reserve cities such percentage is 13; in country districts it is only 7.

Seasonal Recession.

Over the week-end the trade news was largely a reflection of the operations attending the fag end of the year. For the second week in succession the steel industry receded, this week's decline in the operating rate, according to the estimate of the American Iron and Steel Institute, being 1.1 points to 54.6 per cent of capacity. However, a year ago the rate was 34.6 per cent, and the prospect was much more vague than it is at present. If in a depression period industry in what ordinarily is a slack season can keep the steel mills running more than half full, the situation is at least fair. As for the steel companies, they at least can make both cash ends meet at such a rate.

Holiday trade is running along at a good pace, but most of the heavy industries will show declines over the next two or three weeks. Without doubt the business community would feel far more cheerful than it has in a long time at the turn of the year were it not for the vague anxiety over this year's "borrowing" on next year. The change in the date for bringing out new automobile models has been accompanied by so much talk to the effect that increased sales this autumn were anticipating the usual spring business, that some think if truth is in that surmise, it must be that other industries may have to pay for present activity with slackness early next year.

150,000 Shares Schenley Pfd., Offered Today

Issue Underwritten by Lehman Brothers Is Priced at $100.

An issue of 150,000 shares of $100 par value 5½ per cent cumulative preferred stock of the Schenley Distilleries Corporation is being offered to the public today by Lehman Brothers, investment bankers, at $100 per share.

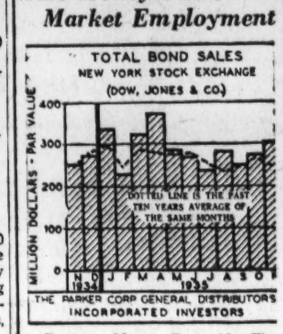
The stock is redeemable, in whole or in part, at any time upon 20 days' notice at $107.50 and accrued dividends on or prior to December 31, 19944, and thereafter at $105 per share and accrued dividends.

Of the net proceeds $9,557,740 will be used to pay bank loans of a subsidiary, Schenley Products Co., the interest on which to November 20 amounted to $57,743. The balance well be applied to a $3,500,000 construction program for increasing the distilling and warehousing facilities of certain subsidiaries and to other corporate purposes.

Hornblower Retires, 56 Years Head of Firm

New York, Dec. 16 (AP).—Henry Hornblower, member of the stock exchange firm of Hornblower & Weeks, will retire from the firm on January 1 after 56 years active participation, he announced today.

Idle Money Finds Market Employment



Boston, Mass., Dec. 16.—The recent large purchases of both stock and bonds are partly due to the pressure of idle money seeking employment. This is evidenced by the large purchases of corporation stocks, and also by the fact that corporation bonds represented 84 per cent of the total bonds sold in November.

Institute Estimates Steel Capacity 54.6%

New York, Dec. 16 (AP).—Steel production during the current week was estimated today by the American Iron & Steel Institute at 54.6 per cent of capacity, compared with 55.7 per cent in the preceding week.

Wheat Prices Turn Down as Demand Fades

Selling of Metals Depresses Curb

By the Associated Press.

New York, Dec. 16.—Additional selling in metals, together with some of the recent industrial favorites, brought a lower trend in the curb market today. Trading, however, was quiet, with oils and some specialties retaining small gains to the finish. Sales approximated 310,000 shares, compared with 409,000 last Friday.

Losses of about a point were recorded by Lake Shore at 51½, Newmont Mining at 71½, Pittsburgh Plate Glass at 95¾, Aluminum Co. of America at 85, and Hiram Walker at 31. American Cyanamid "B," Electric Bond & Share, Wright-Hargreaves and Pioneer Gold eased.

Parker Rust Proof ended 1⅜ higher at 74½, while minor improvement was shown by Gulf Oil, International Petroleum, Sunshine Mining and American Gas & Electric.

Hoover Speech Reaction Splits On Party Lines

G. O. P. Favorable, Democrats Scoff, While Borah Declines Comment.

By the Associated Press.

Political cleavage divided Capitol Hill's comment last night on Herbert Hoover's address at St. Louis attacking the New Deal relief program and suggesting a substitute.

Senator Thomas (Democrat), Oklahoma, interpreted the speech as a frank bid for the 1936 Republican presidential nomination, adding:

"I don't think much of his four-point plan. He had a chance to save the country when he was President, and if he were still President there wouldn't be any country."

Senator Schall (Republican), Minnesota, called the Hoover relief plan "a good idea," but warned that if relief were shut off suddenly it would create trouble and "an excuse for the Administration to take over the cities."

"I think the States always should have handled the relief problem," Schall asserted, "and they could have done it at 1 or 2 per cent instead of running it up to 50 per cent for administrative costs."

"Tells the Truth."

Asserting the former President "told the truth," Representative Taber (Republican), New York, added:

"One of the rawest things about the fake relief administration—and by fake I mean fake—is that they have paid no attention to relief problems but have operated on a wholly political basis.

"We have got to establish a definite policy to end spending and rid industry of the fear of a tremendous tax load that will prevent its doing business."

But Senator McGill (Democrat), Kansas, said it was the "height of being ridiculous to contend" that relief appropriations were timed with elections.

"In fact," he declared, "I know the Administration worked to a disadvantage in my State in 1934 because it was overcautious with regard to relief during the time the campaign was on.

"Of course, it must be apparent to anyone that the States and local governments had gone the limit and people who were in distress would have suffered intolerable want had not the Government taken a hand."

Charge Held "Foolish."

Representative O'Connor (Democrat), New York, said it was "foolish" for Hoover to assert politics had been played with relief funds and that "it has been so successfully disproved I'm surprised that he would repeat the charge."

"I never knew Herbert Hoover was against public works," he said. "He talks of balancing the budget when he ran up a $5,000,000,000 deficit in the last two years of his administration—more than we have actually spent altogether on relief."

Senator Borah (Republican), Idaho, mentioned as a possible Republican candidate for the Presidency, said merely: "I never comment on his speeches."

Senator Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan, another potential Republican nominee, said he did not want "to inject myself into that equation." He added:

"It is going to be a pretty busy season if I comment on all the other fellows' speeches and make my own, too."

Text of Hoover Speech

140,000 officials on the Federal payroll, not including the people on relief. The salaries of these officials alone must come to about $300,000,000 a year. It is easy to detect another $200,000,000 in pencils, typewriters, offices, automobiles, Pullman fares, etc., not to mention press releases. That is an overhead of four or five hundred million per annum. Some increase in relief was necessary, but an increase of 300 per cent in costs in the face of a 5 per cent decrease in unemployment load is significant. I will not try to figure the increased percentage in overhead.

Asked for Figures.

In confirmation of this, I have inquired as to the figures of several cities and counties. To cite one of them, the number on relief increased 5 per cent, the cost 250 per cent. The others confirm these increases.

Every community has been formed to become a conspiracy to get their share from the Federal grab-bag. And saddest of all, the responsibility of local self-government has been dulled; we are becoming a nation of prayer wheels directed to Washington.

We may well wonder why local organization of relief has been shifted to a Federal bureaucracy. Some part of it has to do with politics and yearning for sociological experiments. Jobs have been thereby found for over 140,000 new Federal officials.

If it was decided to bureaucratize relief from Washington, then every call of good government demanded that the staff be selected by nonpartisan merit tests through the Civil Service Comsion. But that service which has been built up over many years by every Prseident, was ignored and repudiated, and the spoils system substituted. You know and I know and the people know that this horde of officials has been appointed by the advice and consent of Democratic politicians.

One thing is certain. A mass of propaganda spreads over the country to the effect that relief to the unemployed originates with the New Deal and would end with the New Deal. Those in distress will not be misled. Whatever aid they receive comes not from any official or party. It comes out of the pockets of their fellow citizens. It will not end as long as there is need.

Recalls Appropriations.

The inevitable and driving purpose of any political bureaucracy is to use its powers to secure its jobs. The sudden appropriations to cities, counties and States were singularly timed to elections. And this is not the only method of making politics out of human misery.

Do you want more proofs of waste folly, chiselers, and petty corruption? You know it in your own town, city or village. Read your own newspapers, whose columns periodically reek with accounts of disorganization and waste. Their editorials cry to heaven against the use being made of relief for politics. If only the money taken from the taxpayers could go to those in distress there would be less cause for public indignation.

That administration of relief needs reform right now. It needs it in the interest of good government. It needs it in the interest of the 85 per cent of our citizens who have to pay for it. They include everybody who works. The cost of these wastes and follies is collected by hidden taxes in every package that comes from the store, or worse, we are laying it onto our children by debt. Reform is needed in the interest of the 15 per cent who are on relief, that they get better and more secure service. To the self-respecting Americans on relief these wastes and follies are a tragedy. They know it dissipates money they need. It delays their deliverance to a real job. The inspiration of relief comes from the heart, but its effectiveness must come from the head.

As the New Deal always demands alternative plans, I offer four:

1. Stop these wasteful Federal public works projects; confine them to projects which meet the needs of the Nation.

Asks Decentralization.

2. Decentralize the administration of all other forms of relief. Turn them back to the States and local communities. Do it in joint co-operation with the governors, mayors and county authorities. Enlist again the voluntary services of American men and women on a nonpartisan basis. Give such responsible committees as they create the entire determination of how it should be done. Allot to the States less than one-half the present funds being spent in the relief. Require the local authorities to find from their local funds at least 5 per cent as a check on waste. Require the State to do its share. Discharge most of the Federal officials connected with these relief agencies. The unemployed will be better cared for than they are today.

3. Do it now. That would go far to assure a clean election. But it would do more than that. It would relieve human distress which suffers enough without the poison of politics in its bread.

4. We have a further obligation beyond relief to this 10,000,000 unemployed. True relief must come from honest, productive jobs, not from public funds. Those jobs would return quickly if the currency were stabilized and this torrent of unnecessary expenditure were stopped and the budget were balanced. That would recreate confidence in the future. It would relieve the threat of inflation which sets up false recoveries. It would start men building again for the future. It would bring into action the vast amount of improvement needed in housing and in machinery, now being worn out through seven years of obsolescence. I would set free the energies of new enterprise. These people on relief have suffered enough from having playboys take America apart to see how the wheels go round.

In conclusion, I should like to say a word to the young men and women among my listeners. Some of us have not much more span of life. We have seen America grow in greatness. Except the cost of war we have seen increasing security to the average man. Our interest is for those who will carry the burden and create the glories of America after us. We will continue fighting, but you have to live the years, you have to carry America on. It is your pockets into which the Government will reach deeper and deeper if this goes on. It is you whose opportunities are being limited. I have but one suggestion. That you study the history of your country. That you survey its scene today. That you debate every phase of this Government. That you carry this debate to every street corner, every schoolhouse, every shop and every counting room. What you decide will be final for your country, for you have many votes. You will have the burdens. And may the Divine Being guide you aright.

fused. Other women echoed this sentiment, but finally it was agreed Mrs. Hert could retain the vice chairmanship and thus another contest was avoided.

Motion on Convention.

The question of adopting a call for the convention came up next and again demands were made for an executive session, this time the motion being made by E. F. Colladay, the District of Columbia committeeman, but later withdrawn.

Hamilton opposed the motion, asserting the party should not start out on the "most important campaign it has ever faced by doing anything behind closed doors." He said the questions involved in the call should be "openly and frankly discussed" and that the country and the press should not be left to "speculate and conjecture."

John Richardson, Massachusetts committeeman, laid before the committee majority and minority reports on the call. He was the sole signer of the minority report, which differed from the majority recommendation only in the matter of a basis for apportionment of delegates.

The majority report, following the rule adopted by the 1932 convention, provided that each State should have four delegates at large and that those States which returned Republican majorities in 1932 should have as a bonus three more delegates-at-large. This would have confined the bonus to Maine, Vermont, New Hampshire, Connecticut, Pennsylvania and Delaware, the only States carried by Hoover three years ago.

Delegate for Districts.

The rule further provided that there should be one delegate from each Congressional district, with a second delegate from each district which in 1932 cast 10,000 or more votes for a Republican elector or for a Republican candidate for Congress. This part of the rule, however, was the same in both reports.

The minority report provided that any State carried by a Republican Presidential candidate in the 1924, or any subsequent election should have the bonus of three extra delegates-at-large. This would have given the bonus to 42 States.

Hilles made a long speech in behalf of the adoption of the minority report. He cited several precedents where the national committee failed to adhere to the convention's rules, which he held to be "directory, not mandatory."

Hamilton joined the debate by spiritedly asserting that at the outset of the Republican campaign attacking Democratic disregard of the Constitution, he did not believe it good form "to talk about changing basic rules because of emergencies"—talk, which he said, "you hear on Capitol Hill."

Should Obey Rules.

Robert P. Burroughs, of New Hampshire, said the best argument the Republicans had against President Roosevelt was that he "had not played the game according to the rules," and that the party could not make that argument unless it adhered to its own rules.

Similar references were made by other speakers, while Iowa's committeeman, Harrison Spangler; West Virginia's Walter S. Hallanan and Ohio's Brown came to Hilles defense. Hilles demanded a rollcall on the motion to table the minority report. The result showed most of the Western and Middle Western delegations voting against him. Mrs. Calvin Gabriel cast Maryland's two votes for the minority report but the Virginia and District of Columbia members voted for the majority report, which prevailed.

After the convention date had been set R. B. Creager, Texas committeeman, came forward with the prediction that millions of Democrats would join the Republicans next year and that a welcoming hand should be extended to them. He proposed a resolution to this effect which was seconded by Requa, who declared that the Republicans "must move forward without compromise" and on the basis of "fundamentals in which there can be no compromise."

Chairman Fletcher will be ex-officio head of the committee on arrangements for the convention, it was announced last night. Others on the committee are:

The committee will meet this morning at the Mayflower Hotel to receive the check from the city of Cleveland and give preliminary consideration to plans for the convention. The committee will select its own secretary and treasurer.

TRUSTEE'S SALE OF VALUABLE ELEVEN-STORY AND BASEMENT BRICK, STONE AND CONCRETE FIREPROOF BUILDING USED FOR STORE AND OFFICE PURPOSES, LOCATED AT THE NORTHEAST CORNER OF VERMONT AVENUE AND L STREET NORTHWEST, KNOWN AS THE "VERMONT BUILDING."

With leave of court obtained on November 25, 1935, in the case of the National Realty and Securities Company, Inc., debtor, Bankruptcy No. 3297 in the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, and because of default in the terms and conditions of, and by virtue of a certain deed of trust executed by Isadore Freund and Amelia Freund, his wife, dated March 25, 1924, recorded among the land records of the District of Columbia, April 4, 1924, in Liber 5183 at folio 342, et seq., and at the request of over twenty-five per centum of the holders of the bonds secured thereby, the undersigned substituted trustee, by appointment of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, dated August 12, 1931, in Equity Cause No. 53026, will offer for sale at public auction in front of the premises on FRIDAY, DECEMBER 20, 1935, AT FOUR O'CLOCK P. M., the following described land and premises, situate in the District of Columbia, and which is described as follows: All of Lots Nine (9) and Ten (10), in Block "C" in John Daly's subdivision of lots in square Two hundred and fifteen (215), as per plat recorded in Liber N. K., folio 248 of the records of the office of the Surveyor of the District of Columbia, together being contained within the following metes and bounds, viz: Beginning for the same at the southwest corner of said lot "A" and said square, and running thence northerly along the line of Vermont avenue One hundred and thirty-one (131) feet six (6) inches to a Ten (10) foot wide alley; thence southeasterly along said alley Fourteen (14) feet eight (8) inches; thence south Twenty-eight (28) feet three and one-half (3½) inches; thence west four (4) feet; thence south Eighty-five (85) feet to L street, and thence west along said street, Sixty-two (62) feet four (4) inches to the place of beginning; together with all buildings, improvements and permanent fixtures thereon, improved by the Vermont Building located at the northeast corner of Vermont avenue and L street northwest, including all furnishings, fittings and personal property of every kind which said trustee is authorized by said deed of trust to sell and convey.

TERMS OF SALE: One-third of the purchase price to be paid in cash on or before the twentieth day of January, 1936, balance in two equal installments payable on or before one and two years from date of sale, respectively, with interest thereon at the rate of five and one-half per centum per annum from day of sale, said interest payable semiannually, and to be secured by first deed of trust upon the property sold, or all cash at the option of the purchaser. The said trustee will receive no bid from any person or corporate who shall not at or before the hour of sale, or any adjournment thereof, deposit with said trustee, as a pledge that such bidder will make a bid in case of its acceptance, a deposit of $10,000 either in cash or certified check on a bank or trust company acceptable to the undersigned trustee, made or indorsed payable to the trustee, or in lieu thereof bonds of the par value of $20,000 in form transferable by delivery, secured by said deed of trust, said bonds to have all unpaid coupons attached thereto. The deposit of any unsuccessful bidder will be returned to him immediately after the sale. The said trustee reserves the right to reject any and all bids and withdraw the property from sale. Adjustments with respect to taxes, assessments, insurance, rentals, income from operation of property, interest and all other adjustments shall be made as of the date of sale. The trustee, however, will continue to manage and operate said property and collect the income therefrom from the date of sale to date of transfer upon existing terms as set forth in said deed of trust. After settlement of said sale said trustee will not be responsible for any bills or expenses incurred in the management or operation of said property. All expenses of title examination, conveyancing, recording, revenue stamps, etc., are to be at the cost of the purchaser. Terms of sale to be complied with on or before January 20, 1936; otherwise, the trustee reserves the right to forfeit said deposit or to resell the property at the risk and cost of defaulting purchaser upon the foregoing terms, after seven days' advertisement of said resale in some newspaper published in Washington, District of Columbia, or with or without forfeiting the deposit the trustee may avail itself of any legal or equitable rights against the defaulting purchaser.

THE BUNGLE FAMILY — Recognized — By Harry J. Tuthill

Yes mother, I am enjoying the cruise, but it certainly got a bad start. I mean how boorish Monty acted when we told him about Hartford saving our lives.
Boorish? Darling, you mean bored stiff, don't you?
First your father told all about that affair...adding a few frills. Then you told it. Then both of you told it together. Oh I was so tired of hearing...
What's that?
Someone at the door.
Oh it's Cabanas.
